LYNCH LAW.

Eastman—Yes, I'm broke! Bank's suspended; what can a fellow do?

Alkali Bill—Wall, kain't tell what you'd do here, but out my way we'd suspend the banker! Savvy?

All in the Same Boat.

My aunt has a beautiful parrot which, like many others of its species, is addicted to profanity. To break the bird of this habit, my aunt would "duck" him in water every time he would swear. On an April day he had been profuse in profanity, and had received the accustomed ducking. Now, it happened that a brood of newly hatched chickens had been drenched in a shower of rain and auntie brought them into the house and placed them in the kitchen to dry, beneath the parrot, who was drying his feathers. He seemed much interested and gazed intently at the little chicks for some time, and then exclaimed:

"D——n'd little fools; been swearing, too."

JEMISON

Mr. Editor:

A few words to the people and oblige: I see in the Union where he said that certain candidates were appealing to the predjudices of the republicans to get them to vote in the Democratic Primary.

I don't think that could be any more of a prejudicing act than to try to stir up feelings between parties that had had a difficulty and had settled it. I think that very ungentlemanly. He said that I had no connection with the Moses referred to in the bullrushes. That is true, I may not, but there is one thing I thank God for, and that is that I have no connection with a party that called on a negro to open the convention with prayer, or that elected a negro delegate to the National Convention to nominate a candidate for white men to vote for.

Now Gentlemen, I don't like to enter into a newspaper controversy, but if the great SUCKER, the MESSIAH of the Union, that proposes to stir up difficulties that have been settled, wants to tackle me, come on, I am ready for you. You imported goods from Halifax or somewhere else; I don't know anything about you, but I'm ready to meet you on half-way ground; if you think you can chastize me do it and then talk about it; I challenge you to meet me in the court house and let the people of Chilton county know who is the republican SUCKER.

Yours truly,
MOSES A. KILLGORE.

NO CAUSE TO DOUBT

A Statement of Facts Backed by a Strong Guarantee

We guarantee immediate and positive relief to all sufferers from constipation. In every case where our remedy fails to do this we will return the money paid us for it. That's a frank statement of facts, and we want you to substantiate them at our risk.

They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies are unsurpassable and ideal for the use of children, old folks and delicate persons. We cannot too highly recommend them to all sufferers from any form of constipation and its evils. That's why we back our faith in them with our promise of money back if they do not give entire satisfaction. Three sizes; 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets 25 cents and 80 tablets, 50c. APPERSON.

August 16, 1828, and Feb. 12 1912, mark the beginning and the end of the earthly career of Mrs. Lucy Ann Apperson, whose maiden name was Adair. This precious woman was born near Mulberry in Autauga county, Ala., the daughter of J. F. and Nancy Adair. At the age of 22 years she was happily married to L. Samuel Apperson. Her married life was indeed a happy one. She was essentially a home builder and possessed in a marked degree those qualities that can make an earthly home seem a little spot in Paradise.

The Lord blessed her home with ten children, all of whom survive her except one.

The greater part of this good woman's married life was spent at her old home near Billingsley. She joined the Missionary Baptist church when only 16 years of age and lived a consistent member the remainder of her long and useful life—a Christian 67 years. How patient she was with the sufferings, toils and disappointments of this life, time and space forbids us tell.

It has been my great privilege to know her for about eight years. I never knew one of her age more faithful, at all times desiring to attend church service. Not ouly was her life a blessing to the church, but a grand model and a benediction to her numerous friends. Indeed a mother of Israel has fallen but the world is better for her having lived. She was suddenly taken with lagrippe and only lived a few days till the death angel visited the home of her sou, J. F. Apperson, near Billingsley, and relieved her of all this worlds sorrow and troubles.

When at 4:25 o'clock on Feb. 12 the end came and on the 13th her many many sorrowing friends and relatives gathered at the family cemetery, near her old home, to witness the last sad rites of this dear sweet mother, grand mother and great grand mother.

Lord grant that the mantle of good mothers fall on her sorrowing children, while they lean the on strong arm of Him who is able to sustain them in time of bereavement.

One who loved her.

ACTUAL STARVATION

Facts About Indigestion and Its Relief That Should Interest You.

Although Indigestion and Dyspepsia are so prevalent, most people do not thoroughly understand their cause and cure. There is no reason why most people should not eat anything they desire—if they will only chew it carefully and thoroughly. Many actually starve themselves into sickness through fear of eating very good-looking, good-smelling, good-tasting food, because it does not agree with them.

The best thing to do is to fit yourself to digest any good food.

We believe we can relieve Dyspepsia. We are so confident of this fact that we guarantee and promise to supply the medicine free of all cost to every one who will use it, who is not perfectly satisfied with the results which it produces. We exact no promises, and put no one under any obligation whatever. We are located right here and our reputation should be sufficient assurance of the genuineness of our offer.

We want every one troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia in any form to come to our store and buy a box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. Take them home and give them a reasonable trial, according to directions. Then, if not satisfied, come to us and get your money back. They are very pleasant to take; they aid to soothe the irritable stomach, to strengthen and invigorate the digestive organs, and to promote a healthy and natural bowel action, thus leading to perfect and healthy digestion and assimilation.

A 25c. package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets furnishes 15 days' treatment. In ordernary cases this is sufficient to produce a cure. In more chronic cases, a longer treatment, of course, is necessary, and depends upon the severity of the trouble. For such cases, we have two larger sizes which sell for 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. Upchurch Drug Co.

CLANTON PRESS

PUBLISHED IN THE INTEREST OF CHILTON COUNTY AND HER PEOPLE

VOL 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, APRIL 11, 1912 NO. 3

A STRONG. BUT TRUTHFUL COMMUNICATION

THE UNION TAKEN TO TASK FOR MISREPRESENTATION

The following communication was received by the editor of the Press with request that it be published. We mention the Banner merely because the writer does; personally we dislike to speak evil of the dead, our motto being. "Dice nihil mortuis bonum."

The communication is as follows:

I notice both the Union and the Banner give only about 700 votes for the primary of last Monday week for the county. If they propose to tell the truth to their readers they should have waited to know what the truth was or have said nothing. This writer saw every box opened and counted and they amounted to 884 votes as between the two candidates for County Treasurer, a large number of voters not voting for either of these two candidates which naturally would swell the vote above that number, and besides there were two beats not voting.

You republicans go ahead and hold your primary election, according to law, allowing none but qualified voters to participate, and then we are ready to meet you on the stump, in the papers or any other fair way, but when you wander off into misrepresentation as you have in this case we expect to call you down. As you have started in this campaign like you did in the last one, we will expect you to pull off your Judge Honeycutt stunt as before, also to have gall enough to say there were not any negroes in the Birmingham convention.

Democrat.

T. E. WILLIAMS THE LUCKY ONE

DECLARED NOMINEE FOR SUPERINTENDENT OF EDUCATION

ROPER, WHILE REGRETFUL IS VALIANT

It will be recalled by readers of the Press thatla st week we announced a tie vote between Messrs Howard Roper and T. E. Williams for Superintendent of Education, each having received three hundred and thirty eight votes on the official count. Both caudidates met here Saturday last and discussed the matter of the tie; each was anxious to avoid further complications and eaeh was desirous of doing that which was considered best for the interest of the party of which each is a strong adherent. They forgot self interest entirely and stated that whatever was best for the party would not only be cheerfully accepted by them, but would be, to them, a source of pleasure to accept.

Just here it may be well to repeat, that under the law, when a tie vote occurs among candidates for county office, in a primary election, it becomes the duty of the Chairman of the County Executive Committee to cast the deciding vote and to declare the nominee. This is LAW and whether a wise law or not, it is one with which all must comply; hence, there is neither rhyme or reason in anyone saying that it would have been better to have had a second primary in which the tie should have been decided.

However the two candidates went to Mr. Pinckard and stated that it would be a hardship upon them to have to return Monday to have the tie decided and requested that he make the decision then and there. In order to accommodate two gentlemen who were so willing to sacrifice personal interests for the success of the party, and who had shown such a superb spirit of loyalty, he determined to cast the tie vote and declare the nominee; but when it came to the casting of that vote Mr. Pinckard hesitated, for each was a personal friend and he could not decide between them; then it was determined to cast lots for the decision as was done in the case of Supreme Court judges some years ago. A silver dollar was produced and given to Mr. Pinckard in such a way that he could not see either side of the coin; he clasped it in his hand and asked the candidates to select "heads" or "tails." Mr. Roper selected "tails," Mr. Williams "heads" and ing at the coin Mr. Pinckard flipped it to the ceiling; it ricocheted, struck the floor and rolled off several feet. During these few seconds intense silence was evidenced. Examining the coin closely, Mr. Pinckard announced that it was turned face up ("heads") and he therfore cast the deciding vote in favor of Mr. T. E. Williams as the democratic nominee for County Superintendent of Education.

Mr. Roper was the first to grasp Mr. Williams' hand and congratulate him and at the same time to proffer his enthusiastic support.

Mr. Williams received the congratulations of his friends with becoming modesty; Mr. Roper declared himself entirely satisfied with the result and requested his friends to give to Mr. Williams the same cordial support they would have given him had he been the successful one.

Perhaps this is the only tie vote cast in the April primary in the entire state; it was certainly a unique position for the rival candidates to occupy; it was a trying ordeal upon the chairman of the committee to make a decision in which two of his personal and political friends were involved, but each met the issue with becoming manliness; the chairman accepting the duty imposed upon him by the law sought the most equitable way of deciding the matter; the two candidates, both vitally interested, sought the best way of amicably arriving at a conclusion without injury to themselves, their friends or the party. That it was settled with equity, legally and with entire satisfaction to both parties is attested by the signatures of both candidates to a paper in the possession of the Press man, as Secretary of the County Committee.

Mr. Williams is the legally nominated candidate for County Superintendent of Education; it was a matter of law, it was determined according to law and with perfect satisfaction to each of the two candidates. Mr. Roper's friends, while regretting that he did not have his usual luck with him, will without question, give to the nominee that cordial support they would have given him had he been nominated by a thousand majority. Every loyal friend of Mr. Roper will remember his request to support Mr. Williams with enthusiasm and to roll up for him at the November election, a majority such as would make any man proud to receive.

NEW COMMITTEE TAKES CHARGE

OFF WITH THE OLD, ON WITH THE NEW. MACK BROADHEAD, CHAIRMAN PRO TEM.

The Executive Committee of the Democratic party of Chilton county met last Monday to take action in the matter of the tie vote between Messrs. Roper and Williams for County Superintendent of Education, but as the matter had been previously settled there was nothing for the old committee to do but to turn its affairs over to the newly elected committee and retire from active service. Some of the names of the newly elected committee were never given to the Secretary and hence the complete roll could not be made; however a goodly number were present ready for the organization.

The Chairman of the old Committee having been called to Montgomery, Mr. E. L. Thornton was elected Chairman pro tem., and proceeded to the organization of the new Committee. As there were quite a number of the new Committee absent, it was decided to form a temporary organization only, and to defer the election of permanent officers to a meeting to be held Saturday, May 4th. Mr. Mack Broadhead was elected temporary Chairman; F. M. Wood was elected temporary Sec. During the transaction of the business of the Committee Mr. Moses A. Killgore came into the room; he was cordially received and requested to have a seat with the Committee. After the close of the routine business, Mr. Killgore was requested to make a speech to the Committee, which he did in a few well chosen remarks. He stated among other things that it had been charged against him by the republicans that so long as he was connected statement, he wanted to say that from now on he proposed to be in their way more than ever before.

Speaking with much feeling, he said: "Mr. Chairman, if the republicans of the county do not believe what I have said, what Mr. Smith has said about the negroes in republican conventions, what the pictures of this convention prove as indisputable facts, then let them go to the convention soon to be held in Birmingham and SEE and SMELL for themselves."

Mr. Killgore's speech was received with much enthusiasm.

A committee was authorized to be appointed by the Chairman to solicit subscriptions for the democratic paper (The Press) of the county and to raise funds to send out extra copies during the campaign.

This committee consists of every democratic voter in the county, but Messrs. A. C. Smith, E. B. Deason and W. A. Kemp were appointed as a Central Committee to have direct control of the matter. It is the purpose of the Committee to have the Press go into every home possible so that each may read and learn for himself and not depend upon the garbled hearsay or prejudiced reports.

After transacting the business of the committee, a motion was made that the committee adjourn to extend Mr. Killgore the right hand of fellowship and this was done amid demonstrations of enthusiasm.

The new committeemen will receive notice of the next meeting (Saturday, May 4th, 1912, at ten o'clock in the Court House) but they should make it a point to be present whether they receive personal notice or not as it is a matter of vital importance to the welfare of the party that they effect a permanent organization at once.

A VALUABLE MULE DROWNED

ACT OF MEDDLESOME BOYS.

Mr. J. T. Davis of Mineral Springs settlement is poorer this week by one hundred and fifty dollars than he was last week, and not through speculation or unsuccessful trading either.

Friday night he had two of his fine mules safely quartered in his lot, one of them made its escape and wandered toward Clanton. Some young men or boys (names unknown) who were fishing in the creek just north of Clanton saw the mule and run it into the creek. Once in the stream the mule was unable to get out; having become entangled in some barbed wire stretched across the stream. The mule remained in the creek for some hours before it was extricated, and when it was gotten to the bank was in a dying condition—later it did die.

Mr. Davis is out of pocket the price of a mule, the young men, or boys, who drove the mule into the creek are in a few moments of "fun"—if they call such such devilment and cruelty fun—and the county officers are in an opportunity to ferret out who the guilty parties are and to bring them to court to answer for their so-called "fun."

DOMINO RECEPTION

TENDERED MRS. PHILLIPS.

A courtesy to Mrs. W. H. Phillips of Birmingham, was in the nature of a forty-two party given by Miss Mollie Hannon Friday afternoon.

The color note, green and purple, was tastefully carried out in a profusion of purple wisteria with a back-ground of waving ferns.

The five tables were placed in the reception hall and adjoining rooms. At the conclusion of the games delicious refreshments were served.

The invitation list included Mesdames W. H. Phillips, E. M. Pinckard, Tipton Mullins, H. F. Chandler, W. M. Adams, J. P. VanDerveer, J. M. Morgan, Earl Gowan, Amzi Gowan, L. H. Reynolds, William Reynolds, Osmond Middleton, W. D. Spigener, John Stanfield, N. S. Johnson, Misses Morgan, Stewart, Watts, Thomas and Spigener.

NEW FIRM TAKES CHARGE

MESSRS. GRAY & ROBINSON PURCHASE PLANT OF MR. G. HIGGINS.

On last Saturday a deal was consummated between Mr. Guy Higgins of Clanton and Messrs. B. F. Gray and Jno. M. Robinson of Birmingham, by which the former transferred to the latter his large planing mill interests, which for several years past he has conducted on the south side of town. The price paid was not stated. The plant hereafter will be conducted under the firm name of "Gray & Robinson Lumber Company," with Mr. B. F. Gray as General Manager and Mr. Jno. M. Robinson as Secretary & Treasurer.

The new owners took charge last Monday morning and will not make any change in the force formerly engaged by Mr. Higgins, though they contemplate making extensive improvements and enlargements, which will probably necessitate the employment of several additional hands.

This will be good news to the people of Clanton as every new comer but adds that much to the weekly pay roll of the town and every new pay roll adds to the growth and prosperity of the town.

Mr. Higgins will continue the wholesale business, retaining the services of Messrs. W. H. Foshee and Thos. D. Woods.

DR. HOPKINS MAKES PURCHASE

TO ERECT HANDSOME BUILDING

Last week Dr. P. I. Hopkins purchased of Dr. Earl Gowan a lot on Seventh street, south, upon which he proposes to immediately erect a handsome and commodious building to be used by him as office and sanitorium.

The building will be of brick and cement, trimmed with marble. It will contain, besides the general offices of the Doctor, several rooms for patients, nurses' rooms and an operating room. The building will be so constructed as to permit a second story to be added without inconvenience when it is so desired.

THE HOTEL ASSURED

Some days since the Press man asked Dr. Gowan when work on the new hotel would be started. In reply he said "I have had several to ask this same question and most of them were doubting Thomases; they seem to think that I gave you dope and that you passed it along the line. Just tell them that I have orders from the owners of the lot, those who propose the erection of the building, to place twenty car loads of cinders on the ground and to begin the placing of cement just as soon as the material can be secured; I expect the work to begin almost any day, and when it is once begun it will be pushed to a final conclusion. You may confidently look forward to a handsome, commodious hotel building on Seventh street within the next few months."

A LETTER FROM MR. GREER

Clanton, Ala., April 8, 1912

Editor of the Press:—

Please allow me space in your paper to let the people know how I stand on the political situation. I have heretofore been in sympathy with the Republican party, but I have watched its doings and its practices until I am convinced that I can no longer adhere to it. This Fall I shall cast my ballot in behalf of the democratic party. I am going to vote for Mr. Dennis in the republican primary for personal reasons. I believe that he is more entitled to the place than is Mr. Harris. Mr. Harris says he is going to get the office and then let his father run it. I am not in favor of that. I will say to my friends that I can't believe that a man is qualified to [illegible]

JOHN SILAS ACQUITTED

Last Thursday before Judge Deason was tried the case of the State vs. John Silas, charged with public drunkenness.

It will be recalled that Mr. Silas was arrested during the recent street fair, by officers Fallon and Palmer and taken to jail, where he was locked up. M. Silas gave bond for his appearance before the County Court.

Considerable discussion was indulged in at the time as to the treatment accorded Mr. Silas by the officers.

As stated, on last Thursday the case was determined. Mr. Silas was represented by Mr. Lull of Wetumpka and Senator Curry; the State was represented by Mr. S. A. Latham. After the examination a number of witnesses the Court dismissed Mr. Silas from custody.

In justice to Sheriff Jones it should be said that he was confined to his bed at the time of the arrest, but that as soon as he ascertained the true facts in the case he acted—and acted promptly.

MR. LEE HAYES

APPOINTED CITY MARSHAL.

In last week's issue was a notice that Mr. Lee Hayes and Mr. J. M. Morgan were in somewhat of a controversy as to which occupied the office of Chief of Police or City Marshal. The Press also stated that it had tried to secure a glimpse at the Minutes of the Town Clerk to ascertain the exact wording of the order made by the Council, but had failed to do so.

The facts have since been learned. Mr. Morgan has been in extremely poor health for the past six months or more and has been more or less unable to give the duties of the office his attention, therefore the Council passed the following order: "The Mayor is hereby authorized to employ Mr. Lee Hayes, or some other suitable person, to act as Town Marshal; Mr. J. M. Morgan, former Marshal, to be retained as a policeman."

Acting upon this order of the Council, Mayor Matthews appointed Mr. Hayes as Town Marshal. Mr. Morgan, whose health continues bad, desired to be relieved of all duty and tendered his resignation as an officer, having surrendered his official badge and club to the Mayor. Mr. Morgan has served the county and town in an official capacity for the past twelve or fourteen years. His retirement comes after a long term of faithful service. Mr. Hayes, the new Marshal has seen service for some years also and will make a faithful and competent official. Just who will fill the position of Policeman or Night Marshal has not yet been announced.

TWO REPUBLICAN PAPERS UNITE

THE ONE SWALLOWED UP. THE OTHER SWELLED UP.

The consummation of a deal which has been on tap for several weeks, was brought about last week when the UNION swallowed the BANNER, hair, teeth, toe-nails and hide.

The Union now occupies the old home of the Banner and the Banner goes down in history as a "has been." It was once a good old wagon, but it is now broke down. It surrendered to its nearest ally—the Union.

We are glad to see the spirit of unity that existed between them and we are also glad that they have united their forces.

There have been many democrats in the county who have refused to take the Press, stating that they had "always been taking the Banner," that it was a good party paper and they hated to desert it.' We presume they will now discover just how good a "party paper" it was and has been. Year before last it proved its loyalty to democracy when it came out boldly against the democratic candidates and worked for the republican ticket.

chase the Union editorially states that the paper will continue to be sent to old subscribers of the Banner; this is nothing but right, perhaps, if the subscribers of the Banner wish it sent to them, but will the readers of the Benner who profess to be democrats ignore their own paper and continue to take the Union because it has opened its mouth and swallowed the Banner?

It would appear as an attempt to gain recruits by sending out to democrats who have heretofore been deceived by the Banner as to its political faith and standing, a paper which has no part or parcel with the democracy, Our democratic friends should not so deceived. It's alright if you do not care to subscribe to a democratic paper, but it is fool hearty to expect democracy to achieve victories when its own rank and file support avowed republican papers and eschew their own party organ.

CARD OF THANKS

I take this opportunity to express publicly to my friends my sincere thanks for their loyal support at the recent primary. I assure you that I appreciate the honor you have conferred upon me, and I shall strive harder now, and after the general election, prove equal to your support.

You who supported other candidates exercised a free man's privilege. You were supporting worthy gentlemen, but since I have been honored with the nomination, I hope to solicit your hearty support. With this support I shall be elected along with the other democratic nominess.

Faithfully yours,
T. E. Williams.

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer. He makes large investments and gets into the political ring. For a rest he goes to the country. Daylight gets deeper into high finance in San Francisco, but often the longing for the simple life nearly overcomes him. Dede Mason buys a horse and Daylight meets her in her saddle trips. One day he asks Dede to go with him on one more ride, his purpose being to ask her to marry him and they canter away, she trying to analyze her feelings. Dede tells Daylight that her happiness could not lie with a money manipulator. Daylight undertakes to build up a great industrial community. He is insistent that she marry him and yet hopes to win her. Daylight falls back into his old drinking ways. There is a flurry in the money market, but Daylight tells Dede that he is going to work on a ranch and prove to her that he has reformed. Dede and Daylight are married at a little backwoods hotel. He has come back to wholesome, natural life, and they go to housekeeping in a spot close to nature.

CHAPTER XXI.

But there came the day, one year, in early April, when Dede sat in an easy chair on the porch, sewing on certain small garments, while Daylight read aloud to her. It was in the afternoon, and a bright sun was shining down on a world of new green. Along the irrigation channels of the vegetable garden streams of water were flowing, and now and again Daylight broke off from his reading to run out and change the flow of water. Also, he was teasingly interested in the certain small garments on which Dede worked, while she was radiantly happy over them, though at times, when his tender fun was too insistent, she was rosily confused or affectionately resentful. It was a few minutes later that Daylight, breaking off from his reading to change the streams of irrigation, found that the water had ceased flowing. He shouldered a pick and shovel, took a hammer and a pipe-wrench from the tool-house, and returned to Dede on the porch.

"I reckon I'll have to go down and dig the pipe out," he told her. "It's that slide that's threatened all winter. I guess she's come down at last."

"Don't you read ahead, now," he warned, as he passed around the house and took the trail that led down the wall of the canyon.

Halfway down the trail, he came upon the slide. It was a small affair, only a few tons of earth and crumbling rock; but, starting from fifty feet above, it had struck the water-pipe with force sufficient to break it at a connection. Before proceeding to work, he glanced up the path of the slide, and he saw what made his eyes startle and cease for the moment from questing farther.

"Hello," he communed aloud, "look who's here."

His glance moved on up the steep broken surface, and across it from side to side. Here and there, in places, small twisted manzanitas were rooted precariously, but in the main, save for weeds and grass, that portion of the canyon was bare. There were signs of a surface that had shifted often as the rain poured a flow of rich eroded soil from above over the lip of the canyon.

"A true fissure vein, or I never saw one," he proclaimed softly.

Dropping the hammer and pipe-wrench, but retaining pick and shovel, he climbed up the slide to where a vague line of out-jutting but mostly soil-covered rock could be seen. It was all but indiscernible, but his practiced eye had sketched the hidden information which it signified. Here and there, along this wall of the vein, he attacked the crumbling rock with the pick and shoveled the encumbering soil away. Several times he examined this rock. So soft was some of it that he could break it in his fingers. Shifting a dozen feet higher up, he again attacked with pick and shovel. And this time, when he rubbed the soil from a chunk of rock and looked, he straightened up suddenly, gasping with delight. And then, like a deer at a drinking-pool in fear of the enemies, he flung a quick glance around to see if any eye were gazing upon him. He grinned at his own foolishness and returned to his examination of the vein. A blast of sunlight fell on it, and it was all aglitter with tiny specks of unmistakable free gold.

"From the grass roots down," he muttered in an awe-stricken voice, as he swung his pick into the yielding surface.

Sometimes he started small slides of earth that covered up his work and compelled him to dig again. Once he was swept fifty feet down the canyon-side; but he floundered and scrambled up again without pausing for breath. He hit upon quartz that was so rotten that it was almost like clay, and here the gold was richer than ever. It was a veritable treasure chamber. For a hundred feet up and down he traced the walls of the vein. He even climbed over the canyon-lip to look along the brow of the hill for signs of the outcrop. But that could wait, and he hurried back to his find.

He toiled on in the same mad haste, until exhaustion and an intolerable ache in his back compelled him to pause. He straightened up with even a richer piece of gold-laden quartz. Stooping, the sweat from his forehead had fallen to the ground. It now ran into his eyes, blinding him. He wiped it from him with the back of his hand and returned to a scrutiny of the gold. It would run thirty thousand to the ton, fifty thousand, anything—he knew that. And as he gazed upon the yellow lure, and panted for air, and wiped the sweat away, his quick vision leaped and set to work. He saw the spur-track that must run up from the valley and across the upland pastures, and he ran the grades and built the bridge that would span the canyon, until it was real before his eyes. Across the canyon was the place for the mill, and there he erected it; and he erected, also, the endless chain of buckets, suspended from a cable and operated by gravity, that would cross the canyon to the quartz-crusher. Likewise, the whole mine grew before him and beneath him—tunnels, shafts, and galleries, and hoisting plants. The blasts of the miners were in his ears, and from across the canyon he could hear the roar of the stamps. The hand that held the lump of quartz was trembling, and there was a tired, nervous palpitation apparently in the pit of his stomach. It came to him abruptly that what he wanted was a drink—whisky, cocktails, anything, a drink. And even then, with this new hot yearning for the alcohol upon him, he heard, faint and far, drifting down the green abyss of the canyon, Dede's voice, crying:—

"Here, chick, chick, chick, chick, chick! Here, chick, chick, chick!"

He was astounded at the lapse of time. She had left her sewing on the porch and was feeding the chickens preparatory to getting supper. The afternoon was gone. He could not conceive that he had been away that long.

Again came the call: "Here, chick, chick, chick, chick, chick! Here, chick, chick, chick!"

It was the way she always called—first five, and then three. He had long since noticed it. And from these thoughts of her arose other thoughts that caused a great fear slowly to grow in his face. For it seemed to him that he had almost lost her. Not once had he thought of her in those frenzied hours, and for that much, at least, had she truly been lost to him. He dropped the piece of quartz, slid down the slide, and started up the trail, running heavily. At the edge of the clearing he eased down and almost crept to a point of vantage whence he could peer out, himself unseen. She was feeding the chickens, tossing to them handfuls of grain and laughing at their antics.

The sight of her seemed to relieve the panic fear into which he had been flung, and he turned and ran back down the trail. Again he climbed the slide, but this time he climbed higher, carrying the pick and shovel with him. And again he toiled frenziedly, but this time with a different purpose. He worked artfully, loosing slide after slide of the red soil and sending it streaming down and covering up all he had uncovered, hiding from the light of day the treasure he had discovered. He even went into the woods and scooped armfuls of last year's fallen leaves, which he scattered over the slide. But this he gave up as a vain task, and he sent more slides of soil down upon the scene of his labor, until no sign remained of the out-jutting walls of the vein. Next he repaired the broken pipe, gathered his tools together, and started up the trail. He walked slowly, feeling a great weariness, as of a man who had passed through a frightful crisis. He put the tools away, took a great drink of the water that again flowed through the pipes, and sat down on the bench by the open kitchen door. Dede was inside preparing supper, and the sound of her footsteps drew him to vein outside.

He breathed the balmy mountain air, a great sigh, like a diver from whom [illegible] was. And, as he dozed in the [illegible] he gazed with all his eyes at the slide and sky and water, as if he were drinking in that, too, along with the air.

Dede did not know he had come back, and at times he turned his head and stole glances in at her—at her efficient hands, at the bronze of her brown hair that smouldered with fire when she crossed the path of sunshine that streamed through the window, at the promise of her figure that shot through him a pang most strangely sweet and sweetly dear. He heard her approaching the door, and kept his head turned resolutely toward the valley. And next, he thrilled, as he had always thrilled, when he felt the caressing gentleness of her fingers through his hair.

"I didn't know you were back," she said. "Was it serious?"

"Pretty bad, that slide," he answered, still gazing away and thrilling to her touch. "More serious than I reckoned. But I've got the plan. Do you know what I'm going to do?—I'm going to plant eucalyptus all over it. They'll hold it. I'll plant them thick as grass, so that even a hungry rabbit can't squeeze between them; and when they get their roots agoing, nothing in creation will ever move that dirt again."

"Why, is it as bad as that?"

He shook his head.

"Nothing exciting. But I'd sure like to see any blamed old slide get the best of me, that's all. I'm going to seal that slide down so that it'll stay there for a million years. And when the last trump sounds, and Sonoma Mountain and all the other mountains pass into nothingness, that old slide will be still a-standing there, held up by the roots."

He passed his arm around her and pulled her down on his knees.

"Say, little woman, you sure miss a lot by living here on the ranch—music, and theaters, and such things. Don't you ever have a hankering to drop it all and go back?"

So great was his anxiety that he dared not look at her, and when she laughed and shook her head he was aware of a great relief. Also, he noted the undiminished youth that rang through that same old-time boyish laugh of hers.

"Say," he said, with sudden fierceness, "don't you go fooling around that slide until after I get the trees in and rooted. It's mighty dangerous, and I sure can't afford to lose you now."

He drew her lips to his and kissed her hungrily and passionately.

"What a lover!" she said; and pride in him and in her own womanhood was in her voice.

"Look at that, Dede." He removed one encircling arm and swept it in a wide gesture over the valley and the mountains beyond. "The Valley of the Moon—a good name, a good name. Do you know, when I look out over it all, and think of you and, of all it means, it kind of [illegible] me up in the throat, and I [illegible] and I know I'm almost [illegible] and I have a [illegible] almost [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

A WONDERFUL HEALING INFLUENCE IN KIDNEY TROUBLES.

A year and a half ago I was taken with a severe attack of kidney trouble that pained me to such an extent that morphine had to be given me. Was attended by a doctor who pronounced it as stone in the bladder and prescribed Lithia Water. I took Lithia Water and tablets for some time and received no relief from them. I stopped taking medicines for some time and having some of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root in the house, I decided to try it and felt much relieved; while taking the second bottle commenced to pass gravel, in all at least a half dozen or more and have not suffered the slightest since and in all have taken one bottle and a half and feel very grateful to Swamp-Root. Yours very truly,

H. W. SPINKS,
Camp Hill, Ala.

Personally appeared before me this 16th of August, 1909, H. W. Spinks, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that same is true in substance and in fact.

Saving His Money.

Some Are So By Nature.

A certain young man who prided himself on a brusqueness that he mistook for wit, met an eminent, but touchy, sculptor at a studio supper.

"So you're the chap," he said, on being introduced, "that makes mud heads?"

"Not all of them," the sculptor replied, quietly.—Youth's Companion.

Medical Genius.

An old doctor, seeing a young one who was going along the street with half a dozen shabby-looking men and women, called him aside and asked: "Who are all those people, and where are you going with them?"

"I will tell you in confidence," was the reply, "that I've hired them to come and sit in my reception room. I expect a rich patient this morning, and I want to make an impression on him."—Judge's Library.

Up and Down.

Senator Davis, in an interview at Ocark, derided good humoredly the aristocratic pretensions that too many Americans, as soon as they get rich, assume.

"It's hard to be aristocratic in a democracy like this," said Senator Davis. "We've got no criterion, no measure, and hence, as aristocrats, we never can tell where we stand.

"'Mrs. Dash is no longer in our set,' a woman once said at a tea.

"'Yes, so I understand,' said another woman.

"'Yes,' went on the first woman, with a haughty sneer; 'yes, she dropped out some time ago.'

"'Is that so?' said the other. 'I was under the impression that she climbed out.'"

Demand for New Alloy.

Although the early expectations of the wholesale substitution of aluminum for steel and iron have not materialized, the demand for the new alloy has grown enormously. From a production in the United States of less than 100,000 pounds in 1883, in 1893 the output had grown to 350,000 pounds, 1903 to 7,500,000 pounds and today it is in excess of 50,000,000 pounds.

It takes a man of originality to pose as a successful liar.

E. G. LEWIS TELLS OF HIS RISE AND FALL

STARTED FIRST PUBLISHING VENTURE ON ONE DOLLAR AND TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

INCREASED TO MILLIONS

Claims Downfall Began With the Issuance of a Fraud Order by the Government.

St. Louis.—E. G. Lewis, charged with using the mails to defraud, took the witness stand in the United States district court here and began the story of his remarkable financial career from his first venture in the publishing field, when he started a magazine with $1.25.

Rapidly he told how he ran up this $1.25 into a series of business and banking operations, which involved the handling of several million dollars.

Lewis said his publishing business outgrew its plant several times, and he finally decided to build his own plant, and, realizing city property was improving westward, raised his building beyond the city limits, where University City has since grown.

He then recited the success of his business in 1895 and a receiver was appointed with the issuance of a fraud order by the postoffice department in 1905. All his mail, the witness said, was returned to the senders, bearing the word "fradulent" stamped in red.

Before this, he said, he was receiving from 3,000 to 22,000 letters a day. As a result of the fraud order, Lewis testified, he lost $190,000 in advertising contracts, and his banking credit was cut off.

When the Peoples bank ceased business in 1905 and a receiver was appointed, Lewis testified, he called a meeting of the stockholders and proposed the exchange of their stock for stock of the publishing company, with a $2,500,000 increase in its capitalization.

Lewis testified that 19,000 subscribers of the Peoples bank changed their stock for an equal number of shares of the Lewis Publishing company. When the bank was liquidated on a basis of 87 cents on the dollar, he said, he made up the other 13 cents and saved the subscribers from loss by giving them their full allotment of Lewis Publishing company shares.

In October, 1905, he said, 300,000 copies of the Farm Journal were held up. He did not learn of this until five weeks later, he said. He then had to refund $12,000 taken in for advertising in the suppressed issue and many advertising contracts were broken as a result of the seizure.

George W. Baumhoff, former street railway official, testified that the effect of Lewis taking hold of the University City tract was to enhance greatly the value not only of that tract, but of all property within a mile and a half of University City.

RASH ALL OVER BABY'S BODY

Itched So He Could Not Sleep

"On July 27, 1909, we left Boston for a trip to England and Ireland, taking baby with us. After being in Ireland a few days a nasty rash came out all over his body. We took him to a doctor who gave us medicine for him. The trouble started in the form of a rash and was all over baby's body, head and face, at different times. It irritated, and he would scratch it with all his might. The consequence was it developed into sores, and we were afraid it would leave nasty scars on his face.

"When we reached England we took baby to another doctor, who said his condition was due to change of food and climate, and gave more medicine. The rash got no better, and it used to itch and burn at night so bad that the child could not sleep. He was completely covered with it at different times. It was at this time that my mother advised us to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for about nine months the places disappeared. There are not any scars, or other kind of disfigurement, and baby is completely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We have no further trouble with baby's skin. Nothing stopped the itching, and allowed baby to sleep but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Margaret Gunn, 29 Burrell St., Roxbury, Mass., March 12, 1911.

Tommy Resented Injustice Done to Saw, After He Had Proved Its Temper.

Mr. A——, who was planning to build an outdoor sleeping porch at the back of his house, had an expensive new saw sent home from a hardware store. He left his office early the next afternoon, with the intention of getting the porch well under way before dinner; and, as he was very much interested in doing the work himself, he donned a pair of overalls and went at it in good spirits. An hour or so later he came tramping into the house, his face dark with exasperation, and flung himself down in disgust.

"That new saw I bought isn't worth 5 cents," he stormed. "Why, the thing won't cut butter!"

His small son Tommy looked up in wide-eyed surprise.

We were somewhat unprepared for a statement appearing last week in the Union. It purported to be a NEWS item but really should have appeared in the editorial comment column, or at least the comment should have been separated from the actual news item. and placed in its proper column.

We mention this merely because some weeks ago we were taken to task by the Union for haviug placed editorial comment in one of our news items, and it gives us pleasure to remark to the Editor that what is sauce for the goose is also—in all well regulated families and newspapers—sauce for the gander bird.

The article in question, after having a deceptive headline, reads as follows:—

"With ideal weather the democratic primary was held Mondav, but even the pretty weather and the fact that an extraordinary large number of voters qualified this year, failed to bring them over seven hundred, when they expected a thousand at the least. The Clanton box polled a littte over 200, but even this ran behind their vote at the last general election."

In so far as the vote in the primary is concerned it makes but little difference to the Press, for it is a well known fact that the democrats never cast their full strength in primary elections, but it is the glaring misstatements in the Union upon which we wish to comment.

In the first place every one knows that the "pretty weather" was one of the BEST reasons in world for the vote having been as light as it was; the farmers had been idle for more than four weeks because of the extreme wet weather and they took advantage of the first "pretty" day to do their ploughing. In fact we have heard several say that there was more work done by the farmers on that particular day than for any ten days previous, during the entire year. Hence the vote was smaller than otherwise it would have been, and the Union's charge that the weather was in favor of a large vote falls to the ground.

But was the vote light? Was it —as the Union says—a seven hundred vote primary?

In the first place, the Press man, who was Secretary of the Executive Committee, made a tabulated list of the votes cast as the same were returned to him up to Tuesday night after the election on Monday, That tabulated statement showed, AT THAT TIME, a total of 884 votes cast with two precincts to be heard from. It is true that the tabulated vote as above made was not official, but it was presumed to be as nearly correct as it could be made—it was at least semi-official. This tabulated vote was given to the Editor of the Union (at his request) to be published in his paper.

It occurs to us that if he was going to use any figures at all he should have used those secured from an official source rather than to have made a leap in the dark. His ability as a guesser, his judgment of votes cast seem to be sadly out of repair.

Again, it is stated that the vote in Clanton was a little over 200 and that this ran behind the vote at this box in the general election.

Let's see: The vote at Clanton box in the general election was, for Deason (who ran ahead of his ticket) 261; the average democratic vote in Clanton was 249 in the general election. The vote in the April primary was 229, a difference of twenty votes. This is easily accounted for from the fact that "pretty weather" prevailed that day and many of the farmers who vote at Clanton failed to leave their farms; several residents of Clanton did not vote that day, being absent from town; then too, there were more than twenty gentlemen who voted with the democracy in the general election who did not profess to be democrats, but who voted with the party because they felt that the democracy had put forward the best men; and so the facetious remark about the vote in Clanton falling behind cannot be sustained. The fact is Clanton's democracy is extraordinarily proud of the fine showing it made in the April primary, and tho' we expect to do much better in November, we are not one particle ashamed of the 229 cast in April, it being twenty per cent better than any previous primary vote.

In conclusion: Notwithstanding the tabulated statement in the hands of the Union editor the vote was placed at 700. The fact is that the total vote, as shown by the poll lists, which are the official lists, show that there were NINE HUNDRED and NINETEEN votes cast.

In the general election the average vote was 989.

In the primary, just previous to the last one, the democracy cast an average of 587 votes; in the last primary we cast 919, a gain of over three hundred votes—or a gain of more than fifty per cent.

The question arises: From where did this tremendous gain come? Not from non-voters who had paid poll taxes and registered; not from new citizens, not from young men who have recently become of age, not from Socialists, for we must admit them to be stronger today than they were a year ago; but from men who have deserted the republican ranks and who are now affiliating with the democracy; from the rank and file of the republicans who are tired of boss rule. Will they stay with the democracy? Well, we rather guess YES; they have seen the error of their ways and have returned to the house of their fathers.

Yes, they will remain, true, steadfast, loval and active; and before the general election comes Chilton democracy will be able to sing "STILL, THERE'S MORE TO FOLLOW."

Will the Union correct its figures? A failure to do so would be an admission that it purposely attempted to deceive; a correction—and of course it will correct its erroneous figures—will show that it wishes to be fair.

Green Sickness

Delicate girls who are approaching the age of womanhood are usually subject to this disease. They are pale because the blood is weak and watery. Their complexion has a sickly greenish cast which gives the disease its name. They have no vitality and if exposed to any unusual excitement, excessive labor or cold dampness are liable to contract some disease that will disastrously effect their whole future lives. It is a most critical period. The right remedy to relieve this condition and bring back the rosy hue of health is

DR. SIMMONS

Squaw Vine Wine

It is a palatable remedy, a fine, pleasant tasting medicine. Its agreeable flavor, however, is no criterion of its efficacy. It does the work expected of it more promptly than the harsh, bitter tasting medicines. It begins the restorative process with the first dose and if used for a reasonable period, the misery, weakness and pallor disappear, the spirits rise, the appetite becomes good, the sleep sound and restful and the thin, vitiated blood is revitalized and goes coursing through the veins, carrying new life, strength and energy to all parts of the body.

PASTOR RUSSELL IS HOMEWARD BOUND

Foreign Missions Investigation Committee on the Atlantic.

They Will Report at a Mass Meeting In the New York Hippodrome Next Sunday Afternoon at 3 o'Clock—The Interest Centered Is Country Wide.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Mid-Ocean, March 24.—On the Atlantic, speeding homeward, the Foreign Missions Investigation Committee is in communication by wireless. It is understood that arrangements have been made for a public mass meeting in New York's largest auditorium, the Hippodrome, next Sunday afternoon, to hear the report of this committee respecting its findings. A report of the same will be given in these columns.

Pastor Russell's discourse today was reminiscent of Arabia as the Cradle of our Race. His text was: "As all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive; every man in his own order."—I Cor. xv, 22, 23.

Arabia is accredited with being the ancient Eden, eastward in which was the specially prepared Garden wherein our first parents had their trial—not for a reward of heaven or a punishment of eternal torment, but for a reward of everlasting life under perfect earthly conditions, or for a penalty of death. Here man, created very good, in the image of his Creator, sinned and became subject to the penalty of sin—"The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Here also is Mount Ararat, on which the ark rested after the flood, and from which came forth the family of Noah to people the earth afresh. Thus was Arabia twice the Cradle of mankind.

"Israel Hath Not Obtained."

The first declaration of the Gospel, the first mention that Divine favor would yet rescue mankind from the reign of sin and death, was made, not publicly, not to all of the race, but merely to one man, the friend of God—Abraham.

But God gave Abraham words only, "Wonderful words of life"—that in him and in his posterity eventually all the families of the earth should be blessed. But there was not a sign of change so far as the Divine dealings were concerned. Doubtless it was because God foreknew that approximately four thousand years would intervene before the blessing of the world that He added His oath to His promise.

In due time, at Mount Sinai, God entered into a Covenant with the children of Israel, by which He agreed to bless them and to fulfill in them the Abrahamic promise that they, as Abraham's seed, should bless all the nations of the earth. The only condition connected with the promise was that they were to show their fitness to be the Divine channel. Full of joy and faith the Israelites obligated themselves thus.

Ah! much they knew not. They did not realize their own weakness and imperfection through the fall and their inability to fulfill the Divine requirements, the spirit of the Law of their Covenant. They soon found that while the Law said, "He that doeth these things shall live," they were not able to do those things; and therefore they were all dying like other men. Had God deceived them and entrapped them? No. God's proposition was simple enough. He was merely teaching them a great lesson—that sin as a disease had taken hold upon humanity and that, however willing they might be, all were weak and perverse and unable to fulfill their good intentions.

As a consolation God assured Israel that He would send the Deliverer, One still greater than Moses, who had delivered them from the Egyptian bondage. This great Deliverer would deliver them from the greater bondage of sin and death, so that they would be able to obey the Divine Law and be used of God in blessing and instructing other nations. This Greater than Moses, they were assured, would inaugurate a New Law Covenant, based upon better sacrifices than the blood of bulls and goats, and He was known to them as Messiah, the Messenger of the New Covenant.

Heirs of the Promise.

We must never lose sight of the kernel of the Gospel Message. The ultimate blessings of the Messianic Kingdom, through the Seed of Abraham, will be to all the families of the earth, but previously, the Divine work is the calling of the Seed of Abraham which is to do that work of blessing. The promise was not made to all the families of the earth, but to Abraham and his Seed. Hence the heirs of the promise are not all the families of the earth, but the Seed of Abraham.

To the saints of Galatia, who had been Gentiles, but had accepted Jesus and were trusting to become joint-heirs with God's dear Son in His Messianic Kingdom as members of His Bride Elect, Saint Paul writes, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the promise." (Galatians iii, 29.) How strange that we should have lost sight of this great inheritance! With our Lord, as Abraham's Seed, we shall inherit the earth; as it is written, "I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. White had as their guest last Sunday Mr. J. J. Warwick of Montgomery.

MASONIC RESOLUTIONS

Hall of Clanton Lodge, No. 423,
A. F. & A. M. Oct. 7th, 1911.

To the Worshipful Master and Wardens of Clanton Lodge, Noi 423, A. F. & A. M.

We, your committee heretofore appointed to draft and present for your consideration resolutions upon the death of our deceased brother, William M. Lambert, beg leave to submit the following report:

Brother William M. Lambert was born in Alabama on Dec. 6th, 1835, and died at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Mims, on Sept. 12th, 1911, after a lingering illness of several months.

Bro Lambert was first married to Miss Mary J. Adams, who died in 1872, there being six children as a result of this union. Later Bro. Lambert was again married, in 1873, to Miss Elizabeth Bell, this last union being blessed with one child. His last wife having died in 1909

Bro. Lambert received his first degree in Masonry in 1864, during his service in the Confederate ranks, and many years afterward he was passed and raised in this Lodge.

Bro. Lambert enlisted in the Confederate service in 1862, being a member of Company B. 34th Ala. Reg. He was wounded at the battle of Murphreesborough. He was promoted for his valiant service to 3rd Lieutenant. He saw service at the battles of Chicamauga, Missionary Ridge, Fort Humphrey, Resacca, Nashville, Marietta, Hope Well and Atlanta.

Be it resolved that in the death of Brother Lambert this Lodge has lost a consistant member, and the fraternity a true Mason. That the community and in fact the County has lost a good citizen.

Be it further resolved, that the sympathy of this Lodge be extended to the members of the family of our deceased brother, that these resolutions be spread upon a separate page of the records of this Lodge, and that a copy, under seal of this Lodge, be delivered to the daughter of our deceased brother, Mrs. Mims, who cared for and nursed him at the time of his death.

Respectfully submitted,
Committee.

Southern.

With one main levee gone, water lapping the crest of the embankments at half a dozen points and several breaks believed to be only the question of hours, Maj. Clark S. Smith, United States engineer directing the fight against the water's encroachment, described the Mississippi river flood situation as grave. The Reelfoot levee, west of Hickman, Ky., was the first of the main embankments to go. Golden Lake, 50 miles north of Memphis, and the levee on the Arkansas side, eight miles below Memphis, are regarded as in imminent danger. Pitiful cases of destitution have been relieved in various parts of the stricken section. Thousands of townspeople have sought higher ground, and hundreds of head of live stock have perished.

Commissioners of agriculture of seven of the principal cotton states making report to E. J. Watson, president of the Southern Cotton Congress, placed the estimate of reduction of acreage at from 15 to 25 per cent. This reduction is brought about by the working of the Rock Hill plan and the wet season.

Former Gov. Charles B. Aycock of North Carolina dropped dead at the Jefferson theater in Birmingham, Ala., while addressing the Alabama Educational Association on "Universal Education, Its Necessity and Benefit." He leaves a widow and eight children all minors except the oldest, Miss Alice.

According to "Sug" Smith, who lives over Mount Airy way, toward the Carolina line, Sidna Allen and Wesley Edward, the two Virginia courthouse assassins, came to his cabin and begged for food. Allen came to his door, he said, and Edwards stood guard. Allen declared neither had taken food that day. They got none from Smith. The posses are posting copies of Governor Mann's proclamation, calling upon all citizens to withhold aid from the fugitive outlaws.

Beneath a towering embankment of floral tributes of love and affection, Senator Robert Love Taylor of Tennessee now rests in Old Gray cemetery in Knoville.

Miss J. Atkins of Atlanta, Ga., has gone to Boston, Mass., to learn to pilot an aeroplane. She is the second woman who has applied for aviation lessons under the Atwood aviation school at Saugus, Mass. She has never been in an aeroplane.

With a flood of non-partisan ballots, Milwaukee voters swept from office the city's Socialist administration, installed a non-partisan mayor, board of aldermen and county board of supervisors and probably eliminated every national political party from participation in future municipal elections in the state of Wisconsin, because, as a result of the non-partisan victory in Milwaukee, the state legislature, soon to be convened, is expected to pass a distinctly non-partisan city election statute.

Gov. Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts has withdrawn his name from the presidential preference primary ballot. He says he has learned that representatives of one or more of the avowed candidates for president were preparing to withdraw their names out of courtesy to him. To obviate this he generously withdraws.

Calbraith P. Rodgers, the first man to cross the American continent in an aeroplane, who for a week past had been making daily flights at Long Beach, Cal., and had taken up with him many passengers, both men and women, was killed almost instantly when his biplane, in which he had been soaring over the ocean, fell from a height of 200 feet and buried him in the wreck.

MINOR HAPPENINGS IN ALABAMA CITIES, TOWNS AND VILLAGES.

FUNERAL DIRECTORS MEET

About Sixty Delegates Attend—Able Addresses Delivered Before the Convention.

Montgomery. — About sixty delegates to the regular annual convention of the Alabama Funeral Directors' Association attended the two-days' session of the convention held here April 9 and 10.

Preceding the meeting of the association there was a meeting of the State Board of Embalmers held for the purpose of conducting examinations by method of written certificates for applications. There were about 15 altogether, ten white and five colored, who endeavored to become members of the association. The examination before the Alabama board is said to be decidedly one of the most rigid in the country, as a result of which the standard of Alabama embalmers is recognized as one of the highest and safest in existence.

Among the number of distinguished attendants upon the occasion who spoke were Dr. Gaston Greil on the subject, "Sanitation and the Relation of the Undertaker With Public Health." Father DeMouy addressed the delegation on the subject of the relation of the ministry with the avocation of the undertaker.

A number of interesting and instructive discussions were participated in by different members of the association. As is the usual custom, the discussions consisted of things educational to the member of the association.

Decatur.—After receiving 2,300 volts of electricity, O. O. Dunbar, a lineman for the Morgan County Telephone Company, lives to tell the story. Aside from a severe nervous shock and his hands being badly burned, he is not injured. At the time of the accident the lineman was on top of a poll taking down some wires which were tagled on a cross arm. He accidentally caught hold of a live wire carrying 2,300 volts. Other linemen heard his cries and rushed to him and rescued him in time to save his life.

Cuba.—Record-breaking speed has been made by farmers near here, and considerable areas have been prepared for planting, with some cotton put in the ground. Lowlands are still too wet to do much yet, and operations have had to be confined to the hill sections. Large areas of truck have been planted, and quite a lot of beans are up and looking well. Peas have been worked out the first time, and a few cabbage fields have been plowed out.

Eufaula.—Despite the bad weather conditions of the past few weeks, the farmers of Barbour county are well advanced with their farm work, and are not as far behind as generally reported. After a trip to Louisville, Clayton and Clio, a well-known local merchant reports that the farmers in the southern section of the county are well along with their work. On some farms he says he saw corn already four inches above the ground.

Gadsden.—Group Three, of the Alabama Bankers' Association, met here April 11. The annual banquet was held at a local hotel. The following program was carried out: "Industrial Education as It Affects the Banking Interests," Watt T. Brown; "Monetary Reform," McLane Tilton, Jr.; "Bank Co-operation," W. P. G. Harding.

Birmingham.—The first district convention of the Odd Fellows of Jefferson county was held here April 9 and 10 at the Fraternal hall. The movement had been on foot some time, and the effort to bring all the Odd Fellow lodges of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of the district into closer relations was the purpose of the convention.

Athens.—The spring term of the circuit court is in session here, and Judge Speake is hurrying as rapidly as possible that the farmers who make up the juries may be allowed to go to their homes, where most of them are greatly needed, owing to the lateness of the farming interests.

Hamilton.—The Marion county board of commissioners will receive plans and specifications for the erection of an up-to-date jail. The present jail has been ordered closed by the state jail inspector, and the sheriff ordered to take all prisoners in future to the Russellville jail.

Tuscumbia.—It was announced that the Tuscumbia Bank and Trust Company, which went into voluntary liquidation three or four weeks ago, will reopen for business within a short time.

Mobile.—Rumor is again rife that Mobile is to have a $2,000,000 sky-scraper sixteen stories in height.

Anniston.—The trial of Erwin Pope, who has been twice convicted of killing J. B. McClurkin, will begin Friday, April 12.

Castleberry.—The first strawberries of the season were shipped from here in three crates and were consigned to a Birmingham firm.

Montgomery. — Paving contracts that aggregate in cost more than $36,000 have been awarded by the board of city commissioners.

Decatur.—A manufacturing concern of Rome, Ga., is contemplating building a large overall factory here. It is understood that the factory would give employment to 300 or 400 persons.

Centre.—Frank Bond, living near Round Mountain, who has been in jail here waiting for papers to be prepared to have him sent to the hospital for the insane, was found dead in bed.

Huntsville.—Farmers living along the banks of Flint River are much worried over the continued high water. Some lands in that section that have never been flooded before are now under several inches of water.

Montgomery.—J. B. McGinnis, foreman of the mines at Marvel, Ala., is at a local infirmary in a serious condition as the result of being caught in the machinery at the mines. McGinnis' arm was caught between two cogs and was drawn between the wheels.

Greensboro.—One of the biggest fires in the history of Greensboro destroyed Straiton Brothers' sash, door and blind factory. The loss is about $50,000, with no insurance. Surrounding property was saved by good work on the part of the citizens with but slight damage.

Opelika. — Three persons were burned to death six miles from Selma, Ala., when their home burned. The dead are: Mrs. Amanda Dunn, age 55 years; her son, Cleveland Dunn, age 23, and the latter's two-year-old baby girl. Mrs. Cleveland Dunn, escaped by jumping through a window.

Huntsville.—Solicitor Drake addressed a communication to Judge Ballentine, of the law and equity court, asking him to empanel a special grand jury to investigate charges of the illegal use of money in the recent primary election. The solicitor says he has evidence of the use of money to influence votes.

Montgomery. — Southern headquarters of the American Salvation Army will be opened in Montgomery on some date between the 15th and the 25th of this month. Announcement to this effect was made by Mrs. L. A. Odom, wife of Adjutant Odom, formerly stationed here, who came to Montgomery from Gadsden for the purpose of completing arrangements for the opening of the headquarters.

Florence.—President Jas. K. Powers, of the Florence Normal College, has announced as speakers at the approaching commencement, May 28-29, Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D. D., of Nashville, who will preach the commencement sermon; and Dr. George Petree of Auburn, dean of the Academic Faculty of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Montgomery.—Alabama is getting its first experience with the boll weevil, and farmers are finding it impossible to combat the pest in the recommended way of planting early. It is estimated that less than 5 per cent of the cotton crop of Alabama has been planted by April 1, whereas last year about 70 per cent was in the ground. It is impossible to say now what the cotton acreage will be this year. In fact, it has been many years since there was so little reliable information at this period of the year. That there will be a short crop is no longer probable, it is an assured fact. The only question is as to how short it will be.

Birmingham.—With the election of officers for the ensuing year the annual convention of the Alabama Educational Association came to a close. The following officers were chosen: J. B. Hobdy, of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, president; J. M. Collier, of Decatur, first vice-president; Miss Sarah H. Luther, of Troy, second vice-president; Mrs. L. T. Wall, of Birmingham, third vice-president; W. C. Griggs, Birmingham, secretary; E. E. Smith, Birmingham, treasurer; Dr. John W. Abercrombie, chairman; J. V. Brown, of Dothan, and S. R. Butler, executive committee; Prof. J. J. Doster and C. W. Daugette, ex-officio members of the executive committee.

Marion.—The semi-annual meeting of the Knights of Pythias of the Sixth District convened here. A large number of delegates were in attendance.

Huntsville.—Johnson Bell Pettiett, slayer of William T. Turner, in the Agricultural and Mechanical College for Negroes at Normal, pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree in the law and equity court and was sentenced to a term of 10 years at hard labor.

PROPERTY LOSS IS $10,000,000

ESTIMATE OF RESULT OF TWO WEEKS' FLOOD IN MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

THREE MORE LEVEES BREAK

It Is Believed That the Great Majority of Flood Prisoners Will Be Rescued.

Memphis.—Thirty thousand persons homeless; 2,000 square miles of country inundated; 30 persons drowned, and a financial loss of $10,000,000 constitute the result of a two-weeks' fldnooit shrd cmfwy etaoi shmrdl mf flood in the Mississippi valley. These figures were arrived at by government engineers and officials of state levee boards engaged in battling the ravaging sweep of the Mississippi river from points in Illinois to threatened places in Mississippi and Arkansas.

Hundreds of persons still menaced by the tremendous tide of the river at points in lower Missouri, west Tennessee and Arkansas are marooned on housetops, in trees and on anchored rafts directly in the sweep of the rampaging river. Conservative judgment at Memphis is expressed in the belief that the great majority of these flood prisoners will be rescued. Many of the menaced were stimulated to the purpose of remaining near their homes by concern for property of minor value. Rescuing squads at many points have been compelled to fight to take negroes from dangerous ground because they insisted upon staying on their flooded property to guard mules and milch cows.

The most dangerous point in the flood situation is at Golden Lake, the Arkansas levee guarding the pressure of the Mississippi. Had this embankment been breached it would have added to the tide already sweeping through the counties of northwest Arkansas. As long as the flood remains in the levees north, the strain on the southern embankments increases.

Hourly the danger zone works southward. In the upper reaches of the Ohio and Mississippi the river practically is at a standstill. This means that the flood's crest now is exerted on the dikes from the Missouri line southward.

There has been suffering among thousands of refugees gathered in the highland towns of the flood's reach. However, this situation cannot continue, because officials of the state and federal government are working to carry food to the homeless. The greatest menace now is directed toward those persons marooned in the inundated territory. Scores of boats manned by rescue parties are hurrying to relieve these prisoners.

State and levee board officials in the districts south of Memphis are laboring to top the threatened levees. Mississippi state officials think their embankments will hold. Nevertheless the menace to states bordering the Mississippi south of Memphis will not have ceased until the great river's angry waters have hurled themselves into the gulf.

Three breaks occurred south of Memphis. The first levee to collapse was "Twenty-four Mile Post," sixteen miles south of Helena, Ark. The levee at Laconia, 60 miles below Helena, went out and the levee gave way at Henruco, near Laconia. The water is pouring rapidly over several hundred square miles of rich farming lands.

Laconia circle is almost completely inundated. Probably water from the two crevasses will join, flooding the entire southern half of Phillips county, in which is Helena, and all of Desha county. The overflow will find its way back into the Mississippi through White river.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES.

Montpellier, Vt.—Swollen by melting snow in the mountains and a heavy rain, the Winooski river overflowed its banks and flooded the business districts of this city and Barre, six miles from here, causing damage estimated at $125,000.

Savannah, Ga.—Playfully aiming a small calibre rifle which he thought unloaded and at the same time shouting, "Look out," Johnnie Craig, aged 8, fatally shot his sister, Margaret, aged 11.

Boston.—A. Lawrence Rotch, founder of the Blue Hill Meteorological Observatory, died following an operation for appendicitis. He was 51 years old.

Sacramento.—Senator LaFollette will make a thorough campaign of California, said Walter L. Houser, national campaign manager for the senator.

Paris.—The police arrested another member of the automobile band which had been terrorizing Paris and the suburbs for some weeks past. The man is Raymond Callemin, known as "Raymond, the assassin."

Globe, Ariz.—Henry Starnes was rescued from the Pinal by soldiers, 20 miles from Globe, after having been submerged for a quarter of an hour.

PRODUCING PIG IRON AT A RECORD RATE

Activity and Higher Prices For Iron Features.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

While good and bad conditions conspire to give an irregular appearance to trade there is an undeniably better feeling in evidence in the larger lines of wholesale and retail trade, except in the sections immediately affected by unfavorable happenings. Good features are the arrival of fairly settled spring weather at many points, the appearance of hitherto belated Easter demand at retail, further improvement in iron and steel and the settlement of many labor disputes in the textile and other trades by the granting of higher wages.

On the other hand, the influence of past heavy rainfall and the melting of snows in the valleys of most western rivers has resulted in widespread damaging floods and fears of further injury, the excess of moisture in the soil delays crop preparation and planting, north and south, and impairs country roads, and the idleness of nearly 400,000 coal miners tends to restrict seasonal activities, transportation and buying in the sections affected. A survey of the entire situation leaves much to be desired, but it might be observed that political and tariff uncertainties are not so prominently instanced as disturbing elements.

Activity in and higher prices for pig iron, increased outputs, better prices for plates and structural shapes, indications of a broader demand for finished materials and expectations of heavy buying of railway cars feature the iron and steel markets. Sheets are firmer and eastern plate mills, some of which, were working on one-half to two-thirds capacity, have taken up most of the slack. Pig iron is being produced at a record rate. Copper has moved up to 16 cents, but business is quiet and apparently discouraged by the rapid advances in prices.

Business failures for the week ending April 4 were 261 against 252 last week; 326 in the like week of 1911; 340 in 1910; 227 in 1909 and 258 in 1908.

Business failures in Canada for the week ending with Thursday number 23 which contrasts with 25 last week and 23 in the corresponding week of 1911.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending April 4 aggregated 3,421,542 bushels against 2,495,597 last week and 2,143,043 this week last year. For the 40 weeks ending April 4, exports are 124,653,690 against 94,690,732 in the like period last year. Corn exports for the week are 384,300 bushels against 853,460 last week and 2,616,045 in 1911. For the 40 weeks ending April 4 corn exports are 31,404,922 bushels against 41,033,991 last year.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

The growth of business confidence which is so plainly in evidence may be greater than the growth in business activity, but the latter steadily increases, and is, moreover, supported by substantial contributions to the soundness of general conditions. The better sentiment prevailing in most of the market is clearly revealed in the reports which come from the different sections of the country, and notably from the leading centers of the west and south.

It is accentuated by constantly improving conditions making for good crops by the steady expansion in the principal trades, and by the removal one by one of causes of uncertainty. There is now a suspension of anthracite mining in this country, this regarded as being merely temporary, but in England the great coal strike is drawing to a close. It is significant that a number of commercial failures during the first quarter of the year was large; there was plain proof of expanding investment and a notable increase in the output of new securities and short term notes in the same period.

The forward movement in iron and steel is illustrated by a pronounced gain in iron during March. New business is enlarging at a gratifying pace. Production of finished material continues at a good rate, with some strengthening in the quotations of several lines. Tin plate mills are busier, and the demand for sheets has broadened, while the market for plates, structural material and steel bars has improved, and numerous inquiries are reported for steel cars.

While the cotton goods markets are slightly less active, demand for spot goods continues steady and prices rule very firm, with jobbers doing a much better business than at this time a year ago. Cotton goods for immediate delivery are scarce with a steady increase in values. Export trade is very large. A number of small inquiries have been received from China, though no business has been done.

In woolen goods there is a broad distribution of staple products. Several advances were made in overcoatings and worsted suitings. Both woolen and cotton yarns are very firm, and silks for fall are being ordered in a moderate way.

A better tone marks the footwear market, but trading is yet active, as but [illegible]

THEIR TROUBLES.

Smith—My wife can cook, but she insists on playing the piano.

Jones—Well, my wife can play the piano, but she insists on cooking.

Convenient Code.

Frank I. Cobb used to be a reporter in Detroit and knew intimately a former governor of the state of Michigan, who was renowned among other things for his ability as a free-hand swearer.

One night Cobb was dining with the ex-governor and his family. A message came in to tell the host that one of his pet political schemes had just been defeated through the bungling of a lieutenant. The old man ripped out a string of dark blue ones.

"Now, pa," said his wife, "you promised me you would quit cursing."

"Marie," said the ex-governor, "I'm not cussing—this is just the way I talk!"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

True Till Death.

His companions bent over him with pitiful earnestness, and stared beseechingly into his waxen features. Again came the flutter of the eyelids, but this time his will mastered approaching death. His lips weakly struggled to execute his last command, and the friends bent closer to hear the faltering whisper. "I am—gone? Yes—er—I know. Go to Milly. Tell her—er—I died with—her name on—my lips; that I—er—have loved—her—her alone—er—always. And Bessie—tell—er—tell Bessie the same thing."—London Weekly Telegraph.

His Number.

He gazed tenderly into her eyes as she spoke.

"Life," she murmured dreamily, "is, after all, nothing but a romance in which we are characters, moving hither and yon as the supreme author of our being directs."

"And in the novel of your life," said he tenderly, "where do I come in?"

"You," she answered with a smile. "Oh, you are—let me see—one, two, three—you are Chap Seventeen."—Harper's Weekly.

WANTED IT ALL FORGOTTEN

Willard's Plea for Closed Incident at Least Had Merit of Perfect Straightforwardness.

The minister had been invited to dinner, and five-year-old Willard was warned that he must use his "Sunday" manners at the table. As the plate of potatoes was passed to him, after everyone else had received a helping, Willard emptied the contents onto his plate. His mother, blushing, put back a greater part of the potatoes.

"Hog," said the little fellow, whereupon he was immediately sent to bed.

The next morning Willard sat opposite his mother at breakfast. The look on his mother's face soon told the boy an unusual atmosphere was surrounding the family meal, and he became suspicious that he was the cause.

"Well," he said, looking his mother straight in the eye, "you don't need to get sore about it. You got me, didn't you?"

Two Smiles.

Ezra Pound, the poet, was talking at the Authors' club, in New York, about Shelley's cremation.

"Cremation, although beautiful," he said, "lends itself to ribald jest in a way that sepulture doesn't.

"Who can forbear a smile at the thought of that devoted young matron, who, her front steps being covered with sleet, sprinkled her first husband's ashes over them in order that her second husband might descend in safety?"

Smiling himself, Mr. Pound resumed:

"And who could forbear another smile at the thought of the young widow on the blustery March morning who entered her drawing room to find that the wind had overturned the vase which contained her husband's remains?

"'Pshaw,' she said, 'now isn't it just like George to throw his ashes all over my new Kirmanshah rug!'"

Smelting the Matter, Anyhow.

Little Harold lives in Broad Ripple. His mother got him ready for bed one cold night, and to be sure he would be warm enough during the night she took extra precautions, relates the Indianapolis News. After she had put on his little fuzzy pajamas she tucked him carefully in between the wool blankets. Then, to make doubly sure she got a hot water bottle for him—and the youngster was apparently as snug as could be with only his little nose sticking out from beneath the covers.

When his mother had finished the tucking-in job she turned down the light. Soon the entire family was in bed. But Harold is like most youngsters. He loves his mother, and wishes lots of attention. So in his child mind he figured out a way to get her to his bed.

"Mamma," he wailed, "I'm cold!"

"Nonsense, son!" replied his mother, and she never made a move to go to his rescue.

The little boy tried the opposite.

"Well, I'm hot, then!" he yelled.

Filipinos Dislike Autos.

The reckless and insolent automobilist is hated the world over. In the Philippines, where most of the automobilists are foreigners, and where the natives have been used to loiter comfortably in the roads after the fashion of easy going southern countries, the automobiles have long been a grievance, and, failing to secure effective regulation, the Filipinos have adopted the practice of rolling big boulders into the roadway as a hint not to turn corners at a breakneck speed.

It's difficult for a man who is broke to break into society.

The man who argues with his wife is one kind of an idiot.

Tess—Well, he gave the dog's chain and muzzle away yesterday.

Something in It.

Governor Beryl Carroll of Iowa has an amusing story of a state senator whose amusing appearance might possibly lead one to mistake him for a laboring man, but who is as sensitive as a woman to all unpleasant circumstances.

"This man," said Governor Carroll, "happened to be standing outside a Des Moines undertaking establishment, conversing with a friend on political matters, when one of the employees came out of the shop and said:

"'Say, will you give us a lift with a casket?'

"The senator shuddered and replied hesitatingly:

"'Is there—is there—anything in it?'

"'Sure,' came the hearty reply, 'there's a couple of drinks in it!'"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Method With Disadvantages.

"Will you make any rear platform speeches next summer?"

"I don't know," replied the candidate. "It's kind of embarrassing to have an engineer blow the whistle, ring the bell and pull out just as you get to the grand climax on which you relied for applause."

Not only say the right thing in the right place, but, far more difficult still, leave unsaid the wrong thing at the tempting moment.—Ssla.

Why Should a Chicken Lay a Soft-Shelled Egg?

Because, Willie, the chicken don't know how to create a hard-shelled egg unless it has some food with lime in it.

So chicken-raisers often provide limestone gravel, broken oyster shells or some other form of lime.

Let the chicken wander free and it finds its own food and behaves sensibly.

Shut it up and feed stuff lacking lime and the eggs are soft-shelled.

Let's step from chickens to human beings.

Why is a child "backward" and why does a man or woman have nervous prostration or brain-fag? There may be a variety of reasons but one thing is certain.

If the food is deficient in Phosphate of Potash the gray matter in the nerve centres and brain cannot be rebuilt each day to make good the cells broken down by the activities of yesterday.

Phosphate of Potash is the most important element Nature demands to unite albumin and water to make gray matter.

Grape-Nuts food is heavy in Phosphate of Potash in a digestible form.

A chicken can't always select its own food, but a thoughtful man can select suitable food for his children, wife and himself.

ARE MICROBES IN YOUR SCALP

It Has Been Proved That Microbes Cause Baldness.

Proffessor Unna, of Hamburg, Germany, and Dr. Seabourand, the leading French dermatologist, discovered that a microbe causes baldness. Their Theory has time and again been amply verified through research experiments carried on under the observation of eminent scientists. The microbe lodges in the Sebum, which is the natural hair oil, and when permitted to flourish it destroys the hair folices and in time the pores entirely close, and the scalp gradually takes on a skiny appearance. When this happens there is no hope of the growth of the hair being revived.

We have a remedy which, will, we honestly believe, remove dandruff, exterminate the microbe, promote good circulation in the scalp and around the hair roots, tighten and revitalize the hair roots, and overcome baldness, so long as there is any life left in the hair roots.

We back up this statement with our own personal guarantee that this remedy called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will be supplied free of all cost to the user if it fails to do as we state.

It will frequently help to restore gray and faded hair to its original color, providing loss of color has been caused by disease; yet it is in no sense a dye. Rexall "93" Hair Tonic accomplishes these results by aiding in making every hair roof, folicle, and pigment gland strong and active, and by stimulating a natural flow of coloring pigment through the hair cells.

We exact no obligation or promises—we simply ask you to give Rexall "93" Hair Tonic a thorough trial and if not satisfied tell us and we will refund the money you paid vs for it. Two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain it in Clanton only at our store—The Rexall Store. Upchurch Drug Co.

GROUND BROKEN FOR HANDSOME STRUCTURE

Ground has been broken for the erection of a handsome office building by Dr. Earle Gowan on Seventh street and Second Ave. Dr. Gowan has let the contract to Mr. Craver for the erection of the building, a handsome two story brick and concrete affair, and for the placing of cement sidewalks on Seventh street and Second and Third Avenues. The work will be pushed vigorously until completed after which work will be begun on the new hotel building.

PURCHASED WRIGHT PROPERTY.

Last week Mr. Joe. P. VanDeveer Jr., purchassd of the Wright estate the lot of land on the south side of Main street upon which he proposes in the near future to erect two or more handsome buildings for mercantile uses. For years this property has stood unoccupied and the erection of store houses thereon will add greatly to the appearance of the business part of town.

BOOKS BEING EXAMINED

Mr. Johnson of Birmingham, an expert connected with the Audit Company, is in Clanton checking up the books of the several city officers. As soon as the report is made and filed with the Mayor the public will be given the secret of why the various accounts against the city have not been promptly settled. The PRESS learns that there are quite a number of citizens who pay no privilege or property taxes and that a large proportion of those who do pay are assessed at ridiculously low values, the assessments in many instances being less than half of the amount of insurance carried; it is a well known fact that one cannot secure more than three fourths the value of property insured, hence if the tax value is but half of the insurance values then the assessed values are somewhat less than one half of the actual value. Besides this there is scarcely a person in Clanton who carries insurance on every article of property, therefore it is plainly discernable that the assessed values are greatly lower than half the real value.

This should not be; those who have not paid taxes at all should be made to bear their proportionate share of the burden and those who pay greatly less than their proportionate share should be required to assess their property at an equitable figure. If this were done there would be no cry of dark streets, poor sidewalks or stagnant water pools in the heart of the city.

A LETTER FROM MR. HICKS.

Verbena, Ala., April 8, 1912

Editor of the Press:—

Please allow me space for a short letter in your highly valued paper this week.

1st. I want to compliment the Editor for the help I consider him to be, and has already been, to the democratic party. I believe if all the people in Chilton would read the paper he edits, there would not be many republicans by November in Chilton county. I also think the democratic nominees are all gentlemen and should be honored with a solid democratic vote in November. As to myself when I cast a vote it will be for the upbuilding of the democratic party.

Yours truly,

L. M. Hicks.

DEATH OF MR. JASPER COX

A WELL KNOWN RESIDENT OF CLANTON.

Last Saturday afternoon at his home two miles west of Clanton, just as the shades of evening were falling, the spirit of Jasper Cox took its flight into the great beyond and grief bowed hearts closed his eyes in endless sleep. Mr. Cox had been ill for several weeks, suffering with pneumonia, but great hope was entertained even to the last that this well known citizen would rally and finally regain his wanted health and strength. While the summons was not altogether unexpected it was nevertheless a severe shock to his friends and loved ones.

Mr. Cox was in the very prime of life; he had an interesting family to whom he was devoted. A farmer by profession he had given his entire time to the tilling of the soil and had accumulated a fair competency. He numbered his friends by the number of his acquaintances. All that was mortal of Jasper Cox was laid to rest last Sunday afternoon in Clanton cemetery where he awaits the final resurrection morn.

He is survived by a wife and four children besides numerous relatives to whom the sympathy of the entire community is extended in their sad hour.

GRATEFUL THANKS.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to my friends for their cordial support; though not nominated, I feel that I have just cause to be proud of the endorsement received at the polls; not only that, but I want to thank the people of Chilton County for the kindness shown me when I made the canvass. I want to say that I was defeated by a man for whom it will be a pleasure to me to vote in the general election; and I hope that everyone who voted for me in the primary will give him the same enthusiastic endorsement in the coming November. Will say that I want each one to know I am proud that I was defeated by as nice man as is Mr. Oden, for we worked the county and everything was pleasant; not a word was said that was not good in trying to defeat each other. And since he got the nomination over me, I will say if you feel that you dont want Mr. W. M. Oden to be your next Tax Collector, my advice will be to you get your suit case ready and hit the road for he is going in. Again I thank one and all for the support you gave me. Yours truly,

J. W. P. Murphy.

INTERESTING NEWS

TO BE GIVEN LATER

The PRESS thought it had two or three items of interesting Court news which it would be able to give to its readers this week but in each instance those who have matters in charge requested "yet a little while" before you publish anything about it.

The PRESS man is friendly to all the court officials, to the attorneys and all the employees at the court house and sometimes it is hard to understand why news should be withheld or a request made for its suppression 'till after it becomes stale; 'till everybody in the county knows all about it and like salt which has lost its savor is fit only to be trodden unde foot; but in deference to our friends we excluded those items from last issue, however we make [illegible] to the PRESS this week we feel that we should give it to them as it occurs and not after it has grown grey with age.

VERBENA.

Editor Press—I have been greatly pleased at the return to the democratic fold of the various good men as attested by tneir recent letters in the Press. This to me is not unexpected since a populite is only a dissatisfied republican or democrat, usually the latter.

Our county ticket are all good men, but we should remember there are good men offering on the republican side for the various offices, and let us all be broad and big enough to leave off dirty politics, and argue our cause from a high plane, for "while the lamp holds out to burn the vilest sinner may return." Many unpleasant things have in past years been said against our returning friends, yet they are "saved" and our party honored by their coming, there "are others" yea many others, whom we invite and I would be delighted to see back in the party of their fathers.

To our nominees I wish to say, push forward to success and let us put Chilton in the ranks of Democracy where all white southern men should be, while pushing your claim as the nominee of the democratic party, yet be generous to your political opponent and his friends remembering always the right of free thought and free speech guaranteed us by the Constitution.

To the defeated candidates in the recent primary will say, come on good boys and help us many of whom tried to help you, most of you are yet young and you will yet, we hope, have another chance in which you may be successful.

To the Press I say, be merciful, but keep up the fight for right and success will crown your efforts. I am not all surprised at the merging of the other two papers, they should have been this for years past, yea always.

F. A. Gulledge.

CARD OF THANKS.

I take this opportunity to publicly express my sincere thanks to my friends for the loyal support given me in the recent primary election; if elected I shall endeavor to so conduct the affairs of the office in a way that will merit a continuance of your confidence and good will.

To those who saw fit to cast their ballot for my opponent, you exercised a right that is yours, you voted for an honorable worthy gentleman whom I would have supported with pleasure had he won the nomination over me, but since I have received the nomination, I kindly ask that you give me your enthusiastic support and cooperation; with it I feel certain of my election in November. Again thanking you I am

Yours respectfully,

W. A. Kemp.

Moulton, Ala., April 16.—(Special)—The Lawrence county board of revenue met in special session here Saturday to open bids for road bonds which were authorized at an election held in this county on March 18. Bids were received from a number of financial institutions and all offered a premium for the bonds. A Birmingham firm offered $2510.00 premium, John Huveen & Co., of Chicago, submitted two bids, one offering $3250.00 premium for the issue of $123.000.00. This proposition was that the county take up the entire amount of the issue at once and begin bearing interest at issue. The other bid by the same company was to pay a premium of $2750.00 and give the county the privilege of placing the bonds as the work on the roads progressed and as the money was needed. This proposition will save the county quite a little sum in interest.

Work will begin on surveying the proposed roads just as soon as the weather settles and the roads dry out so that the engineers can get along.

MEMORIAL DAY SERVICES

TO BE APPROPRIATELY OBSERVED

On Friday afternoon April 26th at the Court House the Daughters of the Confederacy will appropriately observe "Decoration Day." The first part of the services will be held at the Court House at which time Hon. J. Osmond Middleton will deliver an address and suitable musical program will be rendered. At the conclusion of the services at the court house a line of march will be formed and proceed to the cemetery where the graves of all old Confederate soldiers will be decorated with flowers. Would it not be appropriate for the business houses of Clanton to close during these exercises? They do so everywhere else and it would assuredly be an object lesson to the younger generations to know that the old soldiers of the Lost Cause are still held in veneration by those who knew them [illegible]

A MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT

The hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Adams was again the scene of a delightful entertainment, when their attractive young daughter, Miss Sarah, entertained with a "Musicale" in honor of Miss Margaret Watson and the members of her music club. This lovely home was further beautified with an elaborate placing of ferns and spring blossoms.

The library, where the musical program was rendered, was beautifully decorated in dogwood and scarlet verbena, carrying out the club colors of scarlet and white.

The following program was rendered:

Song of Praise (Gallico) Willie B. Jones and Miss Watson.

March of the Sages (Matthews) Myrtle Roberts.

Just a Bunch of Flowers (Spaulding) Margie Murphy.

Slumber Song (Newcomb) Alice Stanfield.

A Ray of Sunshine (Bugbee) Mary Sue Mullins.

Where the Daisies Grow (Greenwald) Roberta Curry.

Sketch of Mendelssohn, Izora Callen.

Best of Friends (Engelmann) Eleanora Teel.

Rosy Fingers (Wachs) Pauline Woodyard.

Grace (St. Joseph) Annie Gragg.

Waltz (Chopin) Mary Curry.

After the program, the little folks engaged in a unique guessing contest, the fortunate guesser being Miss Roberta Curry, who was presented with a beautiful piece of sash ribbon.

All present were charmed with several piano solos, skillfully rendered by Miss Watson, the efficient teacher of the music class. Too much praise cannot be given her for her strict attention to duty, and the painstaking ability with which she has managed her class during the entire year, and each patron and member of the class are desirous of her return for another year.

Before departing, the guests were invited into the dining room, where a delicious ice course was served.

CARD OF THANKS.

Editor of The Press—I want to thank the 198 voters who supported me in the primary on the 1st inst. I asked no one to support me who could not do it conscientiously, I am sure you did it through the right motive; I thank you and will be glad to shake your hand when I meet you.

We were beaten beaten fairly, I have great faith in the people, they may make mistakes sometime still we have nothing safer to guide us than "the voice of the people" in the selection of our officers.

I am satisfied with the result of the election, I regard the nominees as competent and safe men of whom we might be proud, and not least among them is my friend Williams whom I will gladly support.

A MENACE TO HEALTH

STAGNANT WATFR SHOULD HAVE OUTLET

Almost within a stone's throw of the church house, even closer to the Court House and within arm's length of several residences in the heart of the city there is a large hollow in which water has stood for the past several months with no attempt made to drain it. Just whose business it is to have this pond drained the PRESS does not undertake to say but that it is someone's business no one will deny. In some places that pond of water has been waist deep; boxes, and other refuse have been thrown into it and permitted to float around at random. Summer time is fast approaching; mosquitoes will soon be in evidence and a mosquito would have no better summer home than is furnished by this pond. It would breed enough mosquitoes in a week to supply the south for a season; that pond would cause enough sickness to almost depopulate the town; enough money will probably be spent for medicine because of it to fill it in level and make a beautiful summer park.

A Believer.

Gifford Pinchott, at his brother's house, in Park avenue, New York, listened quizzically to a political story that was being submitted to him for verification nby a popular reporter.

"When the reporter finished his narrative Mr. Pinchot laughed and said:

"I'll reply to that as the old Italian peasant replied to the statement that his fellow-countryman loved birds too well ever to eat them:

"'Well, I don't mind believing that myself,' the old man said, 'but there's a good many who wouldn't.'"

What He Wanted to Say.

A teacher who had taken great trouble to impress every detail of the history lesson upon his class was sadly disappointed, on asking the name of the king who reigned previous to Queen Victoria, to find only one hand upheld.

"Boys," said the teacher sternly pointing as he spoke to the boy whose anxious desire to impart the necessary information compelled him to use strenuous efforts to increase his diminutive stature, "one of your intelligent little schoolfellows will tell you what none of you have the brains to know. Although the youngest in the class, his is an example that it would be a credit for many of you to emulate. Now, then, Johnny, tell them."

"Please, teacher, Jim Mills bin and rammed a pin into me!"

Then the intelligent little boy sat down.—London Weekly Telegraph.

COFFEE HURTS

One in Three.

It is difficult to make people believe that coffee is a poison to at least one person out of every three, but people are slowly finding it out, although thousands of them suffer terribly before they discover the fact.

A New York hotel man says: "Each time after drinking coffee I became restless, nervous and excited, so that I was unable to sit five minutes in one place, was also inclined to vomit and suffer from loss of sleep, which got worse and worse.

"A lady said that perhaps coffee was the cause of my trouble, and suggested that I try Postum. I laughed at the thought that coffee hurt me, but she insisted so hard that I finally had some Postum made. I have been using it in place of coffee ever since, for I noticed that all my former nervous pain and irritation disappeared. I began to sleep perfectly, and the Postum tasted as good or better than the old coffee, so what was the use of sticking to a beverage that was injuring me?

"One day on an excursion up the country I remarked to a young lady friend on her greatly improved appearance. She explained that some time before she had quit using coffee and taken to Postum. She had gained a number of pounds and her former palpitation of the heart, humming in the ears, trembling of the hands and legs and other disagreeable feelings had disappeared, she recommended me to quit coffee and take Postum and was very much surprised to find that I had already made the change.

"She said her brother had also received great benefits from leaving off coffee and using Postum." "There's a reason."

STARTED THE BALL ROLLING

Artist, Guest of Honor at Dinner, Rose to the Occasion When Conversation Flagged.

Robert Henri, the noted artist, paused before a landscape at the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts and said:

"Dawb, who painted this, has sprung from humble circumstances to great wealth and eminence.

"Dawb made his first success in Paris. He was diffident and abashed in those days. When he would sally out from his garret in the Rue Vaugirard to a duchess' in the Avenue de Champs Elysees or a princess' in the Rue de l'Universite, his heart would be in his mouth.

"They said that once, at a dinner party at Philiard's, Dawb, the guest of honor, didn't open his mouth from the marennes vertes to the souffle.

"Finally, when the dessert came on, the beautiful and elegant hostess smiled and said:

"'Come, dear M. Daub, do say something!'

"Dawb blushed at this challenge, racked his brain and stammered, with a bashful smile:

"'Have you noticed, ladies and gentlemen, that this year's pawn tickets are all green?'"

PIMPLES ON FACE 3 YEARS

"I was troubled with acne for three long years. My face was the only part affected, but it caused great disfigurement, also suffering and loss of sleep. At first there appeared red, hard pimples which later contained white matter. I suffered a great deal caused by the itching. I was in a state of perplexity when walking the streets or anywhere before the public.

"I used pills and other remedies but they failed completely. I thought of giving up when nothing would help, but something told me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a Cuticura Booklet which I read carefully. Then I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and by following the directions I was relieved in a few days. I used Cuticura Soap for washing my face, and applied the Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. This treatment brought marvelous results so I continued with it for a few weeks and was cured completely. I can truthfully say that the Cuticura Remedies are not only all, but more than they claim to be." (Signed) G. Baumel, 1015 W. 20th Place, Chicago, Ill., May 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

1,304 SOULS FILL A WATERY GRAVE

TITANIC, LARGEST OCEAN LINER IN THE WORLD GOES TO BOTTOM OF SEA.

ONLY 866 WERE SAVED

Liner Sank After Striking Iceberg. Now Lies Over Two Miles Under Water.

FACTS ABOUT THE TITANIC

- The world's biggest ship.
- Length, 882 1-2 feet.
- Displacement, 66,000 tons.
- Register, 46,000.
- Beam, 97 1-2 feet.
- Depth, 94 feet.
- Carrying capacity, 3,500 persons.
- Crew, 860 officers and men.
- Average speed, 28 miles an hour.
- The cost of the great ship runs into millions and she is fitted up like a palace with tennis courts, palm gardens, Turkish and electric baths, bath room, winter gardens, and "regal" suites. This was her first voyage.

Boston.—A wireless message picked up relayed from the Olympic says that the Carpathia is on her way to New York with 866 passengers from the steamer Titanic aboard. They are mostly women and children, the message said, and it concluded:

"Grave fears are felt for the balance of the passengers and crew."

While the fate of the maority of the 2,100 persons on board the mammoth White Star Titanic, which sank on the New Foundland Banks after a collision with an iceberg, still remains in doubt, and it is feared that 1,200 persons were lost, a note of good cheer came from the ocean ways by wireless.

It was in the shape of a wireless message from the White Star liner Olympic, one of the vessels hovering near the scene of the disaster, flashing the news that 866 of the Titanic's passengers, mostly women and children, were being brought to port by the Cunard liner Carpathia. Other messages later brought confirmatory tidings.

First reports were that the Carpathia had saved but 675 persons. The new figures reduced the list of those for whose fate fear was felt by nearly 200, and if, as seems probable, practically all those saved were passengers, it would appear that all but approximately 450 of the vessel's passengers were accounted for. A partial list of the survivors received from the Carpathia includes the names of many women of prominence who were on the steamer.

After the first desperate calls of the Titanic for help had been sent flying through space and brought steamers for hundreds of miles around speeding to the scene, what seems to have been an impenetrable wall of silence was raised between her and the anxious world. The giant liner, so far as advices appear, went to her fate without so much as a whisper of what must have been a scene of terrible tragedy enacted on her decks.

In the lack of even a line from a survivor, imagination pauses before even trying to conjecture what passed as the inevitable became known and it was seen that of the more than 2,000 human lives with which she was freighted there could be no hope of saving, as it appears, far less than half.

Accepting the early estimates of the fatality list as accurate, the disaster is the greatest in the marine history of the world. Nearest approaching it in magnitude were the disasters to the steamer Atlantic in 1873, when 574 lives were lost, and La Bourgoyne, in 1898, with a fatality list of 571.

Notable persons, travelers on the Titanic, whose fate was in doubt in the lack of definite advices as to the identity of the survivors, were: Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Major Archibald Butt, Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of Canada, his wife and daughter, W. T. Snead, Benjamin Guggenheim, F. D. Millet, the artist, and John G. Wisner, M. D., of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Strauss, J. B. Thayer, vice-president of the Pennsylvania railroad; J. Bruce Ismay, Henry B. Harris, the theatrical manager, and Mrs. Harris, and Col. Washington Roebling, builder of the Brooklyn bridge.

New York.—The Titanic was insured at Lloyds for $5,000,000, according to advices from London, and it was said here that the International Mercantile Marine company also carried a surplus fund for insurance purposes which could be applied to the loss. The cost of building the great liner has been estimated at $10,000,000. [illegible]

Women

From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, the numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache was nervous, irritable and very despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you for the good of others."—Mrs. Estella Gillispie, R.F.D. SEVERE SICKNESS LEAVES THE KIDNEYS WEAK

After recovering from a severe spell of sickness some time ago, I was all run down and suffering from poor blood. I would have pains in my back and hips and my kidneys bothered me all the time. I started taking Swamp-Root upon the recommendation of a friend and found it was just what I needed. My blood became all right and after taking a few bottles, I was surprised at the effect it had on my kidneys. They were entirely cured and I have much to be thankful for that your great remedy did for me.

Yours very truly,
W. O. BLACKMON,
Phenix City, Ala.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this the 14th day of July, 1909.
W. J. BIES, Justice of the Peace.

WHAT WILL CURE MY BACK?

Common sense will do more to cure backache than anything else. 'Twill tell you whether the kidneys are sore, swollen and aching. It will tell you in that case that there is no use trying to cure it with a plaster. If the passages are scant or too frequent, proof that there is kidney trouble is complete. Then common sense will tell you to use Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended special kidney remedy.

A TYPICAL CASE—

Fred A. Campbell, Atlantic Ave., Boothbay Harbor, Me., says: "I cannot describe the awful pain I endured. The kidneys were in terrible condition; pain in voiding urine was intense and often I passed blood. For weeks I was laid up in bed. Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cured me after I had doctored without relief."

EASTER TRADE WAS FAIR ON THE WHOLE

Business Generally Better Than Last Year.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Trade and industrial developments are largely favorable and conservative optimism predominates. Jobbing trade reports include advices of a quieting of spring demand at large eastern centers, with attention turning to late summer and fall trade, but of an improvement nearer points of final distribution, except, as in the lower Mississippi valley, where high water holds back agricultural operations and retards sales to country merchants. Easter trade was irregular, but fair on the whole, and generally better than last year. In industrial lines features are the continuous idleness of the country's coal miners pending possible settlements now under negotiations, the quieting down of the textile labor situation as advances are offered and accepted, and the prospects of an expenditure for building for the first quarter not much behind last year, but with a majority of cities still reporting decreases, however. In the iron and steel trades there is a higher level of prices ruling, with the growth of a feeling that this is, to a certain extent, curtailing some demand. It is also felt that higher prices for cotton goods and the backwardness of deliveries may have some effect upon future orders, those for summer and fall, which are engaging jobers' attention, now that regular spring demand has measurably quieted.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending April 11 were 234, against 261 last week, 223 in the like week of 1911, 205 in 1910, 201 in 1909 and 261 in 1908. Business failures in Canada for the week number 22, which contrasts with 23 last week and 28 in the like week of 1911.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending April 13, aggregate 2,613,286 bushels, against 3,421,542 last week and 1,633,502 this week last year. For the 41 weeks ending April 11 exports are 127,267,107 bushels, against 96,324,234 in the corresponding period last year. Corn exports for the week are 352,555 bushels against 384,300 last week, and 1,179,140 in 1911. For the 41 weeks ending April 11, corn exports are 31,758,477 bushels, against 42,213,131 last year.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

The principal industries and trades maintain their recent gains in activity, and an amount of business is carried on which, although still below the full limit of capacity, shows nevertheless, a distinct advance, and is on the whole very satisfactory. The good spring weather generally prevailing is producing renewed activity in building operations, which creates a larger demand for the various building materials. It also facilitates the distribution of merchandise, both wholesale and retail, and from a number of important points in the middle west and northwest come reports of expanding operations. With this general maintenance of the recent growth in industrial and trade activity, there is, also, a fairly steady continuance of the recent notable gains in business confidence, in spite of the temporary effect of passing events, which affect in some degree the speculative markets.

Mill operations continue to expand in iron and steel, and the leading interest is now running at over 90 per cent of capacity. Contracts have been placed by the car companies for about 60,000 tons of plates and shapes for delivery during the second and third quarters, and in the central west a scarcity of plates for early shipment has developed. Tin plate and sheet mills are booked almost to capacity, and in wire goods more activity is noted.

While the demand for cotton goods is somewhat less pronounced, the market rules very firm, and further advances have been named in a number of lines. Export trade is quieter because of price advances, and the heavy buying of recent weeks. All reports agree that trade in woolens and worsteds is fair, and probably will expand still further, as re-orders in fine dress fabrics for fall have already begun, tailors to the trade are duplicating and salesmen on the road are getting a better business than at this time a year ago. Cotton knitting yarns have advanced, and worsteds spinners are being pressed for deliveries.

Trading in footwear improved as the season advances, but there is no active buying, as most wholesalers are operating conservatively on account of high prices and unsettled styles. Leather maintains its recent rate of progress.

SWEET SLUMBER BROUGHT BACK

Mrs. White, Unable to Sleep, Tells How She Brought Back Natural Sleep.

Gastonia, N. C.—Mrs. Ellen White, of this city, says: "I suffered for several years with womanly troubles. I could not rest at night.

I began taking Cardui, the woman's tonic, and before I had finished one bottle I could sleep well. It just acted like a charm.

Since taking Cardui I have been in better health than for ten years. It is the best medicine I ever used. It did me more good than the doctors.

I can certainly recommend Cardui to all suffering women, for I have been greatly benefited by its use. It will build them up.

Cardui has been worth its weight in gold to me, for now I am well and hearty."

No matter how long-standing the trouble, Cardui will help. It is a tonic remedy. It is prepared for women to bring relief from womanly ailments.

It helps sleeplessness, one of the most common symptoms of nervous breakdown. It helps build nerves and system.

Made from strictly vegetable ingredients, it has no ill-effects on any organ of the body, but acts naturally, gently and safely.

You can rely on Cardui. It will do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

It will help you. Try it.

NOT HIM.

Preacher—Here, stop fighting, little boy.

Little Boy—What, stop, and my girl standing on the corner eyeing me! Not on your life! She'd think I was a quitter.

He Was the One.

A small boy with a rather lost and lonesome appearance walked into the county clerk's office at the court house. He gazed about him for a time and finally approached Deputy Henry Smiley.

"Please, sir," said the lad, timidly, "have you seen anything of a lady around here?"

"Why, yes, sonny," answered Smiley, "I've seen several."

"Well, have you seen any without a little boy?" as lad asked anxiously.

"Yes," replied Smiley.

"Well," said the little chap, as a relieved look crossed his face. "I'm the little boy. Where's the lady?"—Denver Post.

Altogether Too Late Now.

A lady who was anxious to obtain a good general servant applied at an intelligence office and was assured by the proprietor that she had just the person to suit. A raw-boned Irish woman some fifty years of age came forward.

"Well," said the lady, after a short conversation, "I would be very glad to engage you, but—"

"But what, pray?"

"Well, you see I wanted one who is—who is rather younger."

"An' indade!" exclaimed the woman, folding her arms and glaring indignantly, "it's a pity the good Lord didn't make me in the yare to suit your convanience."

A BLOOD MEDICINE WITHOUT ALCOHOL.

Recently it has been definitely proven by experiments on animals that alcohol lowers the germicidal power of the body and that alcohol paralyzes the white corpuscles of the blood and renders them unable to take up and destroy disease germs. Disease germs cause the death of over one-half of the human race.

A blood medicine, made entirely without alcohol, which is a pure glyceric extract of roots, such as Bloodroot, Queen's root, Golden Seal root, Mandrake and Stone root, has been extensively sold by druggists for the past forty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

Miss Hazen.

"It is with the greatest of pleasure, that I write to let you know of the great benefit I received from the use of your medicines and self-treatment at home," writes Miss. Wm. Hazen, of Ladysmith, B.C. "I suffered for three years from a running sore. Consulted four doctors but they failed to mend or give relief. Finally I was told I was in consumption and would have to consult a specialist concerning my case, that the dead bone must be cut out before the wound would heal. A kind friend advised me to write to Dr. Pierce, which I did, and after seven months' use of his medicines the sore is healed, and I enjoy better health than I ever did. I dressed the wound with Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve and took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' for my troubles. I shall always recommend your medicines."

These seems to be days of democratic success; days when the people are determined to rule. Kansas City has just elected a democratic Mayor though that city is nominally republican, being controlled by the "meat combine;" Chicago has overthrown ring rule and elected Harrison's ticket by a flattering majority. Milwaukee has repudiated Socialism and is going back to its old love; the State of Maine has elected a democratic Senator for the first time in a generation and in all parts of the country goes up the cry "give us democrats for officials and we will show you how to reduce the cost of living; we will throttle the money barons and turn the tide of financial prosperity into those channels which will reach the poorer classes rather than have them run into the coffers of the "mighty rich" as they have for these many months. We have heard of no democratic section going republican but we have heard of many republican sections going democratic. The people are in the saddle and will ride to victory. The day of demagogueism, the rule of the trusts, the domination of the money barons and the encumbence of republicans in office has come to an end here as well as elsewhere. If you wish to be with the winners its time you were reading the signs of the times and aligning yourselves with democracy.

The sinking of the monster ocean grey-hound Titanic off the coast of New Foundland last Sunday morning will go down in history as the greatest sea catastrophe of all time. Besides the loss of more than a thousand lives over twenty millions of property was destroyed. The ship had on board ten men whose combined wealth totalled something over a quarter of a billion dollars and everyone was lost except one according to latest reports.

Don't be alarmed at the frequent rains. Remember it rained forty days and forty nights once and the world survived it. We can do it also, if we try. Moral: plant CORN and pork.

The republicans held a sort of secret caucus last Monday to appoint inspectors, clerks and returning officers for their approaching primary.

If this "pretty" weather continues the republicans "may" get six hundred votes, but if we get wet weather there's no telling.

The state convention should adopt ringing resolutions for Underwood, elect the judges and delegates and adjourn. There is no occasion for contention just now and it will result in harm.

Candidates in the recent primary should semember that they have but two more days in which to file with the Probate Judge an itemized expense account.

The torrential rains of the past few days have made things look rather gloomy for the average farmer, but be not dismayed; it may prove a blessing in disguise. The farmers of Texas thought they were ruined on the appearance of the boll weevil, but after all it proved to be a great blessing. It demonstrated to them that there were other things to be grown besides cotton. If these continued rains would just show to the average cotton farmer that corn, meat, potatoes and other small grain and vegetables are in great demand, and would force them to raise more, the rains would, after all be a God-send in more ways than one.

As we go to press the democratic state convention is in session; we have been unable to get any definite news from them but a grape vine wire tells us that everything is working harmoniously. Congressman Henry D. Clayton of Barbour, was made temporary Chairman and Hon. H. S. D. Mallory of Dallas, recently defeated for the nomination for Governor, was made permanent Chairman. The convention is unanimous for Oscar W. Underwood for President. Besides the election of two Supreme Court Judges, and the formulation of a few resolutions there is nothing else for the convention to do except elect delegates to the National convention.

A DAMAGING REPORT OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Present Teaching of Missions Merely Morals—Not Christ.

Religion Has Been Cut Out and Education Substituted—$30,000,000 Multiplied a Thousand Times Would Accomplish Little Respecting the Conversion of the World—Nothing Short of Christ's Kingdom Can Do It.

PASTOR RUSSELL

New York, March 31.—The International Bible Students Association secured the Hippodrome in which to hear the Report of its Committee on Foreign Missions 'Investigation. The spacious auditorium was crowded. Prof. F. H. Robison, Secretary of the Committee, announced that the Report had been submitted to the Association and was in the printer's hands, to appear in pamphlet form illustrated at the small price of five cents per copy, postpaid—free to the poor. The conclusion of the Report is in the nature of a Summary, which he read. Some of its salient points are:—

Christianizing endeavors seem pretty generally to have ceased! Present missionary endeavors are almost exclusively along the line of secular education and medical aid.

There is less need of Academic and Collegiate education, such as the missionaries forward, than for Common Schooling.

The Orientals are often perplexed at the Missionary competition and opposition between Christian denominations.

Orientals are not heathen-savages, but their educated classes include splendid specimens of noble manhood, the moral and intellectual peers of Europeans and Americans.

The very suggestion of the world's conversion is ridiculous to the peoples of the East—including the Missionaries • • • The interest on $30,000,000, or the principal multiplied a thousand times, would accomplish little except along the lines of secular education—nothing as respects the world's conversion.

Pastor Russell's Hippodrome Address.

Text: Ask of Me and I will give Thee the heathen for an inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth."—Ps. viii, 2.

This text has been before the Pastor's mind continually during his world's tour.

(1) Why call the people of India, China and Japan heathens, since they are not barbarians but civilized? We follow the Bible, which uses the word heathen, Gentiles and nations interchangeably, and applies these terms to all except the Jewish nation and the Christian Church. The reason for this is that only Israel spiritual and Israel natural have thus far entered into covenant relationship with God.

The Pastor's second question was, To what extent is our Western civilization superior to that of the East?

He admitted that much could be said on both sides; that in some respects each had superiority over the other. Now, however, the people of the East are tacitly admitting the superiority of the West by gradually adopting our standards for schools, government, etc.

The Pastor's third question was:—

To What Extent is Christian Civilization Blessing the World?

He considered it beyond question that a blessing had come to the world through the teachings of Jesus and the Apostles—to all who accept the Gospel message in truth and sincerity. These enjoy intelligently a peace of God such as others cannot know.

But aside from these footstep followers of Jesus, the Pastor queried whether the remainder of mankind under Christian civilization were happier than those under heathen religions, such as Buddhism. What he had seen of India, China and Japan led him to believe that the 700,000,000 of these lands are more contented, more happy than are the peoples of Europe and America, even though they possess little of the wealth of the world.

What is the Reason For This?

Pastor Russell's answer is, It is because the teachings of Jesus and the Apostles, in line with the teachings of Moses and the Prophets, the teaching of human equality, begets a love of liberty and a contention for it. They get enough from Christ's teachings to arouse and awaken them, but not enough to sanctify them. This was the intimation of the Great Teacher, "Think not that I am come to send peace upon the earth; I tell you, Nay, but a sword!"—Matthew x, 34.

"I Will Give Thee the Heathen."

At the beginning of this Age our Redeemer prayed for the Church, saying, "I pray not for the world (the heathen), but for those whom Thou hast given Me, that they may all be one." It has required this entire Age to find this elect company, and they will be made one by the glorious change of the First Resurrection.

Then will come the time when Jesus will pray for the world, as intimated in our text, and then the world will be given to Him. Since the exaltation of Himself eighteen centuries ago, He has been gathering His Church, His Bride, to be His associates in the Kingdom, which, according to Isaiah's prophecy, will open its doors of blessing to the world of the heathen.

Guard Your Children Against Bowel Trouble

Many children at an early age become constipated, and frequently serious consequences result. Not being able to realize his own condition, a child's bowels should be constantly watched, and a gentle laxative given when necessary. Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are especially well adapted to women and children. The Sisters of Christian Charity, 531 Charles St., Luzerne, Pa., who attend many cases of sickness say of them:

"Some time ago we began using Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets and find that we like them very much. Their action is excellent and we are grateful for having been made acquainted with them. We have had good results in every case and the Sisters are very much pleased."

The form and flavor of any medicine is very important, no matter who is to take it. The taste and appearance are especially important when children are concerned. All parents know how hard it is to give the average child "medicine," even though the taste is partially disguised. In using Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, however, this difficulty is overcome. The shape of the tablets, their appearance and candy-like taste at once appeal to any child, with the result that they are taken without objection.

The rich chocolate flavor and absence of other taste, make Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets the ideal remedy for children.

If the first box fails to benefit, the price is returned. Ask your druggist. A box of 25 doses costs only 25 cents. Never sold in bulk.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

The murder mysteries of Lewisburg, Alabama, have at last been partially cleared. Confessions were obtained from Arthur and Walter Jones, brothers, in which they acknowledged to nine murders. It is thought that the Jones brothers will make further confessions which will result in clearing all of the mysterious Beat 13 murders. The murdered persons were usually by officers of the law.

One of the boldest bank robberies that has occurred in North Carolina in many a day was enacted here when yeggmen slipped into town, forced an entrance to the Bank of Orange, at Hillsboro, N. C., and with nitro-glycerin blew the vault and inner doors and took from the institution between $4,000 and $5,000 in gold and currency. The bank vault was swept practicaly clean, the robbers leaving behind only a few $20 bills and some small silver. Bank papers were not disturbed.

Resolutions urging the appropriation by congress of $1,000,000 annually until the completion of the Panama canal and $50,000 annually thereafter for land reclamation and other purposes and calling for an immediate conference in Washington of the executive committee and officers of the National Drainage Congress were unanimously adopted by the delegates of thirty-three states and four foreign countries attending the National Drainage conference in New Orleans.

The Southern Commercial Congress in session at Nashville, Tenn., elected the following officers: President, Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida; first vice president, David R. Francis of St. Louis; second vice president, Thomas S. Southgate of Norfolk, Va.; resident director, William H. Saunders, Washington; managing director, S. Grosvenor Dawe, Washington; secretary-treasurer, Clarence J. Owens, Riverdale, Md.

The state of Alabama will appeal the railroad rates case of the Louisville and Nashville, South and North Alabama, and Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad to the United States supreme court. This will be done with the hope that a reversal of the decree indorsed by Judge Thomas G. Jones of the United States court, which granted an injunction against the enforcement of the 2 1-2-cent passenger and 1.10 commodity freight rates, may be obtained.

The yellow torrent of the Mississippi river, rushing southward, tore another great gash in the dikes guarding the fertile acres of the valley. The crevasse occurred sixty miles north of Memphis, in the embankment that held the stream off the central part of St. Francis levee territory in Arkansas. This new breach that had seemed imminent for a week or more simply adds to the great flood reach in northeast Arkansas. Already part of the district had been inundated.

General.

The steamship, the Titanic, called "C. Q. D.," and reported having struck an iceberg, The steamer said that immediate assistance was required. Half an hour afterwards another message came reporting that they were sinking by the head and that women were being put off in the lifeboats. The Marconi station at Cape Race, N. F., notified the Allan liner Virginian, the captain of which immediately advised that he was proceeding to the scene of the disaster.

Taft and Roosevelt men in Michigan politics refused any basis of compromise after 24 hours of conference in Bay City, at the state Republican convention. Two sets of leaders and delegates, Taft and Roosevelt, fought out their issues to the point where the state militia were needed to maintain a semblance of orderly procedure.

Thousands of persons have been killed and whole Indian villages have been swept away by the eruption of Chriqui Peak near Bocal del Toro, in Honduras. The eruption occurred on April 5, about 4 o'clock in the morning. The shock of the eruption is being felt at Culebra Cut, Panama canal, and men on the Fort Morgan say that the water in the cut has risen two feet within the past few days. They attribute this to volcanic action.

Mme. Lina Cavaleiri, the former wife of Robert Winthrop Chanler of New York, will shortly be married to Lucian Muratore, tenor at the Paris opera, and the couple will sing in opera in America.

In a speech at Fort Wayne, Ind., Col. Roosevelt said if he was beaten this time he would run again.

Frank Law, the parachute jumper, who recently made a successful leap from the statue of liberty, performed another sensational feat in jumping from the top of the 29-story Bankers' Trust building at Wall and Nassau streets in New York.

STATE NEWS OF INTEREST

MINOR HAPPENINGS IN ALABAMA CITIES, TOWNS AND VILLAGES.

IONES BROTHERS CONFESS

Well Known Characters of Bloody Beat Tell of Series of Gruesome Murders.

Birmingham.—Walter and Arthur Jones, the two brothers held under indictment for the murder of John Holland, a negro, on June 16, 1911, on Cat Mountain, in the western part of Jefferson County, and who have been under suspicion for participation in the large number of mysterious murders which occurred in and around Coalburg, Arcadia, Lewisburg and other places in Beats 22, 50 and 18, have made a statement to Solicitor Heflin, Special Attorney Borden Burr, Chief Deputy Sheriff Walter Metcalfe, and others, confessing to the numerous crimes laid at their door. The story of the crime, burglary, robbery and murder is the most startling ever before revealed and the attorneys and officers are now in possession of information that clears up practicaly every murder and other crime which has terrorized the western part of Jefferson County for several years, starting with the strike of 1904 and continuing until quite recently.

Gadsden.—Amos E. Goodhue, of Gadsden, is addressing other attorneys of the State with a view to having them join him in a request to the supreme court of Alabama to change the rules so that cases going before the supreme and appellate courts can be acted upon in thirty days' time, instead of waiting three or six months. Mr. Goodhue said justice was frequently cheated by the law's delay.

Opelika.—The Lee county commissioners have appropriated $4,000, which will be added to a similar amount by the state appropriation to build a model state highway, on the road from Opelika to Beulah. Engineer Keller of the state highway commission recently visited this county and explained the plans of the state in aiding in this work.

Clayton.—The circuit court of Barbour county closed its session, having done two weeks work in one. Judge A. H. Alston presided, to the satisfaction of the bar and the citizenship of the county. The grand jury remained in session for five days, returning 25 indictments, the greater number charging only minor offenses.

Tuskegee. — Twenty-one foreign countries, and thirty-six different missionary societies, representing sixteen different religious denominations were represented officially, or unofficially, at the International Conference on the Negro, which met at Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Alabama, April 17, 18 and 19.

Selma.—There is little doubt but a new industry in the shape of a shirt and overall factory will locate in this city during the next few weeks. A representative of the concern which will establish a branch plant spent a day in this city and is negotiating for a building in which to locate the plant.

Cuba.—The continuous rains, with consequent impassable roads, has brought the question of road improvement to the front as never before in Sumter county. All interests are suffering, and especially the farmers who cannot haul out any fertilizers to amount to anything.

Clayton.—The farmers in this county are fast getting their plantations into shape, and work is progressing finely. Cotton is being planted every day, and a strong and healthy stand of corn may everywhere be seen. There will be no decreased acreage in cotton in Barbour this year.

Huntsville.—Clarence Brazleton, 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Brazelton, fell in a tub of water in front of the house and was drowned before his mother or any of the neighbors could render assistance. The little fellow was beyond human aid when his predicament became known.

Clayton.—Mr. Thomas L. Crew, one of the most esteemed citizens in this county, died at his home near Mt. Andrew.

Montgomery. — Governor O'Neal granted a parole to George Bivins, who was sent up from Elmore county in 1910 to serve 10 years for attempt to murder. Executive clemency was extended to Bivins on the recommendation of the solicitor and the state board of pardons.

Gleard.—A local telephone company has been organized in Beale, this county, and an exchange will be installed at an early date. The exchange will begin with about 20 stations.

MEETING OF STATE MEDICOS

More Than 1,000 Are In Attendance at Convention Being Held in Birmingham.

Birmingham. — Prominent physicians from Alabama, Tennessee, Louisiana, Georgia and even from New York, are here attending the annual convention of the State Medical Association, which opened April 16 and will continue in session up to and including the 19th.

Subjects of intense interest not only in Alabama, but in other Southern states and in other parts of the country, were discussed.

Diseases which have been prevalent throughout the country recently were thoroughly delved into, among others meningitis.

Anniston.—It was announced that the Pearce-Kennedy feud cases, which were set for the present term of the city court of Anniston, will not be tried, but will go over to another term of court. The defendants are William K. Kennedy, father and grandfather of the slain men, Shelt and Sarge Kennedy; Ada Kennedy, his daughter; John Fowler and John Eaton, teamsters who were employed by Dr. John Pearce, who is said to have organized a conspiracy to kill the two men, for which he is now in the penitentiary under a life sentence. Cross Pearce, son of Dr. Pearce, who was convicted of complicity in the alleged conspiracy and given a sentence of 20 years, has been given a new hearing.

Uniontown.—At the most enthusiastic meeting in its history, the Boosters' Club of Uniontown, in session here, voted a subscription which assured Uniontown that the Gulf, Florida and Alabama would pass this place. There were in the neighborhood of 100 business men present, and they all contributed very liberally to the railroad fund. The secretary was authorized to wire the officials of the road that their proposition of $50,000 stock would be accepted, and Uniontown was prepared to put up the money when the company called for it.

Florala.—The potato club of the local farmers' club is preparing for the largest yield of potatoes in the history of the county. More than one hundred acres will be planted by the members of the club in the immediate vicinity of Florala. The club has just sent one of its members to Baldwin county for the purpose of studying conditions and methods in that county. This member will be of great benefit to the other members of the club t giving them the benefit of his trip.

Mobile.—Mobile is about ready to begin construction of steel sheds at its wharf, to extend from Dauphine street to St. Anthony. The contract states that work is to begin April 25. Mobile is making a strenuous effort to forge to the front as a gulf port for the landing of Panama canal business. An appropriation adequate to the need for improving the ship channel has been included in a bill introduced in congress.

Florence.—When conditions are ready for plowing 105 boys of Lauderdale county will enter the corn contest under the direction of County Superintendent of Education H. L Reeder. Mr. Reeder has been distributing high-grade corn free to the boys, and interest among the youngsters is very much encouraged. Next year, he stated, a number of girls' tomato clubs will be formed.

Guntersville.—The Marshall county grand jury, which has been sitting here, adjourned after finding 127 true bills, this being an unusually large number, most being for misdemeanors. The Guntersville branch of the Marshall circuit court is in session this week, and will hold for two weeks. A number of important cases are to be tried at this term.

Decatur.—Word has been received here of the shooting at Falkville, this county, of a man named Martin by Deputy Sheriff Sid S. Williams. Martin was shot in the temple, and the ball passed out through his neck.

Montgomery. — The various boards of trustees of the agricultural and normal schools met at the capital on April 18 for the purpose of submitting reports of the work accomplished by these institutions during the past year. In addition to considering the work of the year, the boards made plans for the future.

Montgomery. — Teachers' examinations in various parts of the state were held April 15 to 17. Questions were sent out by P. W. Hodges, secretary of the state board of examiners. Applicants for certificates to teach met at the place designated in their respective counties. The number seeking certificates is about as large as usual.

Talladega.—The Talladega county commissioners' court met here, and all bids received for constructing the Talladega county model highway were considered too high, the rejection being made by State Highway Engineer R. P. Boyd. It was decided that the county would build the model highway under the supervision of the state highway engineer. The work will not start before August or September, as the county road department must receive shipment of its machinery first.

CHAPTER I.

The Young Lady From Philadelphia.

Miss Enid Maitland was a highly specialized product of the far east. I say far, viewing Colorado as a point of departure, not as identifying her with the orient. The classic shades of Bryn Mawr had been the "Groves of Academus where with old Plato she had walked." Incidentally during her completion of the exhaustive curriculum of that justly famous institution she had acquired at least a bowing acquaintance with other masters of the mind.

Nor had the physical in her education been sacrificed to the mental. In her at least the mens sana and the corpore sano were alike in evidence. She had ridden to hounds many times on the anise-scented trail of the West Chester Hunt! Exciting tennis and leisurely golf had engaged her attention on the courts and greens of the Merion Cricket club. She had buffeted "Old Ocean's gray and melancholy waste" on the beach at Cape May and at Atlantic City.

Spiritually she was a devoted member of the Episcopal church, of the variety that abhors the word "Protestant" in connection therewith. Altogether she reflected great credit upon her pastors and masters spiritual and temporal and her up-bringing in the three departments of life left little to be desired.

Upon her graduation she had been at once received and acclaimed by the "Assembly Set" of Philadelphia, to which indeed she belonged unquestioned by right of birth and position—and there was no other power under heaven by which she could have effected entrance therein, at least that is what the outs thought of that most exclusive circle. The old home of the Maitlands overlooking Rittenhouse Square had been the scene of her debut. In all the refined and decorous gaities of Philadelphia's ultra-fastidious society she had participated. She had even looked upon money standardized New York in its delirium of extravagance, at least in so far as a sedate and well-born Philadelphia family could countenance such golden madness. During the year she had ranged like a conquerer—pardon the masculine appellation—between Palm Beach in the south and Bar Harbor in the north. Philadelphia was proud of her, and she was not unknown in those unfortunate parts of the United States which lay without.

In all this she had remained a frank, free, unspoiled young woman. Life was full of zest for her, and she enjoyed it with the most un-Pennsylvanian enthusiasm.

The second summer after her coming out found her in Colorado. Robert Maitland was one of the big men of the west. He had departed from Philadelphia at an early age and had settled in Colorado while it was still in the formative period. There he had grown up with the state. The Philadelphia Maitlands could never understand it or explain it. Bob Maitland must have been, they argued, a reversion to an ancient type, a throwback to some robber baron long antecedent to William Penn. And the speculation was true. The blood of some lawless adventurer of the past, discreetly forgot by the conservative section of the family, bubbled in his veins unchecked by the repressive atmosphere of his home and immediate environment.

He had thoroughly identified himself with his new surroundings and had plunged into all the activities of the west. During one period of his life he had actually served as sheriff of one of the border counties, and it was a rapid "bad man" indeed, who enjoyed any advantage over him when it came to drawing his "gun." His skill and daring had been unquestioned, he had made a name for himself which still abides, especially in the mountains where things yet remained almost as primitive as they had been from the beginning.

His fame had been accompanied by fortune, too; the cattle upon a thousand hills were his, the treasures of mines of fabulous richness were at his command. He lived in Denver in one of the greatest of the bonanza palaces on the hills of that city, confronting the snow-capped mountain range. For the rest he held stock in all sorts of corporations, was a director in numerous concerns and so on—the reader can supply the usual catalogue, they are all alike. He had married late in life and was the father of two little girls and a boy, the oldest sixteen and the youngest ten.

Going east, which he did not love, on an infrequent business trip, he had renewed his acquaintance with his brother and the one ewe lamb of his brother's flock, to-wit, the aforementioned Enid. He had been struck, as everybody was, by the splendid personality of the girl and had striven earnestly to disabuse her mind of the prevalent idea that there was nothing much worth while on the continent beyond the Allegheny except scenery.

"What you need, Enid, is a ride across the plains, a sight of real mountains, beside which these little foothills in Pennsylvania that people back here make so much of wouldn't be noticed. You want to get some of the spirited, glorious freedom of the west into your conservative straight-laced little body."

"In my day, Robert," reprovingly remarked his brother, Enid's father, "freedom was the last thing a young lady gently born and delicately nurtured would have coveted."

"Your day is passed, Steve," returned the younger Maitland with shocking carelessness. "Freedom is what every woman desires now, especially when she is married. You are not in love with anybody, are you, Enid?"

"With not a soul," frankly replied the girl, greatly amused at the colloquy between the two men, who, though mothered by the same woman, were as dissimilar as—what shall I say, the east is from the west? Let it go at that.

"That's all right," said her uncle, relieved apparently. "I will take you out west and introduce you to some real men and—"

"If I thought it possible," interposed Mr. Stephen Maitland in his most austere and dignified manner, "that my daughter," with a perceptible emphasis on the "my," as if he and not the daughter were the principal being under consideration, "should ever so far forget what belongs to her station in life and her family as to allow her affections to become engaged by anyone who, from his birth and upbringing in the er—oh—unlicensed atmosphere of the western country would be persona non grata to dignified society of this ancient city and—"

"Nonsense," interrupted the younger brother bluntly. "You have lived here wrapped up in yourselves and your dinky little town so long that mental asphyxiation is threatening you."

"I will thank you, Robert," said his brother with something approaching the manner in which he would have repelled a blasphemy, "not to refer to Philadelphia as—er—what was your most extraordinary word?"

"'Dinky,' if my recollection serves."

"Ah, precisely. I am not sure as to the meaning of the term, but I conceive it to be something opprobrious. You can say what you like about me and mine, but of Philadelphia, no."

"Oh, the town's right enough," returned his brother, not at all impressed. "I'm talking about people now. There are just as fine men and women in the west as in New York or Philadelphia."

"I am sure you don't mean to be offensive, Robert, but really the association of ideas in your mention of us with that common and vulgar New York is er—un—pleasant," fairly shuddered the elder Maitland.

"I'm only urging you to recognize the quality of the western people. I dare say they are of a finer type than the average here."

"From your standpoint, no doubt," continued his brother severely and somewhat wearily as if the matter were not worth all this argument. "All that I want of them is that they stay in the west where they belong and not strive to mingle with the east; there is a barrier between us and them which it is not well to cross. To permit any intermixtures of er—race or—"

"The people out there are white, Steve," interrupted his brother sardonically. "I wasn't contemplating introducing Enid here to Chinese, or negroes, or Indians, or—"

"Don't you see," said Mr. Stephen Maitland, stubbornly waving aside this sarcastic and irrelevent comment, "from your very conversation the vast gulf that there is between you and me? Although you had every advantage in life that birth can give you, we are—I mean you have changed so greatly," he had quickly added, loathe to offend.

But he mistook the light in his brother's eyes; it was a twinkle, not a flash. Robert Maitland laughed, laughed with what his brother conceived to be indecorous boisterousness.

"How little you know of the bone and sinew of this country, Steve," he exclaimed presently. Robert Maitland could not comprehend how it irritated his stately brother to be called "Steve." Nobody ever spoke of him but as Stephen Maitland. "But Lord, I don't blame you," continued the westerner. "Any man whose vision is barred by a foothill couldn't be expected to know much of the main range and what's beyond."

"There isn't any danger of my falling in love with anybody," said Enid at last, with all the confidence of two triumphant social seasons. "I think I must be immune even to dukes," she said gaily.

"I referred to worthy young Americans of—" began her father who, to do him justice, was so satisfied with his own position that no foreign title dazzled him in the least degree.

"Rittenhouse Square," cut in Robert Maitland with amused sarcasm. "Well, Enid, you seem to have run the gamut of the east pretty thoroughly; come out and spend the summer with me in Colorado. My Denver house is open to you; we have a ranch amid the foothills, or if you are game we can break away from civilization entirely and find some unexplored, unknown canon in the heart of the mountains and camp there. We'll get back to nature, which seems to be impossible in Philadelphia, and you will see things and learn things that you will never see or learn anywhere else. It'll do you good, too; from what I hear, you have been going the pace and those cheeks of yours, pal o' mine [illegible] for it betimes."

"Of course, of course," said Stephen Maitland, "you are your own mistress anyway, and having no mother—" Enid's mother had died in her infancy—"I suppose that I could not interfere or object if I wished to, but no marrying or giving in marriage. Remember that."

"Nonsense, father," answered the young woman lightly. "I am not anxious to assume the bonds of wedlock."

"Well, that settles it," said Robert Maitland. "We'll give you a royal good time. I must run up to New York and Boston for a few days, but I shall be back in a week and I can pick you up then."

"What is the house in Denver; is it er—may I ask, provided with all modern conveniences and—" began the elder Maitland nervously.

Robert Maitland laughed.

"What do you take us for, Steve; do you ever read the western newspapers?"

"I confess that I have not given much thought to the west since I studied geography and—the Philadelphia papers have been thought sufficient for the family since—"

"Good Lord," exclaimed Maitland. "The house cost half a million dollars, if you must know it, and if there is anything that modern science can contribute to comfort and luxury that isn't in it, I don't know what it is. Shall it be the house in Denver, or the ranch, or a real camp in the wilds, Enid?"

He Crushed Her to Him and Kissed Her.

"First the house in Denver," said Enid, "and then the ranch and then the mountains."

"Right-O; that shall be the program."

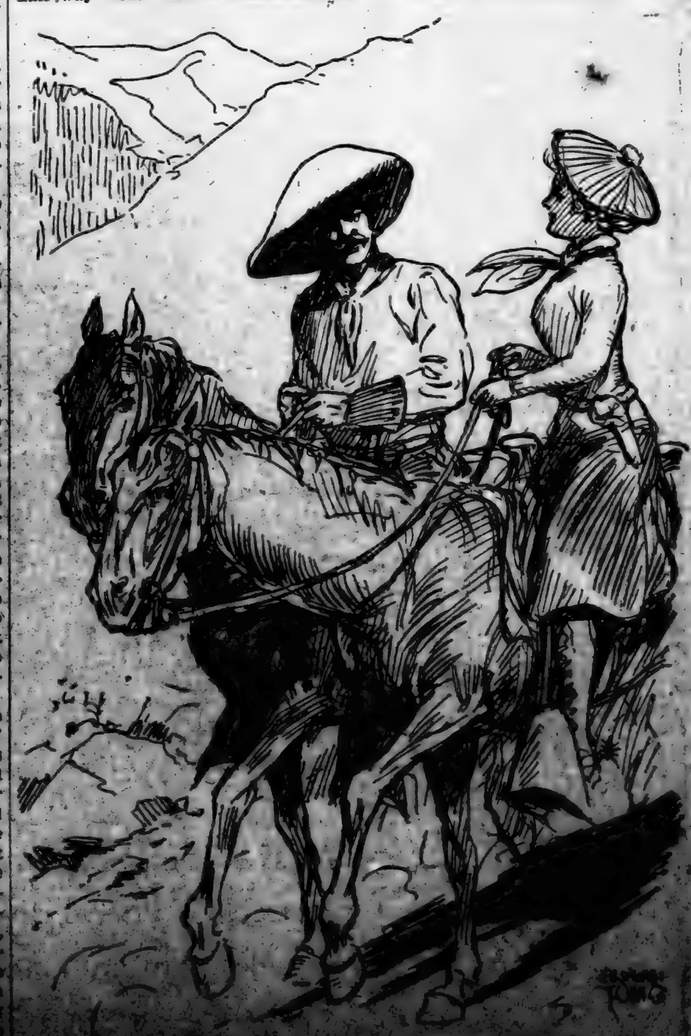
"Will my daughter's life be perfectly safe from the cowboys, Indians and desperadoes?"

"Quite safe," answered Robert, with deep gravity. "The cowboys no longer shoot up the city and it has been years since the Indians have held up even a trolley car. The only real desperado in my acquaintance is the mildest gentle old stage driver in the west."

"Do you keep up an acquaintance with men of that class still?" asked his brother in great surprise.

"You know I was sheriff in a border county for a number of years and—"

"But you must surely have withdrawn from all such society now."



"Out west," said Robert Maitland, "when we know a man and like him, when we have slept by him on the plains, ridden with him through the mountains, fought with him against some border terror, some bad man thirsting to kill, we don't forget him, we don't cut his acquaintance, and it doesn't make any difference whether the one or the other of us is rich or poor. I have friends who can't frame a grammatical sentence, who habitually eat with their knives, yet who are absolutely devoted to me and I to them. The man is the thing out there." He smiled and turned to Enid. "Always excepting the supremacy of woman," he added.

"How fascinating," exclaimed the girl. "I want to go there right away."

And this was the train of events which wrought the change. Behold the young lady astride of a horse for the first time in her life in a divided skirt, that fashion prevalent elsewhere not having been accepted by the best equestriennes of Philadelphia. She was riding ahead of a lumbering mountain wagon surrounded by other riders, which was loaded with baggage, drawn by four sturdy broncos and followed by a number of shaggy little burros at present unburdened with packs which would be used when they got farther [illegible] ultimate day from his business demand to ride with her on the first stage of her journey to the mountains.

"Your Dad Has Passed Away," Stammered the Younger Woman.

CHAPTER II.

The Game Played in the Usual Way.

The road on which they advanced into the mountains was well made and well kept up. The canon through the foothills was not very deep—for Colorado—and the ascent was gentle. Naturally it wound in every direction, following the devious course of the river, which it frequently crossed from one side to the other on rude log bridges. A brisk gallop of half a mile or so on a convenient stretch of comparatively level going put the two in the lead far ahead of the lumbering wagon and out of sight of those others of the party who had elected to go a horseback. There was perhaps a tacit agreement among the latter not to break in upon this growing friendship, or, more frankly, not to interfere in a developing love affair.

The canon broadened here and there at long intervals and ranch houses were found in every clearing, but these were few and far between and for the most part Armstrong and Enid Maitland rode practically alone save for the passage of an occasional lumber wagon.

"You can't think," began the man, as they drew rein after a splendid gallop and the somewhat tired horses readily subsided into a walk, "how I hate to go back and leave you."

"And you can't think how loath I am to have you return," the girl flashed out at him with a sidelong glance from her bright blue eyes and a witching smile from her scarlet lips.

"Enid Maitland," said the man, "you know I just worship you. I'd like to sweep you out of your saddle, lift you to the bow of mine and ride away with you. I can't keep my hands off you, I—"

Before she realized what he would be about he swerved his horse toward her, his arm went around her suddenly. Taken completely off her guard she could make no resistance, indeed she scarcely knew what to expect until he crushed her to him and kissed her, almost roughly, full on the lips.

"How dare you," cried the girl, her face aflame, freeing herself at last, and swinging her own horse almost to the edge of the road which here ran on an excavation some fifty feet above the river.

"How dare I?" laughed the audacious man, apparently no whit abashed by her indignation. "When I think of my opportunity I am amazed at my moderation."

"Your opportunity; your moderation?"

"Yes, when I had you helpless I took but one kiss; I might have held you longer and taken a hundred."

LY OLD FOX CORRALLED

RUN TO HIS DEN BY TRUTHFUL STATEMENTS.

ATTEMPTS TO DECEIVE NOT PROFITABLE.

April 22nd, 1912—NOT 1904

Editor Press:—A remark or two with reference to statements in ast week's UNION-banner:—

First, "Sly Old Fox" says the ounty has paid $15,000.00 more his year than last and there is no oney in the Treasurer's office. t seems to me that Mr. Littlejohn the County Treasurer) made his eport not long ago, which was ublished in the county papers, howing that there was about $16,- 000.00 on hand for all purposes, nd that, it occurs to me is a fairly ood showing. Does "Sly Old ox" think the people so ignorant hat they cannot recall the printed tatements of our county officers when they are sworn to before ompetent authorities, or is he so gnorant himself that he thinks whatever ne utters will be taken s Gospel truth by the people without investigation? The statement of the Treasurer was printed less than two months ago and yet "Sly Old Fox" comes forward and undertakes to tell the people that Mr. Littlejohn's sworn statement is not true. Which will you believe, the sworn statement of a reputable county official or the averment of a man who, like the assassin, ashamed of his statements, hides behind an assumed name?

One of the last acts of the republican administration, we understand, was to lower the tax rate; if it should have been lowered, why in the name of all justice and common sense did they wait for six years and then all at once, just as they were turned out of office, proceed to lower the rate of county taxation? Was it to embarrass the new administration or was it for the purpose of bragging about an empty treasury under democratic rule? Surely it was one or the other, for they had six years tenure of office to show their love for the "dear people" and failed utterly to display one particle of affection. "Sly Old Fox" may fool some of the people all the time and all the people some of the time, but he can't fool all the people all the time—no, not even "Sly Old Fox" can do that. He fooled us mightily for a long time but we are now on to his range, his race is run and the sooner he goes to his den and remains there the better for him and the people.

Mr. Reader, will you view this question from its right angle? If you will then your verdict shall be the verdict of all the people.

Again, "Sly Old Fox"—rather, silly old fox—jumps on the Commissioners' Court about some sewer piping purchased for county uses. I know nothing about this, but am quite sure 'Sly Old Fox" voted for a majority of the members of the Court who made the purchase—their names are Milling, Mahan and Shaw; if they allowed the one democratic member—Mr. Hayes—to buy that piping without a protest on their part—and they could have prevented its purchase if they had so desired—then they are to blame, and if the County Treasurer paid for that piping out of the county's funds on the warrant of Mr. Haves, then the county Treasurer made an error. He should have had the authority of the Commissioner's Court—three republicans and one democrat, before he paid for that piping.

But "Sly Old Fox" just wait, there are other things in store for you; we will not mention them just now, but they are on the catalog and will be produced in due season. Are you willing—"Sly Old Fox"—that they appear in print? We shall see.

Yours for fair play,
Democrat.

LILY WHITES MEET

WHITE MAN'S REPUBLICAN PARTY TO BE FORMED IN LOUISIANA.

New Orleans, April 5.—"A white man's Republican party in Louisiana," was the object of a conference of prominent Republicans here yesterday, called by Frank R. Williams, who maintains that he is still the regular chairman of the Republican state central committee.

Although the conference was composed of supporters of different Presidential candidates, it was a unit on the matter of color and protested against what was termed the "meddling" of the sub-committee sent here by the national committee and which succeeded in placing negroes in the state organization.

Mr. Williams, who is an avowed supporter of the president's candidacy, said of the sub-committee's visit:

"They wanted me to admit as members, certain men we had excluded from our February meeting. I refused to agree to anything of the kind. We offered them what they came for—a solid Taft delegation. They wanted negroes in the committee in order to be able to control the negro vote in the north and west."

Postmaster, A. F. Leonhardt and Dr. A. C. Fowler withdrew from the conference.

CLANTON BLOOMING.

A TOWN OF STEADY, HEALTHY GROWTH.

The casual observer who never gets off the principal business streets of the town would scarcely know of the steady, healthy growth of our little city, yet that it is growing, and growing rapidly, cannot be successfully denied. In addition to the several new buildings in course of construction, mention of which was made in last week's PRESS, two handsome new homes on Sixth street have just been completed which add greatly to the north end of town.

Judge S. M. Adams is now safely and comfortably housed in his new dwelling, just completed, and is receiving the congratulations of his friends upon the beauty and convenience of the structure.

Just north of this new home is the residence of Dr. J. E. Gowan as convenient and handsome a workmanship could make it.

In addition to the erection of these two new homes each of the above gentlemen have shown commendable enterprise in having laid broad cement side walks, thus adding considerably to the beauty of the surroundings.

CHILTON WAREHOUSE MAKES INVESTMENT

HOUSE AND LOT PURCHASED.

On last Monday a deal was closed between Mr. J. B. Downs, as party to the first part, and the Chilton Warehouse & Manufacturing Company as party of the second part, whereby the latter becomes the owner of the lot and building just west of the residence now occupied by Mr. Downs and known as the Smitherman property.

For some years the Warehouse Company has sought an easy inlet to the gin and fertilizer factory, but could not secure the desired roadway. Now it has purchased the Smitherman property and proposes to move the house to the west end of the lot and open a roadway through the lot on which the house now stands. This will be a private roadway but that the general public will be permitted to use it under certain restrictions is not doubled.

CHECKERS, NOT DRAFTS

CLANTON IS FULL OF 'EM.

Dominoes will soon come into fashion in Clanton again; that's the popular Summer game here and we boast of several experts in that line. Just now, however, another game holds the boards—checkers—and it isn't played like the ordinary game either; its played altogether with figures and Clanton can now boast of three as fine checkers in our midst as can be found in a day's journey.

In the first place there's Judge W. F. Wilkinson of the State Examiners checking up the county officials' books; then there is Mr. Johnson checking up the city officials' books, and yet again, there is Mr. Hosmer checking up the two bank officials' books. That's checking some we guess.

Who said Clanton was not a town of outward checkers?

MR. GREER'S REPLY.

Clanton, Ala., Apr. 23, 1912.

Editor Press:—Please allow me space in your paper to say in reply to the statement of Mr. H. A. Harris in the last week's issue of the Union, branding what I said in the Press as to him getting his father to attend to the office in case he should be elected, as a falsehood, that I don't say that I heard Mr. Harris say this, but I do say that someone made use of such language to me or in my presence. I suppose that whoever made use of the remark had heard of the mistake that Mr. Harris made in writing or copying a deed for Mr. Thomas Miller and Rev. J. D. Hughes, as such mistakes in the assessment of people's taxes would cause a lot of trouble, and the old man would probably be more accurate.

I want to say in reply to the statements of Mr. J. N. Dennis and Beat Ten Farmer (I wish he had the backbone to sign his name like Mr. Dennis, as I dislike for anyone to write under an assumed name) that I have been supporting the Republican party in good faith, believing that that party stood for the right, but when it came to my knowledge through men in whom I have confidence that the leaders and office holders of the Republican party were going off to conventions and mixing with negroes, I fully decided that I would not support any longer a party and men who practised such doings.

Yours truly,
E. F. GREER.

BLUE ROCK SHOOT

CLANTON GUN CLUB TO BE REORGANIZED.

Monday afternoon Mr. L. M. Norwood of Birmingham, representing the E. I. DuPont De Nemours Powder Company, came here in interests of the professional nimrods of the town for the purpose of assisting in the reorganization of the Clanton Gun Club—or or rather to instill new life into the dormant spirits of the members.

Quite a few shootists gathered at the new Club grounds near the old academy and enjoyed the afternoon cracking down on blue rocks.

Mr. Norwood is not taken into consideration in the score made as he is an expert and is not a member of the Club, but nevertheless it would not do to give the score made without stating that Mr. Norwood made a most excellent score, "killing" twenty four out of a possible twenty five, handicapped by six yards.

Mr. "Bud" Alred carried off the local honors, having broken twenty out of a possible twenty five; Mr. E. M. Pinckard is stepping high because he defeated John VanDerveer and is entitled to a round trip to Montgomery free of all costs—a Panama hat thrown in for good measure.

Mr. Hugh Foshee edged the Editor and Mr. Mallie White out for second place by a fraction of one tenth.

Messrs. W. D. Spigener and Guy Higgins almost tied for the booby prize—but it wasn't a tie for Mr. Spigener "killed" one dead and Mr. Higgins did'nt. Both are good rabbit shots, however.

The members of the Club are to have a meeting Friday night at eight o'clock at the offices of the Clanton Press, for the purpose of perfecting the organization of the Club. Officers are to be elected and other business is, to receive attention. All members are urgently requested to be present ON TIME.

It is proposed, if enough encouragement can be had, to put on a big tournament in the near future, at which all the expert shooters of the state are expected to be present. This tournament, if carried out according to program, will attract to Clanton two score or more of the best trap shooters and will add to the revenues of the town a tidy little sum of money. Possibly a three day shoot will be arranged, certainly a shoot of two days can be provided for without difficulty.

In conclusion, it would be manifestly unfair to Mr. G. Penn Jones not to give him credit for the last shot when he "killed" his bird.

Mr. Jones says he would have broken more rocks, but the things went zig-zag and every time he shot zig the rock flew zag and the reverse; we suppose this must be so.

COMMITTEE MEETS

The newly elected Executive Committee of the Democratic party of Chilton county is called to meet at the Court House, on Saturday, the fourth day of May. Unfortunately the names of a number of the committee were never given to the Secretary of the old committee, consequently they cannot be notified of the meeting, but those elected know who constitute the committee and should not wait for further notice. The meeting will be an IMPORTANT one and should be attended by EVERY MEMBER regardless of weather. If you do not receive personal notice through the mail please remember, if you are a member of the committee, that it is your DUTY to attend and that this notice is intended as a personal service upon you.

COME on SATURDAY, MAY FOURTH, at the Court House in Clanton.

MEMORIAL DAY

SERVICES TO BE HELD TOMORROW

The friends of the "LOST CAUSE" and of the old soldiers should not fail to remember that they ought not to forget the exercises at the court house and cemetery tomorrow afternoon in honor of those who sacrifised their all upon the altar of their country. The ladies of Clanton, as elsewhere, take commendable pride in the observance of this day, as do the chivalrac women throughout the south, but the men, alas, alas, alas, do not seem to recall, in their mad rush for filthy lucre, that there was ever such a thing as their fathers and brothers having donned the gray of the Confederacy, and gone out to battle for their country—and ours.

On Friday afternoon the exercises will begin at the court house and will be concluded at the cemetery in honor of those grizzled old men, who, for the sake of the cause they loved so well, and for the country and its traditions which they reverenced, risked all save honor, that their descendants among whom we are, should have the right to think, speak and act for ourselves.

Go honor the men who wore the Gray, thereby honor thyself.

DR. ARTHUR JOHNSON

TO BUILD HANDSOME RESIDENCE.

Just before his departure for Owensville and French Lick, Ind., Dr. Arthur Johnson awarded a contract to local contractors for a handsome residence on Main or Second Avenue. Work will begin almost immediately—in fact, material is already being placed on the ground preparatory to the busy work of completing the home. The old Denty home will be removed and upon that spot Dr. Johnson will have one of the neatest and most modern residences erected.

BRICK YARD ESTABLISHED

THE BUILDING BOOM BRINGS NEW ENTERPRISES.

The soldid, substantial growth of Clanton has added another enterprise to many now flourishing in our little town.

Several contracts have recently been awarded to Mr. Craver for buildings and he found it necessary, in order to keep up with his contracts, to establish a brick yard, or manufactory in Clanton. The result was that Clanton now has an up to date brick yard. The output is equal to [illegible]

MR. ROPER WRITES.

Stanton, Ala., Apr. 15, 1912.

It is with pleasure that I ask for space in the Press to extend my thanks to my friends for their splendid support in the Democratic primary on April 1st.

I had hoped to win the nomination and be elected County Superintendent that I might better serve the people in an educational way, but it seems that Providence has decreed it otherwise, and I am always ready to submit without a murmur, to the will of the Great Master, who chooses our many changes and never makes a mistake.

Though my opponent, Mr. Williams, is now the legal nominee of the Democratic party, I must say that I am perfectly satisfied for it to be so, and hope that every man who supported me so gallantly in the primary will support Mr. Williams with equal gallantry in the November election.

It has been the great hope of my political life to see Democracy triumphant in old Chilton, and there had always been a kindred hope that I might be among those to lead the party to victory. But it seems that that cannot be, so I submit to a fair decision and as I have always done, will put my shoulder to the wheel as a private in the ranks and fight with might and main for the success of the ticket.

Now, let me say in conclusion that my heart goes out in thanksgiving to those who supported me and gave me such a magnificent vote. To those who saw fit to cast their ballot against me, let me say that I know you were sincere in what you did, and hence, I hold no ill will against you, but instead, I commend you for having the courage of your convictions.

Sincerely yours,
HOWARD ROPER.

A CLEAR CLAP FROM A CLEAN CLOUD.

NO MINCING WORDS HERE.

Jemison, Ala., Apr. 22, 1912

Editor Press:—Permit me a few words in reply to some letters in last week's UNION-Banner.

I notice that some of the writers say that the parties who have announced through your paper that they had quit the Republican and joined the Democratic party had always voted with the Democrats. In reply to this I wish to state that I cannot say how the rest of them have voted, for I never saw their ballots, but the man who says that I have voted or worked for the Democratic party since the first Monday in August, 1886, until recently, is telling a barefaced falsehood.

Some of them caution the Republicans not to be deceived; I say to one and all not to be deceived, and when a man says that I have been voting or working for the Democratic party, until very recently, he is certainly trying to deceive the people.

Again, the Sly Old Coon, says that he has found out that the treasury is busted. I don't know whether that is true or not, but if it is true, who is responsible for it? Isn't the Board of Revenue responsible for the affairs of the county? Certainly they are. Well, who are they? Three Republicans and one Democrat. Then the Republicans are responsible if there is anything wrong. So, Mr. Coon, you are not as sly as you thought you were. You will have to slip up on a different side if you wish to hurt the Democratic party.

A word to "Little Viewer." He said, "Listen to Moses' echo." You may listen for you will be apt to hear it throughout this county before the present campaign is over.

Now, a word about the Republican convention. I do not believe that there was one delegate from Chilton county who wished to sit in the convention with those negroes, but the pie hunters had them there in order to hold their jobs, and the Chilton county delegates had to sit with them or do as I did—quit them. I do not believe that the people who are not looking for jobs are going to vote with those whom they thoroughly day of May and see the burr-heads for themselves. You may get to hear one of them pray or see them turn a white man out of the convention because his "credentials" are not "regular."

Yours for the RIGHT,
Moses A. Killgore.

(Note:—Mr. Killgore has misquoted the non-de-plume of the writer in the UNION-Banner from whom he quotes. His name is "Sly Old Fox and not "COON" as Mr. Killgore has it. But, a "rose by any other name smells as sweet." It is possible that Mr. Killgore was thinking of those coons in the convention when he was answering Sly Old Fox.—Ed.)

MR. SIMS EXPRESSES APPRECIATION.

I fail to find words to express publicly to my friends my sincere thanks for their loyal support at the recent primary election.

I assure you that I appreciate very much the honor you have conferred upon me. I shall strive harder now to be elected than I did for the nomination.

You, who voted for other candidates supported true and tried men. They were all worthy of your best efforts; but since I have been honored with the nomination I hope to be elected—with your help I will be elected. No person shall ever regret having cast his ballot for me in the general election. I will endeavor to help manage the finances of Chilton county in such a way as to give entire satisfaction to all, without regard to party affiliation, and at the same time give to each section of the county its proportionate share of the funds.

Respectfully,
J. D. SIMS.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE NOT PAYEES

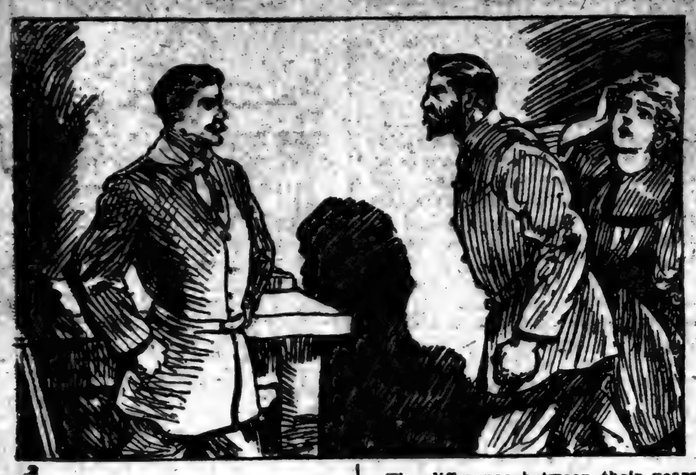
COUNTY PAYS ELECTION OFFICERS

The Press man has received quite a number of letters within the past few days from those who assisted in holding the recent democratic primary election, asking for pay for their services. The impression seems to have gone out that the Committee pays for these services, and as the Press man has been Secretary of the Committee, the calls have been made upon him.

This was the OLD rule, but there is now something new under the sun—Solomon to the contrary notwithstanding The new primary election law provides that the county shall pay the expenses of primary elections.

Unfortunately the Commissioners' Court met the very day the primary was held; it was, therefore, impossible for them to know who the election officers were and they failed to pass an order for the payment of the election fees.

However, the Court will convene again within the next few days and will order all election officers paid. If you have not yet sent to the Probate Judge your name and notice of appointment as an election officer, do so to-day in order that the Court may know who to pay.



VENTRILOQUISM AND LEGERDEMAIN.

PROF. FOX AND DAUGHTER TO ENTERTAIN.

Tomorrow night at the Court House, Prof. Fox and his daughter, Miss Jennie Fox, will give a unique entertainment, beginning promptly at eight o'clock. Part of the proceeds will go to the old soldiers and that should be an incentive to all to attend.

The entertainment will consist of feats of ventriloquism, legerdemain, slight of hand tricks, and other acts of a highly pleasing nature.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her.

CHAPTER II.—(Continued).

"And by what right did you take that one?" haughtily demanded the outraged young woman, looking at him beneath level brows while the color slowly receded from her face. She had never been kissed by a man other than a blood relation in her life—remember, suspicious reader, that she was from Philadelphia,—and she resented this sudden and unauthorized caress with every atom and instinct of her still somewhat conventional being.

"But aren't you half way engaged to me?" he pleaded in justification, seeing the unwonted seriousness with which she had received his impudent advance. "Didn't you agree to give me a chance?"

"I did say that I liked you very much," she admitted, "no man better, and that I thought that you might—"

"Well, then—" he began.

But she would not be interrupted.

"I did not mean that you should enjoy all the privileges of a conquest before you had won me. I will thank you not to do that again, sir."

"It seems to have had a very different effect upon you than it does upon me," replied the man coolly. "I loved you before, but now, since I have kissed you, I worship you."

"It hasn't affected me that way," retorted the girl promptly, her face still frowning and indignant. "Not at all, and—"

"Forgive me, Enid," pleaded the other. "I just couldn't help it. You were so beautiful I had to. I took the chance. You are not accustomed to our ways."

"Is this your habit in your love affairs?" asked the girl swiftly and not without a spice of feminine malice.

"I never had any love affair before," he replied with a ready masculine mendacity, "at least none worth mentioning. But you see this is the west; we have gained what we have by demanding every inch that nature offers, and then claiming the all. That's the way we play the game out here and that's the way we win."

"But I have not yet learned to play the 'game,' as you call it, by any such rules," returned the young woman determinedly, "and it is not the way to win me if I am the stake."

"What is the way?" asked the man anxiously. "Show me and I'll take it no matter what its difficulty."

"Ah, for me to point out the way would be to play traitor to myself," she answered, relenting and relaxing a little before his devoted wooing. "You must find it without assistance. I can only tell you one thing."

"And what is that?"

"You do not advance toward the goal by such actions as those of a moment since."

"Look here," said the other suddenly. "I am not ashamed of what I did, and I'm not going to pretend that I am, either."

"You ought to be," severely.

"Well, maybe so, but I'm not; I couldn't help it any more than I could help loving you the minute I saw you. Put yourself in my place."

"But I am not in your place, and I can't put myself there. I do not wish to. If it be true, as you say, that you have grown to—care so much for me and so quickly—"

"If it be true?" came the sharp interruption as the man bent toward her, fairly devouring her with his bold, ardent gaze.

"Well, since it is true," she admitted under the compulsion of his protest. "That fact is the only possible excuse for your action."

"You find some justification for me, then?"

"No, only a possibility, but whether it be true or not, I do not feel that way—yet."

There was a saving grace in that last word, which gave him a little heart. He would have spoken, but she suffered no interruption, saying:

"I have been wooed before, but—"

"True, unless the human race has become suddenly blind," he said softly under his breath.

"But never in such ungentle ways."

"I suppose you have never run up against a real red-blooded man like me before."

"If red-blooded be evidenced mainly by lacking of self control, perhaps I have not. Yet there are men that I have met that would not need to apologize for their qualities even to you, Mr. James Armstrong."

"Don't say that. Evidently I make but poor progress in my wooing. Never have I met with a woman quite like you"—said, in that indeed lay some of her charm, and she might have replied in exactly the same language and with exactly the same meaning to him—"I am no longer a boy. I must be fifteen years, child, older than you are for I am thirty-five."

The difference between their years was not quite so great as he declared, but womanlike the girl let the statement pass unchallenged.

"And I wouldn't insult your intelligence by saying you are the only woman that I have ever made love to, but there is a vast difference between making love to a woman and loving one. I have just found that out for the first time. I marvel at the past, and I am ashamed of it, but I thank God that I have been saved for this opportunity. I want to win you, and I am going to do it, too. In many things I don't match up with the people with whom you train. I was born out here, and I've made myself. There are things that have happened in the making that I am not especially proud of, and I am not at all satisfied with the results, especially since I have met you. The better I know you the less pleased I am with Jim Armstrong, but there are possibilities in me, I rather believe, and with you for inspiration, God!"—the man flung out his hand with a fine gesture of determination. "They say that the east and west don't naturally mingle, but it's a lie; you and I can beat the world."

The woman thrilled to his gallant wooing. Any woman would have done so; some of them would have lost their heads, but Enid Maitland was an exceedingly cool young person, for she was not quite swept off her feet, and did not quite lose her balance.

"I like to hear you say things like that," she answered. "Nobody quite like you has ever made love to me, and certainly not in your way, and that's the reason I have given you a half way promise to think about it. I was sorry that you could not be with us on this adventure, but now I am rather glad, especially if the even temper of my way is to be interrupted by anything like the outburst of a few minutes since."

"I am glad, too," admitted the man "For I declare I couldn't help it. If I have to be with you either you have got to be mine or else you would have to decide that it could never be, and then I'd go off and fight it out."

"Leave me to myself," said the girl earnestly "for a little while; it's best so; I would not take the finest, noblest man on earth—"

"And I am not that."

"Unless I loved him. There is something very attractive about your personality; I don't know in my heart whether it is that, or—"

"Good," said the man, as she hesitated. "That's enough." He gathered up the reins and whirled his horse suddenly in the road. "I am going back. I'll wait for your return to Denver, and then—"

"That's best," answered the girl.

She stretched out her hand to him, leaning backward. If he had been a different kind of a man he would have kissed it; as it was he took it in his own hand and almost crushed it with a fierce grip.

"We'll shake on that, little girl," he said, and then without a backward glance he put spurs to his horse and galloped furiously down the road.

No, she decided then and there, she did not love him, not yet. Whether she ever would she could not tell. And yet she was half bound to him. The recollection of his kiss was not altogether a pleasant memory; he had not done himself any good by that bold assault upon her modesty, that reckless attempt to rifle the treasure of her lips. No man had ever really touched her heart, although many had engaged her interest. Her experience therefore was not definitive or conclusive. If she had truly loved James Armstrong, in spite of all that she might have said, she would have thrilled to the remembrance of that wild caress. The chances, therefore, were somewhat heavily against him that morning as he rode down the trail alone.

His experiences in love affairs were much greater than hers. She was by no means the first woman he had kissed—remember, suspicious reader, that he was not from Philadelphia—hers were not the first ears into which he had poured passionate protestations. He was neither better nor worse than most men, perhaps he fairly enough represented the average; but surely fate had something better in store for such a superb woman. A girl of such attainments and such infinite possibilities, she must mate higher than with the average man. Perhaps there was a subconsciousness of this in her mind as she silently waited to be overtaken by the rest of the party.

There were curious glances and strange speculations in that little company as they saw her sitting her horse alone. A few moments before James Armstrong had passed them at a gallop, he had waved his hand as he dashed by and had smiled at them, hope giving him a certain cheerfulness although his confidence was scarcely warranted by the facts.

His demeanor was not inconsistent with [illegible] what troubled present aspect. She threw off her preoccupation instantly and easily, however, and joined readily enough in the merry conversation of the way.

Mr. Robert Maitland, as Armstrong has said, had known him from a boy. There were things in his career of which Maitland did not and could not approve, but they were of the past, he reflected, and Armstrong was after all a pretty good sort. Mr. Maitland's standards were not at all those of his Philadelphia brother, but they were very high. His experiences of men had been different; he thought that Armstrong, having certainly by this time reached years of discretion, could be safely entrusted with the precious treasure of the young girl who had been committed to his care, and for whom his affection grew as his knowledge of and acquaintanceship with her increased.

As for Mrs. Maitland and the two girls and the youngster, they were Armstrong's devoted friends. They knew nothing about his past, indeed there were things in it of which Maitland himself was ignorant, and which had they been known to him might have caused him to withhold even his tentative acquiescence in the possibilities.

Most of these things were known to old Kirkby, who with masterly skill, amusing nonchalance and amazing profanity, albeit most of it under his breath lest he shock the ladies, tooled along the four nervous, excited bronchos that drew the big supply wagon. Kirkby was Maitland's oldest and most valued friend. He had been the latter's deputy sheriff, he had been a cowboy and a lumberman, a mighty hunter and a successful miner, and now, although he had acquired a reasonable competence, and had a nice little wife and a pleasant home in the mountain village at the entrance to the canon, he drove stage for pleasure rather than for profit. He had given over his daily twenty-five mile jaunt from Morrison to Troutdale to other hands for a short space that he might spend a little time with his old friend and the family who were all greatly attached to him on this outing.

Enid Maitland, a girl of a kind that Kirkby had never seen before, had won the old man's heart during the weeks spent on the Maitland ranch. He had grown fond of her, and he did not think that Mr. James Armstrong merited that which he evidently so overwhelmingly desired. Kirkby was well along in years, but he was quite capable of playing a lover's game for all that, and he decided to spy it in this instance.

Nobody suspected Enid Maitland's fresh young heart, but she, acting [illegible] hope giving him a certain cheerfulness although his confidence was scarcely warranted by the facts.

His demeanor was not inconsistent with [illegible] knee, his long whip in his hand, his keen and somewhat fierce brown eyes taking in every detail of what was going on about him. Indeed there was but little that came before him that old Kirkby did not see.

CHAPTER III.

The Story and the Letters.

Imagine, if you please, the forest primeval; yes, the murmuring pines and the hemlocks of the poem as well, by the side of a rapidly rushing mountain torrent fed by the eternal snows of the lofty peaks of the great range. A level stretch of grassy land where a mountain brook joined the creek was dotted with clumps of pines and great boulders rolled down from the everlasting hills—half an acre of open clearing. On the opposite side of the brook the canon wall rose almost sheer for perhaps five hundred feet, ending in jagged, needle-edged pinnacles of rock, sharp, picturesque and beautiful. A thousand feet above ran the timber line, and four thousand feet above that the crest of the greatest peak in the main range.

The white tents of the little encampment which had gleamed so brightly in the clear air and radiant sunshine of Colorado, now stood dim and ghostlike in the red reflection of a huge campfire. It was the evening of the first day in the wilderness.

For two days since leaving the wagon, the Maitland party with its long train of burros heavily packed, its horsemen and the steady plodders on foot, had advanced into unexplored and almost inaccessible retreats of the mountains—into the primitive indeed! In this delightful spot they had pitched their tents and the permanent camp had been made. Wood was abundant, the water at hand was as cold as ice, as clear as crystal and as soft as milk. There was pasturage for the horses and burros on the other side of the mountain brook. The whole place was a little amphitheater which humanity occupied perhaps the first time since creation.

Unpacking the burros, setting up the tents, making the camp, building the fire, had used up the late remainder of the day which was theirs when they had arrived. Opportunity would come tomorrow to explore the country, to climb the range, to try the stream that tumbled down a succession of waterfalls to the right of the camp and roared and rushed merrily around its feet until, swelled by the volume of the brook, it lost itself in tree-clad depths far beneath. Tonight rest after labor, tomorrow play after [illegible] matter!—had it been placed before him on the old colonial mahogany of the dining-room in Philadelphia. But up there in the wilds she had eaten the coarse homely fare with the zest and relish of the most seasoned ranger of the hills. Anxious to be of service, she had burned her hands and smoked her hair and scorched her face by usurping the functions of the young ranchman who had been brought along as cook, and had actually fried the bacon herself! Imagine a goddess with a frying pan! The black thick coffee and the condensed milk, drunk from the granite ware cup, had a more delicious aroma and a more delightful taste than the finest Mocha and Java in the daintiest porcelain of France. Optimum condimentum. The girl was frankly ravenously hungry, the air, the altitude, the exertion, the excitement made her able to eat anything and enjoy it.

She was gloriously beautiful, too; even her brief experience in the west had brought back the missing roses to her cheek, and had banished the bistre circles from beneath her eyes. Robert Maitland, lazily reclining propped up against a boulder, his feet to the fire, smoking an old pipe that would have given his brother the horrors, looked with approving complacency upon her, confident and satisfied that his prescription was working well. Nor was he the only one who looked at her that way. Marion and Emma, his two daughters, worshipped their handsome Philadelphia cousin and they sat one on either side of her on the great log lying between the tents and the fire. Even Bob Junior condescended to give her approving glances. The whole camp was at her feet. Mrs. Maitland had been greatly taken by her young niece. Kirkby made no secret of his devotion, Arthur Bradshaw and Henry Philips, each a "tenderfoot" of the extremist character, friends of business connections in the east, who were spending their vacation with Maitland, shared in the general devotion; to say nothing of George the cook and Pete, the packer and horse wrangler.

Philips, who was an old acquaintance of Enid's, had tried his luck with her back east and had sense enough to accept as final his failure. Bradshaw was a solemn young man without that keen sense of humor which was characteristic of the west. The others were suitably dressed for adventure, for Bradshaw's idea of an appropriate costume was distinguished chiefly by long green felt puttees which swathed his huge calves and excited curious inquiry and ribald comment from the surprised denizens of each mountain hamlet through which they had passed, to all of which Bradshaw remained serenely oblivious. The young man, who does enter especially into this tale, was a vestryman of the church in his home in the suburbs of Philadelphia. His piety had been put to a severe strain in the mountains.

"It Was in These Very Mountains," Said Robert Maitland.

That day everybody had to work on the trail—everybody wanted to for that matter. The hardest labor consisted in the driving of the burros. Unfortunately there was no good and trained leader among them through an unavoidable mistake, and the campers had great difficulty in keeping the burros on the trail. To Arthur Bradshaw had been allotted the most obstinate, cross-grained and determined of the unruly band, and old Kirkby and George paid particular attention to instructing him in the gentle art of manipulating him over the rocky mountain trail.

"Well," said Kirkby with his somewhat languid, drowling, nasal voice, "that there burro's like a ship which I often used 'em w'en I was a kid down east afore I come out to God's country. Makes him plumbed 'em with a kind of a keel. Remember if you wanted the boat to go to the right you shoved the helium over to the left. Sta'board an' port was the terms as I recollects 'em. It's jest the same with burros, you takes 'em by the tiller, that's by the tail, git a good tight twist on it an' ef you want him to head to the right, slew his stern sheets around to the left, an' you got to be keerful you don't git no kick back w'ich ef it lands on you is worse 'n the ree-coil of a mule."

Arthur faithfully followed directions, narrowly escaping the outraged brute's small but sharp pointed heels on occasion. His efforts not being productive of much success, finally in his despair he resorted to brute strength; he would pick the little animal up bodily, pack and all—he was a man of powerful physique—and swing him around until his head pointed in the right direction; then with a prayer that the burro would keep it there for a few rods anyway, he would set him down and start him all over again. The process oft repeated became monotonous after awhile. Arthur was a slow thinking man, deliberate in action; he stood it as long as he possibly could. Kirkby, who rode one horse and led two others, and therefore was exempt from burro driving, observed him with great interest. He and Bradshaw had strayed way behind the rest of the party.

At last Arthur's resistance, patience and piety, strained to the breaking point, gave way suddenly. Primitive instincts rose to the surface and overwhelmed him like a flood. He deliberately sat down on a fallen tree by the side of a trail, the burro halting obediently, turned and faced him with hanging head, apparently conscious that he merited the disapprobation that was being heaped upon him, for from the desperate tenderfoot there burst forth so amazing, so fluent, so comprehensive a torrent of assorted profanity, that even the old past master in objuration was astonished and bewildered. Where did Bradshaw, mild and inoffensive, get it? His proficiency would have appalled his rector and amazed his fellow vestrymen. Not the Jackdaw of Rheims himself was so cursed as that little burro. Kirkby sat on his horse in fits of silent laughter until the tears ran down his cheek, the only outward and visible expression of his mirth.

Arthur only stopped when he had thoroughly emptied himself, possibly of an accumulation of years of repression.

"Wall," said Kirkby, "you sure do overmatch any one I ever heard w'en it comes to cursin'; w'y, you could gimme cards an' spades an' beat me, an' I was thought to have some gift that-a-way in the old days."

"I didn't begin to exhaust myself," answered Bradshaw, shortly, "and what I did say didn't equal the situation. I'm going home."

"I wouldn't do that," urged the old man. "Here, you take the horses an' I'll tackle the burro."

"Gladly," said Arthur. "I would rather ride an elephant and drive a herd of them than waste another minute on this infernal little mule."

The story was too good to keep, and around the camp fire that night Kirkby drawled it forth. There was a freedom and easiness of intercourse in the camp, which was natural enough. Cook, teamster, driver, host, guest, men, women, children, and I had almost said burros, stood on the same level. They all ate and lived together. The higher up the mountain range you go, the deeper into the wilderness you plunge, the further away from the conventional you draw, the more homogeneous becomes society and the less obvious are the irrational and unscientific distinctions of the lowlands. The guinea stamp fades and the man and the woman are pure gold or base metal inherently and not by any artificial standard.

George, the cattle man, who cooked, and Pete, the horse wrangler, who assisted Kirkby in looking after the stock, enjoyed the episode uproariously, and would fain have had the exact language repeated to them, but here Robert Maitland demurred, much to Arthur's relief, for he was thoroughly humiliated by the whole performance.

It was very pleasant lounging around the camp fire and one good story easily led to another.

"It was in these very mountains," said Robert Maitland, at last, when his turn came, "that there happened one of the strangest and most terrible adventures that I ever heard of. I have pretty much forgotten the lay of the land, but I think it wasn't very far from here that there is one of the most stupendous canons through the range; nobody ever goes there; I don't suppose anybody has ever been there since. It must have been at least five years ago that it all happened."

Story of a Bible.

A case that had to do with the theft of a Bible was before the grand jury some time ago and after it had been disposed of, George W. Seibert, foreman of the jury, related a story in which a Bible figured prominently. Mr. Seibert said that his mother had given him an old-fashioned family Bible when he married. About two years after his marriage Mr. Seibert needed money, he said, and had almost decided to dispose of the Bible. When such thoughts were occupying his mind, Mr. Seibert picked up the Bible one day and began turning over the leaves of the book. He had passed over several pages when his eyes fell on two $50 bills. His mother had placed them in the Bible when she had presented the book to him. Mr. Seibert still has the Bible.—Indianapolis News.

The table showing those injured includes those who were only slightly hurt as well as those who were fatally and seriously injured.

Brookside, Ala.—A cyclone, preceded by a wind which has been scarcely rivaled in this section in many years, struck this place, wreaking havoc and distress on all sides. At least 20 houses were razed to the ground and 22 others badly damaged. But few structures in the entire place escaped the fury of the twister.

There were five negroes and one white child injured here, all of whom were taken to Birmingham and placed in hospitals there. One negro, Dick Gibbs, was fatally injured, it is thought, and his son seriously injured. The white child was a Slav, but it is not thought that its injuries will prove fatal. At Turnertown, which is a suburb of this place, there but three houses left standing.

At Pinkney City the only known death resulting from the cyclone occurred. This was Arthur Hill, a negro, who was killed outright. His body was found under some wreckage where he had been caught and killed. A little negro baby was missing for a while and the parents were frantic as to its whereabouts. Finally some one came in with the news that he had found the infant in the top of a pine tree a mile and a half distant from where the home had stood.

THE TITANIC SANK WITH AID ONLY FIVE MILES OFF

Fourth Officer Tells of Unidentified Steamer That Ignorde Frantic Calls For Help.

Washington. — With succor only five miles away, the Titanic slid into its watery grave, carrying with it more than 1,600 of its passengers and crew, while an unidentified steamer that might have saved all, failed or refused to see the frantic signals flashed to it for aid.

This phase of the tragic disaster was brought out before the senate investigation committee, when J. B. Boxhall, fourth officer of the Titanic, told of his unsuccessful attempts to attract the stranger's attention.

The ship according to Boxhall, could not have been more than five miles away, and was steaming toward the Titanic. So close was it, that from the bridge Boxhall plainly saw its masthead lights, and then its red side lights.

This and the declaration by P. A. S. Franklin, vice-president of the White Star line, that there were not sufficient life boats aboard the Titanic to care for the ship's company at one time, were easily the features of the hearing.

OF SMALL CONCERN TO HIM

Why Uncle Eph Refused Information He Felt to Be Altogether Superfluous.

When Robert H. Davis was young and loose in the feet he once wandered into a little Mississippi town. It was a bright day in the early spring and he walked down one street. By and by he came to the county jail—a two-storied affair, standing flush with the sidewalk. "There was a negro pressing his face against the barred window on the second floor," said Mr. Davis, "holding on to the bars and yawning. By and by an old negro came limping along the street toting a whitewash bucket.

"'Hello, Uncle Eph'm,' says the one in the window.

"'Howdy,' says Eph'm, limping on.

"'Wait a minute, uncle,' says this lonesome negro in the window. 'What time is it, uncle?'

"Uncle Ephraim limped right on. He hardly looked up.

"'What difference does it make to you, niggah?' he asked. 'You ain't goin' nowheer.'"—New York Letter to the Cincinnati Times-Star.

ALMOST CRAZY WITH ECZEMA

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema on my foot. I had tried doctor after doctor all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and sent for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle about the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot ran water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy, in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed: 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies!' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a dollar for eight long hours. I awoke in the morning with but very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2234 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

"I'm trying to write five pages on Bob, but he won't be still," replied the little fellow."

GREATEST LESSON OF LIFE

The One Thing Above All That a Woman Should Be Quick to Learn and Remember.

The woman who makes good must be blessed with strength and health, and an ambition to learn and take advantage of every opportunity that comes her way. She must work with all her heart and play with all her heart; above all things avoiding indifference.

Hers is the temperament that recognizes that encouragement is all nice and pretty, but if one is going to do the thing that counts one doesn't need it; that refuses to be dismayed by repeated failures and that has a certain faith that what has been done by many may be done by another; that nobody goes through life without disappointments, heartaches and the breaking of pet illusions; that there is nothing more common than trouble, but that it is the wise ones of earth that keep it in the background. That's the great lesson of life.—Exchange.

Needn't Kiss Husband.

Supreme Court Justice Mareau in Brooklyn, dismissed the suit of Samuel Markowitz, a New York real estate broker, for the annulment of his marriage to Mildred Markowitz.

"It is absurd to frame such issues," Justice Mareau said. "Practically the plaintiff asks an annulment of his marriage to the girl because she refused to kiss him."

The young woman was eighteen years old when she married Markowitz, who, as alleged, had already had four wives, of whom two had died and two were divorced.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

Mrs. Dickover.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes Mrs. B. F. Dickover, of Utica, Ohio, Route 4. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad after five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

The PRESS has several communications which were crowded out this week; we hope to have them inserted next week. Those furnishing copy for the paper should get their communications in as early as possible to insure their appearance in the first issue. Then, too, it would be well for them to bear in mind that a number of others are writing—consequently, be brief, to the point and strong. We appreciate all communications sent us, but cannot crowd them all in. One friend wrote quite a readable letter which we would have been glad to have published—it came in time—but was not signed, hence, we had to exclude it. Always sign your name to articles—not necessarily for publication, but for mutual protection.

SIGNED ARTICLES.

Some days since the PRESS printed an article with reference to the arrest and trial of a certain gentleman together with a few passing remarks upon the duty of officials toward prisoners. There was no intention on the part of the PRESS to criticise any particular individual or officer; what was said was mentioned in a general way—and we still contend that prisoners in the custody of officers either here or elsewhere, are entitled to considerate treatment at the hand of the officials.

However, the article in the PRESS seems to have led to a wrong impression as to the official conduct of certain officers and in justice to them, as well as to ourselves, we publish the articles below which speak for themselves.

Clanton, Ala., Apr. 13, 1912.

This is to certify that I have known Mr. W. F. Fallon for the past ten or twelve months. He has worked for me as Deputy Sheriff since last July, 1911. He is a good, criminal officer and served me perfectly satisfactorily. I consider Mr. Fallon a good man.

B. L. Jones,
Sheriff of Chilton County.
Ed Smitherman,
Chief Deputy.

I unite in this recommendation.
Robt. H. Knox.

M. D. Foshee,

I know nothing that would cause me to doubt the statement set forth in the face of this endorsement.

Register in Chy.

We, the undersigned citizens of Shelby county, Alabama, having noticed a publication in the public print charging W. F. Fallon, while acting as deputy sheriff of Chilton county, Alabama, with an assault with intent to murder, take pleasure in stating that we have known Mr. Fallon personally for the past ten or twenty years, as he was born and raised in this, Shelby county, that his general character in said county is good, that he has acted in the capacity of Deputy Sheriff in this county for about nine years before going to Chilton county that he is known as a faithful and efficient officer and fearless in the discharge of his duty. We would further state that we have had occasion and repeated opportunities to witness his conduct while having the custody of prisoners arrested by him, and he has at all times treated them with uniform kindness, and we have never heard of any complaint of unkind or cruel treatment by him of any prisoner in his custody unless done in self defense, or driven to it as a last resort by the misconduct of the prisoner.

OBITUARY.

Mr. J. N. Sims, Sr., was born near Conyers, Ga., March 17, 1839, and departed this life April 11, 1912, at Jemison, Ala.

He came to Alabama in 1875 and has been a citizen of Chilton county since that time. He was formerly a member of the Presbyterian church, but upon coming to this state he united with the Baptist. He was a Confederate vereran. having served faithfully in the war between the states. Mr. Sims was twice married; a beloved father and husband. After an illness of four months, in which time he suffered patiently and silently, God commissioned his angel to bear his soul to regions celestial. He died a triumphant death with his hope centered on God. Why, then, weep for him, friends and relatives? Though we know his chair can never be filled and his presence will be missed beyond expression, we know, too, he is at rest. God is allwise; His ways are not our ways, and if He saw fit to take him from amidst your love and tender care, it is not for you to question His prudence. Then may He, in the depths of your agony, give you grace to say, "Thy will be done."

Mr. Sims leaves eight children to mourn his loss, and a great loss it is. May the white wings of consolation sweep the bereft ones and guide them to a higher home.

Woman Finally Recovers From Nervous Breakdown

Impoverished nerves destroy many people before their time. Often before a sufferer realizes what the trouble is, he is on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. It is of the utmost importance to keep your nervous system in good condition, as the nerves are the source of all bodily power. Mrs. Anna Kounz, 211 Mechanic St., Pueblo, Colo., says:

"For many years I suffered from nervous prostration; I was unable to do any house work and doctors failed to help me. Remedies I tried from druggists did not do me a particle of good. A neighbor told my husband about and he procured a bottle. After the first few doses I showed a marked improvement and after taking two bottles I was entirely cured. I have been perfectly well for years and cannot praise Dr. Miles' Nervine too highly."

If you are troubled with loss of appetite, poor digestion, weakness, inability to sleep; if you are in a general run down condition and unable to bear your part of the daily grind of life, you need something to strengthen your nerves. You may not realize what is the matter with you, but that is no reason why you should delay treatment.

has proven its value in nervous disorders for thirty years, and merits a trial, no matter how many other remedies have failed to help you.

Sold by all druggists. If first bottle fails to benefit your money is returned.

BALD HEADS NOT WANTED.

Baldness is too Generally Considered a Sign of Advanced Age.

A bald-headed person does not have an equal chance with one blessed with a healthy head of hair, because baldness is too generally accepted as an indication of age. Many large corporations have established an age limit, and refuse to take men over 35 years of age as new employees.

Probably 65 per cent of bald-headed people may regain a good head of healthy hair if they will follow our advice and accept our offer. We have a remedy that we positively guarantee to grow hair on any head, unless the roots of the hair are entirely dead, their follicles closed and the scalp has become glazed and shiny. We want people to try this remedy at our risk, with the distinct understanding that unless it does exactly what we claim it will, and gives satisfaction in every respect, we shall make no charge for the remedy used during the trial.

We know exactly what we are talking about, and with this offer back of our statements no one should scoff, doubt our word, or hesitate to put our remedy to an actual test.

We want everyone in Clanton who is suffering from any scalp or hair trouble, dandruff, falling hair, or baldness, to try our Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We want them to use it regularly—say until three bottles have been used—and, if it does not eradicate dandruff, cleanse and refresh the scalp, tighten the hair in its roots, and grow new hair, we will return every cent paid us for the remedy for the mere asking. There is no formality expected, and we exact no obligation from the user whatever.

We are established right here in Clanton, and make this offer with a full understanding that our business success entirely depends upon the sort of treatment we accord our customers, and we would not dare make the above offer unless we were positively certain that we could substantiate it in every particular. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—the Rexall Store. Upchurch Drug Co.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

News has been brought to Cordele Ga., by a farmer that Lee Chitwood, a white man residing in the southeastern section of the county, was found dead in a stretch of woodland near the public road and that he had probably been lynched by a mob of white men. It was further rumored that Chitwood had committed an unmentionable crime upon his 13-year-old stepdaughter about three weeks ago, but had threatened the life of the child if she should disclose the crime.

In the cotton region the season is everywhere backward, and in portions of the middle section the heavy rains of the past week still further have delayed the progress of the usual spring operations. This is the statement made in the Washington weather bureau's crop bulletin just issued. In Texas and Oklahoma, according to the bulletin, the soil appears to be in excellent condition as to moisture and similar conditions prevail over the more eastern states of the belt.

The Supreme court of the United States decided that the United States was in the city Friday on business. courts to set aside conveyances by full-blooded Choctaws and Chickasaws of land inherited by them, whether "homestead" or "surplus" lands. The decision confirms thousands of conveyances.

General.

Sixty-four bodies have been recovered by the cable steamer Mackay-Bennett, which has been searching the vicinity of the Titanic disaster, according to a report that reached this city. It is said a number of bodies which were recovered were sunk again, as they were without identification marks. The 64 bodies recovered are regarded as identifiable, according to the report. Those that were sunk were presumably in a condition making their preservation.

Nine persons were robbed of money and valuables by 3 masked hold-up men who went through the sleeper Nottingham of the Rock Island west bound Golden State limited at Shef field, Ill. After the robbers had finished their work they shot holes in the air signal tube connected with the engine, thus making their escape. Under cover of three revolvers the porter was forced to point out to the outlaws the berths that were occupied.

President Taft will "invade" Massachusetts, where presidential preferential primaries will be held.

The Titanic disaster, as written into history by many of the 745 survivors accounts for the loss of 1,595 persons at sea off the Newfoundland banks, and the subsequent death of persons who had been rescued, bringing the total of lives lost to 1,595. These official figures magnify greatly estimates which had come by wireless and the stories which survivors tell make certain, as had already been judged from the meagre wireless reports, that the disaster is the greatest ocean travel has ever yet known. The big facts which came to the surface in the flood of narratives are that 1,595 persons met their death; that there is no hope that this grand total will be curtailed by a single additional survivor; that several men of wealth and world-wide prominence, as had bene feared for several days, were among those who perished; that practically the only women who were not saved were those who chose to die in their husband's embrace; that nearly all of the survivors saw the Titanic sink and heard the band playing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and the shrieks of those whom the sea claimed as the vessel sank in 2,000 fathoms.

News from the flooded area of the Mississippi valley in Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana continued to be increasingly grave. Thousands of those who were compelled to flee to higher places when the yellow flood invaded their homes have been cared for, but there are still many more who are in imperative need of aid. As the waters continue on their destructive way more appeals for help are being received by those in charge of the relief work.

The Arkansas statute making railroads liable for double the value of stock killed along its track, if claims were not settled in thirty days, was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme court of the United States.

John Dalzell, congressman from the Thirtieth Pennsylvania district, was defeated.

Addie M. Hellen, a $7 per week stenographer, who at the instance of her employer, Palmer M. Dearing, of Albion, Mich., forged many of the notes which led to the failure of the Albion National bank, pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery.

CAPT. ROSTRON IN STATEMENT

Carpathia's Commander Tells of Incidents Leading Up to the Rescue.

GOES TO TITANIC SPEEDILY.

Says He Does Not Remember Receiving Any Message From Scout Cruiser Salem as Coming From President Taft.

BY CAPT. R. W. ROSTRON.

Statement by the captain of the Cunard steamship Carpathia, rescuer of the Titanic survivors:

I cannot yet make a connected statement. I have gone through so much since I received aboard my ship the first distress call of the Titanic that a complete narrative is impossible. I was between 50 and 60 miles away from the Titanic when the wireless sang into the ears of my operator the first call for help. The operator said that we received only one call.

The silence after the first frantic appeal for relief was ominous to me. Our Marconi sent out rays that scraped the sky in vain, but there was no response whatever to any of our inquiries. I swung the Carpathia around straight to the position the poor Titanic's first aerogram said she occupied. Our engines were put at top speed.

The silence of the air so far as the Titanic was concerned made me shudder as we sped on our way to the rescue. I realized what it meant. On and on we sped. Our stokers never worked harder. When the first faint daylight came and I knew we were still miles from the spot of the tragedy, I felt as if we should arrive too late to be of any service.

Sights First Lifeboats.

When, however, after full daylight we sighted the first lifeboat filled with women and children and eight or ten strong armed and brave hearted men of the Titanic's crew, I realized that we could at least save a few human lives. I was too busy for the next hour or so to recall now just what occurred. My mind was wholly set upon saving the lives of the people who crowded the boats.

The sea was calm. There was scarcely a ripple upon its face. Great ice floes were crunching down from the north. In the distance several icebergs shimmered like mirrors. Why the lifeboats were not crushed by the swiftly moving ice floes I could not understand. The 16 boats seemed at first nearly all women.

I remember that it occurred to me that the good God had stretched out his mighty hand and had checked further murder by his elements.

We got aboard the Carpathia every human being in the 16 lifeboats of the Titanic. Every officer and member of our crew stood by like the brave and loyal lads they are and did his full duty.

My mind is in no condition now to tell you much more of what I heard and felt during the two hours' work of the rescues.

We took aboard 705 women and children who were alive, but some of them were unconscious. We also dragged to the decks of the Carpathia four members of the Titanic's crew who had been tolled off to man the lifeboats and were stark dead. They had been frozen to death. Their strong, horny fingers still clutched the oars that they had been desperately pulling. We buried these men in sailors' graves only yesterday from the deck of the Carpathia.

Doesn't Recall President's Message.

I am told that it was reported to President Taft by Captain Chanler of the scout cruiser Salem that the Carpathia had received Wednesday night wireless messages from the commander of the Salem asking in the name of the president if Major Butt, John Jacob Astor, Frank Millet, Clarence Moore and Isidor Straus were aboard his vessel.

Upon my word as a man—upon my honor as a sailor, I cannot remember receiving any such message from Captain Chanler or anybody else in the name of the president or any other person. Had such a message been referred to me I immediately would have ordered that all other business of the wireless be sidetracked until the answer could have been sent to the president that none of his friends, of whom he had inquired, was aboard the Carpathia.

It is possible the Carpathia's wireless operator acknowledged, but refused to answer messages even from the president of the United States received after Wednesday night, as he had then been at his post more than 72 hours without rest. But he never reported such a message to me and I do not blame him.

Knows Nothing of Shooting.

After I reached the Cunard pier I was asked as to the truth of reports that some passengers, and particularly some men passengers on the Titanic, were kept back from the lifeboats at the point of the pistol and that two well-known men were shot. Of course, I was not there. I did not see the ship go down. But from the survivors who came aboard my ship I heard no such story.

I do not give the least credence to that report. If I had to write about it I would denounce it as an abominable lie.

The Carpathia was amply provisioned for the accommodation of the 705 persons rescued and likewise there was abundant comfortable sleeping room for the unexpected increase of her passenger list by bringing into requisition the big lounges in the saloons.

I thank the people who have congratulated me, but I am not entitled to any more credit than would have been due any other man of the sea had the opportunity for the service my ship rendered been afforded to others. I thank Almighty God that I was within wireless hailing distance and that I got there in time to pick up every one of the 705 survivors of the Titanic wreck.

ISMAY IN STATEMENT

Says He Left Titanic on the Last Boat.

Welcomes Investigation by Committee From U. S. Senate or Any Other Source, Is His Comment.

New York, April 19.—J. Bruce Ismay left the ship last night and went to the rear of the dock where the offices of the Cunard line are located. He was guarded by detectives and only a limited number of newspaper men were admitted to his room. He wore a new suit of clothes and one of the new fashioned Scotch caps. He gave out a carefully prepared statement at his desk. His statement was read by one of the officers of the White Star line and then someone asked:

"On what boat did you leave the Titanic?"

He said: "What do you mean; I don't know what you mean."

He was asked on what boat he left the ship and replied: "I left on a boat leaving from the center."

He was asked what the number of the boat was and replied: "The last one. I left from the starboard forward collapsible, the last boat to leave."

He said regarding the collision that the Titanic hit the iceberg a glancing blow and that she slid off, and that in his opinion and in the opinion of experts she tore out a large part of her keel. He then went on to state, as follows:

"In the presence and under the shadow of a catastrophe so overwhelming my feelings are too deep for expression in words. I have only to say that the White Star line, its officers and employes, will do everything possible to alleviate the suffering and sorrows of the survivors and the relatives and friends of those who have perished. The Titanic was the last word in shipbuilding. Every regulation prescribed by the British board of trade had been rigidly complied with. The master, officers and crew were the most experienced and skillful in the British service. I am informed that a committee of the United States senate has been appointed to investigate the circumstances of the accident.

"I heartily welcome the most complete and exhaustive inquiry and any aid that I or my associates or our builders or navigators can render is at the service of the public and the governments of both the United States and Great Britain. Under these circumstances I must respectfully defer making a further statement at this time."

J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star line and one of those who was saved from the wreck of the Titanic, was found ill and in the care of a surgeon and a physician in the surgeon's quarters on board the Carpathia immediately after the rescue ship reached her pier, by the subcommittee of the United States senate investigating committee.

Mr. Ismay was visited by United States Senators William Alden Smith and Francis G. Newlands, who compose the subcommittee.

After two conferences, each of which lasted half an hour, Senators Smith and Newlands succeeded in exacting from Mr. Ismay his personal promise that he would attend today a session of the subcommittee that will be held in the Waldorf-Astoria.

COAL MINE HAS BIG BLAZE

Several Men Are Overcome by Gas Fumes While Fighting Flames in Shaft Near Zanesville.

Zanesville, O., April 19.—Fire has broken out in shaft mine No. 302 near Congo, one of the largest coal mines in Ohio, employing more than 400 men. A force of 100 men is working desperately to get the fire under control. Several of the fire fighters have been overcome by gas fumes.

Sultan of Turkey Wants Peace.

Constantinople, April 19.—The sultan of Turkey in his speech at the opening of parliament, referring to the war in Tripoli, said: "We desire peace, but that peace must be on the condition of an effective and integre maintenance of our sovereign rights."

His mother was a Quaker, and when he wrote that he was the business manager in advance of the show, she wrote him:

"No," answered Joseph.

"And she has a glass eye."

"Yes," answered Joseph meekly.

Rhythmical and Grateful Chant.

A teacher in a Terre Haute public school joins in the chorus:

"Teaching is a business which requires a great deal of brain and nerve force. Unless this force is renewed as fast as expended the teacher is exhausted before the close of the year. Many resort to stimulating tonics for relief.

"For 3 years I struggled against almost complete exhaustion, getting what relief I could from doctors' tonics. Then in the spring of 1903 I had an attack of la grippe and malaria which left me too weak to continue my work. Medicine failed to give me any relief, a change of climate failed. I thought I should never be able to go back in school again.

"I ate enough food (the ordinary kinds—white bread, vegetables, etc.), but was hungry after meals.

"It happened at this time to read an article giving the experience of another teacher who had been helped by Grape-Nuts food. I decided to try Grape-Nuts and cream, as an experiment. It was a delightful experience, and continues so after a year and a half of constant use.

"At first, I noticed that I was not hungry after meals.

"In a few days that tired feeling left me and I felt fresh and bright, instead of dull and sleepy.

"In three months, more than my usual weight returned, and I had gained 15 pounds in weight.

"I finished the year's work without any kind of tonics—was not absent from duty even half a day.

"I am still in best of health, with those who know me wondering at the improvement.

"I tell them all 'Try Grape-Nuts!'" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a reason."

SURVIVORS TELL OF FIGHT IN SEA

Peril Not Known to Passengers Until Long After Titanic Struck.

WOMEN SENT OFF FIRST

Men in Small Boats Try to Sing to Drown Out Cries of the Perishing —Heartrending Scenes Attending Disaster Are Dramatically Described.

New York, April 19.—The stories of the survivors of the Titanic are all practically agreed on one thing, that the passengers on the liner did not realize their peril until long after the vessel struck.

A Mr. Chambers, one of the survivors, had this to say:

"The Titanic struck the iceberg head-on. The passengers ran out, but, believing that the ship could not sink and being assured by the officers, again went back to their staterooms. After about two hours the alarm was sent out and the passengers started to enter the lifeboats. There was nothing like panic at first, as all believed that there were plenty of lifeboats to go around."

After the lifeboat in which Mr. Chambers was had gone about 400 yards from the ship, those in it saw the Titanic begin to settle quickly and there was a rush for the remaining lifeboats. One was swamped.

The great ship sank slowly by its head and no suction was felt by the boat in which Mr. Chambers was.

Tells Scene at Rescue.

A passenger aboard the rescue ship Carpathia, Miss Sue Eva Rule, a sister of Judge Virgil Rule of St. Louis, detailed the thrilling scenes which marked the rescue of the survivors of the greatest marine tragedy of the age.

"Unknown to the sleeping passengers, the ship turned abruptly to the north. None knew of the sudden change of course and the first intimation anybody got of the fact that anything unusual was about to take place was the order given the steward to prepare breakfast for 3,000.

"The tidings ran through the ship like wildfire and long before the Cunarder had come within the scene of the tragedy we were all on deck.

Sight First of Boats.

"Just as day broke a tiny craft was sighted rowing towards us and as it came closer we saw women huddled together, the stronger ones manning the oars. The first to come aboard was a nurse maid, who had wrapped in a coat an eleven-months-old baby, the only one of a family of five persons to be rescued.

"The men and women both seemed dazed. Most of them were almost perished with the cold and some of them who had been literally thrown into the lifeboats perished from exposure.

"One of the most harrowing scenes I ever saw was the service of thanksgiving and followed by the prayers for the dead which followed the incoming of the little band of survivors which took place in the dining saloon of the Carpathia. The moans of the women and the cries of little children as their loss was brought home to them were heartrending. The hope that by some means their beloved ones would be saved never left the survivors.

Survivors in Strange Dress.

"How those who were saved survived the exposure is a miracle. One woman came aboard devoid of underwear, a Turkish towel wrapped about her waist serving as a corset, while a magnificent evening wrap was her only protection.

"Women in evening frocks and white satin slippers and children wrapped in steamer rugs were ordinary sights and very soon the passengers themselves were almost in as bad a plight as the rescued. Trunks were unpacked and clothing distributed right and left. Finally the steamer rugs were ripped apart and sewed into impromptu garments.

"My first view of the first boat sighted led me to think we were picking up the crew of a dirigible. Back of the boat loomed in the shadowy dawn the huge iceberg which had sent the Titanic to the bottom. The lifeboat looked like the usual boat which swings from a balloon.

Women Discuss Scenes.

"After an hour or so of rest the only relief the women who had been literally torn from their husbands seemed to have was in discussing the last scenes. Shooting was heard by many in the lifeboats just before the ship took its final plunge and sunk from sight, and the opinion of many was that the men rather than drown shot themselves.

"Mrs. Astor, who was one of the first to come aboard, was taken at once to the captain's room. Others were distributed among the cabins, the Carpathia's passengers sleeping on the floors of the saloons, in the bathrooms and on the tables throughout the ship in order to let the survivors of the wreck have as much comfort as the ship afforded.

"One woman came aboard with a strapping baby she had never seen until this moment it was thrust into her arms as she swung into the lifeboat. Nothing could equal the generosity and helpfulness of the Carpathia's passengers."

Doubted Word at First.

Mrs. Louis Mansfield Ogden of Manhattan described how she felt when she heard the Carpathia's whistle sounding early in the morning. Mrs. Ogden asked her husband if there was a fog. Mr. Ogden had left the stateroom, however, and did not explain until some ten minutes later. The ship had then slowed down perceptibly, and Mrs. Ogden was pretty nervous.

Then her husband returned and told her that there had been a great accident and that the Carpathia was going to help.

"The passengers are asked to keep to their rooms," he said. "There isn't any need of being frightened. There's bene no fire on our boat, but there has been an accident to the Titanic."

Mrs. Ogden thought that an accident to the Titanic was quite too ridiculous to think of and in that she shared the impression which, so she learned afterward, was current upon the Titanic after the latter had struck. Mrs. Ogden dressed hastily and went o. deck.

Boats Filled With Survivors.

"I saw there on the bosom of the ocean," she said, "a boat full of women and children. I suppose there must have been sailors there, too, but I did not see them. There were only one or two women in evening dress, but most of them were clad in fur coats over their kimonos or nightgowns. They had on their evening slippers and silk stockings. Some of them wore hats.

"Far in the distance were two or three other black specks which we made out also to be boats. As daylight grew we made out more and more boats, three on one side of our ship and five on the other. Still later we picked up more.

"Here ond there on the ocean's surface among the field of ice were bits of wreckage from the broken Titanic, and there were in sight many bergs eighty and ninety feet high. The passengers of the Titanic were taken aboard the Carpathia boatload by boatload up sea ladders.

Most Women Hoisted Aboard.

"The women, most of them, were hoisted to the decks of the Carpathia in swings, but a few were hardy enough to climb aboard by the sea ladders. The ocean all this time was calm as a lake and it was not a difficult task to take the excess passengers aboard.

"Some of the women helped out in the rowing in the lifeboats themselves."

Jumped Into a Small Boat.

Abraham Hyman, a steerage passenger from Manchester, England, won his safety by leaving the steerage and going into the first cabin.

"I got alongside of a boat," he said, "and they lowered it, full of passengers. I just crowded in beside the man at the tiller. They could have taken 15 more people in our boat. There was no commotion in the first cabin. I heard that a man was shot in a panic in the steerage. When our boat got into the water it drifted under the exhaust of the Titanic and we were nearly swamped. We rowed off for about half a mile and then saw the lights on the Titanic sink gradually out of sight. As the boat sank the lights went down, one after another."

Hyman said he heard of one man who had been sitting on a pile of deck chairs when the last explosion came who was blown off with the deck chairs. The man was found in the ocean on the deck chairs.

Boiler Blast Split Vessel.

Mrs. E. W. Carter left the Carpathia terribly shaken by her experience. She was met at the pier by Albert B. Ashforth. Mrs. Carter could not talk of the collision and the wreck, but Mr. Ashforth said that what had impressed her was the last boiler explosion.

"Mrs. Carter said that the shock of the collision was nothing," said Mr. Ashforth, "but the last boiler explosion tore the ship to pieces. She was in the last boat off."

What impressed Z. Taylor of Philadelphia most was the lack of excitement when the ship struck. He said he was on deck when the Titanic hit the iceberg and that he did not see any iceberg and did not think that anybody else did. Mr. Taylor said that he saw Mr. Ismay get into a boat fifteen minutes before the Titanic sank.

"Then came an officer," said Mr. Taylor, "and said: 'This boat is for women only,' and Mr. Ismay got out without raising any disturbance."

MISTAKEN FOR WOMAN; SAVED

Councilman Sloper of Boston Is Forced into Lifeboat and Is Rescued From Death.

Hartford, Conn., April 19.—Resolved to die after having done his utmost to aid in placing the women and children of the Titanic aboard the lifeboats, Councilman William T. Sloper, clad in a white nightrobe, was himself taken for a woman and thrust into one of the last lifeboats lowered away.

His father, Senator Andrew J. Sloper of New Britain, received a message telling of his son's rescue and departed at once for New York.

Stockgrowers Elect Officers.

Miles City, Mont., April 19.—At the closing session of the Montana Stock Growers' association the following officers were elected: President, Kenneth McLean of Miles City; vice presidents, Charles O'Donnell of Billings and N. J. Humphrey of Glendive; secretary and treasurer, W. D. Barnard of Helena.

WOMEN AND HEALTH.

Women are beginning to realize more fully that good health is not to be found in the use of cosmetics and face powders. The appearance of health may follow facial treatment, but health itself lies much deeper than the surface.

Most important to the health of every woman is regularity of the bowels and digestive organs. The weary eyes, bad breath, frequent headaches, pimples and general air of lassitude, is in most every case due to constipation or indigestion, or both. There are various remedies prescribed for this condition, but the easiest, most pleasant and certainly effective, is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This simple remedy is far preferable to harsh salts and cathartics and violent purgative waters that disturb the whole system without affording more than temporary relief.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a tonic laxative, mild in its action, pleasant to the taste and positive in its effect, strengthening the muscles of stomach and bowels so that after a short time these organs regain the power to perform their natural functions without assistance.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it, write for a sample to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.; he will gladly send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

Useful Agent for Show.

Al G. Field, the minstrel man, has another story which he is telling. He says that not long ago an attache of his show was sent out in an Iowa town to give some handbills, or heralds, to boys for distribution. The man found only one boy willing to work. He didn't deem it necessary to explain to the boy that the bills were to be distributed about town. He took it for granted that the boy knew. The youngster took the printed slips of paper and the man gave him a quarter and left. Half an hour later the showman chanced to pass along the street and saw the boy standing on the sidewalk, crying.

"What's the matter?" asked the man.

The boy gave a couple of final sobs and, wiping his eyes on his sleeve, said:

"A man jist come along an' took one of my bills."

Not Needed There.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley was asked the other day if he had heard anything about the recent invention which gives to new wine all the properties of old wine.

"No, I haven't," Doctor Wiley replied. Then, with a smile, he added:

"But, by Jove, I attended a musical comedy performance the other night which certainly must have been treated with that invention."

Women's College for Buddhists.

A university is to be founded by the Buddhists for the high education of women. A meeting is reported to have taken place at the Nishi-Honganji temple, Kyoto, in which it was unanimously decided to carry on the undertaking as a work of the Women's Association of this Buddhist sect. The cost for the institute is estimated at 280,000 yen.

VOL 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, MAY 2, 1912 NO. 6

A LETTER FROM MR. COX

OPPOSES SECURING NEW MEN IN THE PARTY.

Clanton, Ala., April 27, '12

Editor of the Press:

I want to thank my friends, those who went to the polls in my behalf, not those who stayed at home. Although I was defeated yet I am a thorough democrat. I think it is unfair for a democratic candidate in a primary to get the republicans to go into a democratic primary and vote for one or two just to get the nomination as was done by some candidates. Yet I am not defeated as bad as some others may be.

I believe we should vote as we pray. Again I wish to thank one and all.

Yours truly,

W. S. Cox.

The Press would not comment upon Mr. Cox's letter were it not that he has, after a manner, taken the Executive Committee of the party to task upon having extended an invitation to ALL WHITE voters to participate in our primary election. It was distinctly understood by every candidate in the field that ALL WHITE men were invited to take part in this primary and that participation therein was a pledge to support the nominees. Many, many asked the Chairman, the Secretary of the committee if those who had heretofore voted the opposition ticket would be permitted to vote in our primary and both the Chairman and the Secretary stated without hesitation that such was the ruling of the committee, and that it had not only been printed in the news columns of the paper but had been sent as special instructions to each of the Inspectors and Clerks of election.

The committee, in the opinion of most men, acted wisely in making this ruling; there is no way to build up a party except through gaining recruits from the outside. If we should wait for voters to be born and grow up it would prove a long, tedious wait. We have been rejoicing over the fact a number of voters have left the opposition party and are now affiliating with us. We want to extend to such men the most cordial welcome into the ranks of the democracy—yea, to say to them that they are thrice welcome. Knowing that the committee had ruled as above set out no candidate was placed at a disadvantage. Those who were active and persuasive enough to induce their friends to come with us were simply acting upon their rights and were striving for the betterment of the party. We ought to say nay to no man—whomsoever will may come, should be our motto.

But, we have not heard of any considerable number of republicans who participated in our primary; true, quite a number of men who heretofore have never gone into either primary voted with us in April but that does not prove them to have been republicans, or even if it does prove them so, is no reason, under the ruling of the committee why they should have been excluded, it being well understood that by going into the primary they agreed to support the nominees.

This is not a good time for "falling out" among ourselves; it is an excellent time for "closing ranks," joining hands and pulling together.

MEMORIAL DAY FITTINGLY OBSERVED

HONOR PAID CONFEDERATE DEAD EXERCISES UNUSUALLY INTERESTING

Last Friday afternoon was appropriately observed by the "Daughters of the Confederacy" and their friends in paying tribute of respect, honor and love to those who having served their country well have fallen upon sleep.

The twenty sixth of April will go down in history as one of the most memorable of all the eventful days since time began its onward march toward the great sea of eternity for it was upon this day that the stars and bars of the Confederacy were forever furled and the sword of Lee was sheathed never to be drawn again. It was on this day that the tattered and worn soldiers of the Confederacy were bidden to go to their homes and begin life anew; to build up their wasted fortunes and to show to the world the stuff of which they were made.

It is highly appropriate then that the ladies of the Southland should keep green the memory of those old fighters—the equal of whom the world has never seen.

The exercises were opened by Rev. W. M. Olive who acted as Master of Ceremonies; the school children bearing wreaths and flowers had been marched from the school rooms and were accorded seats of prominence. Rev. R. J. Mills opened the exercises with prayer after which the entire assembly joined in singing that glorious old song "How Firm a Foundation." Miss Mable Jones was introduced and in a most charming manner recited "The Blue and The Grey;" at the conclusion of this recitation Hon. J. Osmond Middleton was introduced as the orator of the day, and in a most forceful and beautiful speech paid tribute to the valor and heroism of those who donned the grey and offered their lives on the altars of the country they loved so well.

At the conclusion of Mr. Middleton's address a line of march was formed and all assembled at the cemetery. Having arrived here Miss Courtney, upon her cornet, sounded "Taps" which was the signal for the decoration of the graves of Confederate soldiers, fifty six of whom rest in the silent city of the dead in Clanton.

The exercises were well attended but it was noticible that not a store closed during the ceremonies; elsewhere the day is given over by prince and pauper alike, to the honoring of the memory of those "who fought that we might live"

MR. COBERN EXPRESSES APPRECIATION

THO' DEFEATED HE WILL WORK FOR PARTY SUCCESS.

Please permit me to express my deep appreciation of the honor conferred upon me by those who so generous gave me their support in the recent primary election. Tho' I did not receive enough votes to claim the nomination, I want my friends to know that I value their friendship and support more highly than the emoluments of the office sought.

I shall always be found in the forefront working for the success of the party and I earnestly beseech those of my friends who voted for me to render unto our party nominees the same liberal support given to me.

Respectfully,

W. W. Cobern.

(Note). The above communication has been in the hands of the editor some days, but on account of the crowded condition of our paper has been withheld till now. Those who know Mr. Cobern expected just such a letter as he has written; they know he would not sulk in the camp, but would be among the first to volunteer his services.

NOTICE

MEMBERS OF GIRLS' TOMATO CLUB

It would be well if the girls in each community would meet and form a Club, elect a President, a Secretary and a Treasurer, and hold meetings at each other's homes and discuss your work.

I would like to have the Secretary of each Club report to me after each of these meetings; that is, just write me if your have planted your seed, if they are coming up, when you transplant and all about the work. The Club should meet every two weeks at least.

Chilton county is one of the best in enrollment now, three counties have more than we in the clubs, but you have more than 100 and no doubt this number will increase to 150 in a short time. We do not want any one to drop out of the Club after they join if they can help it, and we want to put forth our best efforts for prosperity. I am

Yours for success,

Bonnie Jenkins.

DALLAS MAY VOTE ON ROAD BOND ISSUE

SECOND ISSUE MAY BE FOR $100,000 OR $150,000

No Doubt But That Election Will Carry When Called.

Selma, Ala., April 23

An election for a second issue of bonds for the building and improving of the roads of the county may be asked for by the court of county commissioners within the next week or ten days as the first bond issue of $250,000 has been exhausted and the road system of the county has not been completed. Citizens in various parts of the county have during the past few days voluntarily taken up the work of circulating petitions for the signatures of voters, asking the court of county commissioners to order an election. It is proposed that the second issue of bonds will be for either $100,000 or $150,000. The required number of names to the petitions will be secured and there is no question but the county authorities will order the election to be held.

The first bond issue for $250,000 has been judiciously expended by the county authorities in building roads. Many thousand dollars of this issue was used for the construction of lasting steel and concrete bridges over the various creeks, branches and rivers of the county and whereby not a dollar will have to be expended for years to come.

But while many good and permanent roads have been built throughout the county by the first bond issue the system of roads as mapped out has not been completed. The uncompleted parts of these roads are the remotest from Selma and if they are not finished will cause hardship to residents living in those sections.

Citizens of Selma as well as the rural residents close to the city recognize the importance of completing the network of good highways which have been mapped out for the county. In the spirit of brotherly love those who are receiving the benefits of the new roads are circulating the petitions asking for a second bond issue. When the election is called there is not the least doubt but the bond issue will carry and the chain of good roads throughout the county will be completed.—Age-Herald.

REPLIES TO MR. GILLESPIE AND SLY OLD FOX

A LETTER TO THE POINT. IT HAS SOME TONE.

Editor of Press:—

Please allow us a little space to reply to the article of Mr. W. H. Gillespie and the "Sly Old Fox;" their howl is "the Country is busted." Mr. Gillespie, how much tax money do you pay into the treasury each year? The records do not show very favorably in your case—in fact it is an extremely slim showing. Now the "Sly Old Fox" pays quite a neat sum into the treasury, but most any "varmint" could pay a good deal of tax if it could get money like "Sly Old Fox"—See?

Yes, "busted;" did "Sly Old Fox" ever bust?" No, he never busted, he just assigned and tried to bust the other fellow. "Sly Old Fox" is afraid a little boodle will be passed around and he won't get any of it.

We ask the "Old Fox" to review the history of his connection of "Foxes" and see if they ever "foraged" any?

We all know who "Sly Old Fox" is, and know his past record. We we all know that.

And Mr. Gillespie wants the Court to convene this Spring instead of giving the farmers a chance to make a living. We suppose he is going to plant cotton seed this coming December, when the election is over, and is going to devote his time to campaigning now. We wouldn't be surprised to see him planting cotton seed in December. Any man who wants to make a crop this year, let him be a republican, democrat, socialist or what not, knows he must work while the sun shines through the months of May, June and July.

But the democrats want to hide their meanness, he says; we want to tell you right now, old fellow, we are willing to compare, are you? We don't fear you. Ah, bless your life, NO! We are more than willing, yea, even anxious to meet you and your sort on the stump so that the people may know more about you.

Read the official report of your republican treasurer and you will change your letter probably, but then, it might be another "Honeycutt letter."

We are keeping up with you old fellow.

I am not the man who paid poll tax for the other fellow in order to vote him, and I didn't recommend a negro for United States Marshal. Voter.

MRS. W. J. RUFFIN PASSES AWAY

Last Friday night, at her residence in Clanton, Mrs. W. J. Ruffin, widow of W. J. Ruffin, who recently died, closed her eyes in endless sleep. Mrs. Ruffin had been a sufferer for many months, which she bore with marvelous Christian fortitude. For months she was unable to leave her home and required the constant attendance and attention of her loved ones. Mrs. Ruffin was a consistent member of the Baptist church, but on account of illness had not been able to attend services for a long period of time. Nevertheless in spirit she was always with those who worshipped there.

She is survived by two sons:—Messrs. McD and J. L. Ruffin, both of whom reside in Clanton. On Saturday her mortal remains were carried to Elmore county and interment had beside her husband in the old family burial ground.

Since the rains have abated the armers around here are to be een in the fields trying to catch up with their work, which has been at a stand-still, practically, for some time.

Measles are in the community, which keeps many from attending preaching and Sunday school.

Every one is urged to come back as soon as practicable.

The library for the Fairview school has been placed in the care of the appointed librarian, Miss Florence Headley. The collection contains some very interesting books for both young and old and everyone is invited to take advantage of the opportunity to read these books.

Mrs P. A Vance is still very sick. Her friends trust for her an early recovery.

Clanton, Ala., April 26th, 1912

To the Honorable Court of County Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama:

Gentlemen:—

I beg to submit the following report of the funds now in the hands of the County Treasurer. I am prompted to do this that you may be advised of the condition the treasury.

General Fund	$2,707.19
Special Road fund	7,197.95
(Less 19 outstanding warrants registerd $3,922.16)
Fine and Forfeiture Fund	1,459.15
Redemption of Land	122.50

You will notice that there is now in the General fund the sum of $2,707.19. Under the law I am required to retain an amount necessary to pay the costs of the coming term of the Circuit Court, and I estimate this will require $2,000. I am also required to pay the preferred claims, such as Pauper claims, etc., which I estimate will require at least $700.00. You will notice that this will leave nothing in the treasury with which to pay any other warrants that may be issued by you. As you understand the money to the credit of the Road fund or other special funds cannot be used under the law to pay warrants drawn under the General Fund.

Very respectfully,

J. W. LITTLEJOHN,

County Treasurer.

NO CAUSE TO DOUBT

A Statement of Facts Backed by a Strong Guarantee.

We guarantee immediate and positive relief to all sufferers from constipation. In every case where our remedy fails to do this we will return the money paid us for it. That's a frank statement of facts, and we want you to substantiate them at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhœa, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies are unsurpassable and ideal for the use of children, old folks and delicate persons. We cannot too highly recommend them to all sufferers from any form of constipation and its attendant evils. That's why we back our faith in them with our promise of money back if they do not give entire satisfaction. Three sizes: 12 tablets 10 cents, 36 tablets 25 cents and 80 tablets 50 cents. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Clanton only at our store,—The Rexall Store. The Upchurch Drug Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer.

CHAPTER III.—(Continued.)

"It was four years an' nine months exactly, Bob," drawled old Kirkby, who well knew what was coming.

"Yes, I dare say you are right. I was up at Evergreen at the time looking after timber interests, when a mule came wandering into the camp, saddle and pack still on his back."

"I knowed that there mule," said Kirkby, "I'd sold it to a feller named Newbold, that had come out yere an' married Louise Rosser, old man Rosser's daughter, an' him dead, an' bein' an' orphan an' this feller bein' a fine young man from the east, not a bit of a tenderfoot nuther, a minin' engineer he called hisself."

"Well, I happened to be there, too, you remember," continued Maitland, "and they made up a party to go and hunt up the man, thinking something might have happened."

"You see," explained Kirkby, "we was all mighty fond of Louise Rosser, the hull camp was actin' like a father to her at the time, so long 's she hadn't nobody else; we was all at the weddin', too, some six months afore. The gal married him on her own hook, of course nobody makin' her, but somehow she didn't seem none too happy, although Newbold, who was a perfect gent, treated her white as far as we knowed."

The old man stopped again and resumed his pipe.

"Kirkby, you tell the story," said Maitland.

"Not me," said Kirkby. "I have seen men shot afore for takin' words out 'n other men's mouths an' I ain't never done that yit."

"You always were one of the most silent men I ever saw," laughed George. "Why, that day Pete yere got shot accidental an' had his whole breast tore out w'en we was lumbering over on Black mountain, all you said was, 'Wash him off, put some axle grease on him an' tie him up.'"

"That's so," answered Pete, "an' there must have been somethin' powerful soothin' in that axle grease, for here I am safe an' sound to this day."

"It takes an old man," assented Kirkby, "to know when to keep his mouth shet. I learned it at the muzzle of a gun."

"I never knew before," laughed Maitland, "how still a man you can be. Well, to resume the story, having nothing to do I went out with the posse the sheriff gathered up—"

"Him not thinkin' there had been any foul play," ejaculated the old man.

"No, certainly not."

"Well, what happened, Uncle Bob?" inquired Enid.

"Just you wait," said young Bob, who had heard the story. "This is an awful good story, Cousin Enid."

"I can't wait much longer," returned the girl. "Please go on."

"Two days after we left the camp, we came across an awful figure, ragged, blood stained, wasted to a skeleton, starved—"

"I have seed men in extreme cases afore," interposed Kirkby, "but never none like him."

"Nor I," continued Maitland.

"Was it Newbold?" asked Enid.

"Yes."

"And what had happened to him?"

"He and his wife had been prospecting in these very mountains; she had fallen over a cliff and broken herself so terribly that Newbold had to shoot her."

"What!" exclaimed Bradshaw. "You don't mean that he actually killed her?"

"That's what he done," answered old Kirkby.

"Poor man," murmured Enid.

"But why?" asked Philips.

"They were five days away from a settlement, there wasn't a human being within a hundred and fifty miles of them, not even an Indian," continued Maitland. "She was so frightfully broken and mangled that he couldn't carry her away."

"But why couldn't he leave her and go for help?" asked Bradshaw.

"The wolves, the bears, or the vultures would have got her. These woods and mountains were full of them then and there are some of them left now I guess."

The two little girls crept closer to their big cousin, each casting anxious glances beyond the fire light.

"Oh, you're all right, little gals," said Kirkby reassuringly, "they wouldn't come nigh us while this fire is burnin', an' they've been pretty well hunted out I guess; 'sides there's men yere who'd like nothin' better'n drawin' a bead on a big b'ar."

"And so," continued Maitland, "when she begged him to shoot her, to put her out of her misery, he did so and then he started back to the settlement to tell his story and stumbled on us looking after him."

"What happened then?"

"I went back to the camp," said Maitland. "We loaded Newbold on a mule and took him with us; he was so crazy he didn't know what was happening; he went over the shooting again and again in his delirium. It was awful."

"Did he die?"

"I don't think so," was the answer, "but really I know nothing further about him. There were some good women in that camp; we put him in their hands and I left shortly afterwards."

"I kin tell the rest," said old Kirkby. "Knowin' more about the mountains than most people hereabouts I led the men that didn't go back with Bob an' Newbold to the place w'ere he said his woman fell, an' there we found her, her body leastways."

"But the wolves?" queried the girl.

"He'd drug her into a kind of a holler and piled rocks over her. He'd gone down into the canon, w'ich was something frightful, an' then climbed up to w'ere she'd lodged. We had plenty of rope, havin' brought it along a purpose, an' we let ourselves down to the shelf where she was a lyin'. We wrapped her body up in blankets an' roped it an' finally drug her up on the old Injun trail, leastways I suppose it was made afore there was any Injuns, an' brought her back to Evergreen camp, w'ich the only thing about it that was green was the swing doors on the saloon. We got a parson out from Denver an' give her a Christian burial."

"Is that all?" asked Enid as the old man paused again."

"Nope."

"Oh, the man?" exclaimed the woman with quick intuition.

"He recovered his senses so they told us, an' we'en we got back he'd gone."

"Where?" was the instant question.

Old Kirkby stretched out his hands.

"Don't ax me," he said, "he'd jest gone. I ain't never seed or heerd of him sence. Poor little Louise Rosser, she did have a hard time."

"Yes," said Enid, "but I think the man had a harder time than she. He loved her?"

"It looked like it," answered Kirkby.

"If you had seen him, his remorse, his anguish, his horror," said Maitland, "you wouldn't have had any doubt about it. But it is getting late. In the mountains everybody gets up at daybreak. Your sleeping bags are in the tents, ladies; time to go to bed."

As the party broke up, old Kirkby rose slowly to his feet; he looked meaningly toward the young woman, upon whom the spell of the tragedy still lingered, he nodded toward the young brook, and then repeated his speaking glance at her. His meaning was patent, although no one else had seen the covert invitation.

"Come Kirkby," said the girl in quick response, "you shall be my escort. I want a drink before I turn in. No, never mind," she said, as Bradshaw and Philips both volunteered. "not this time."

The old frontiersman and the young girl strolled off together. They stopped by the brink of the rushing torrent a few yards away. The noise that it made drowned the low tones of their voices and kept the others, busy preparing to retire, from hearing what they said.

"That ain't quite all the story, Miss Enid," said the old trapper meaningly. "There was another man."

"What!" exclaimed the girl.

"Oh, there wasn't nothin' wrong with Louise Rosser, w'ich she was Louise Newbold, but there was another man; I suspected it afore, that's why she was sad. W'en we found her body I knowed it."

"I don't understand."

"These'll explain," said Kirkby. He drew out from his rough hunting coat a package of soiled letters; they were carefully enclosed in an oil skin and tied with a faded ribbon. "You see," he continued, holding them in his hand yet carefully concealing them from the people at the fire. "W'en she fell off the cliff—somehow the mule lost his footin', nobody never knowed how, leastways the mule was dead an' couldn't tell—she struck on a spur or shelf about a hundred feet below the brink; evidently she was carryin' the letters in her dress. Her bosom was frightfully tore open an' the letters was lyin' there. Newbold didn't see 'em, because he went down into the canon an' came up to the shelf, or butte head, w'ere the body was lyin', but we dropped down. I was the first man down an' I got 'em. Nobody else seein' me, an' there ain't no human eyes, not even my wife's, that's ever looked on them letters, except mine and now yourn."

"You are going to give them to me?"

"I am," said Kirkby.

"But why?"

"I want you to know the hull story."

"But why again?"

"I rather guess them letters'll tell," answered the old man evasively, "an' I like you, and I don't want to see you throwed away."

"What do you mean?" asked the girl curiously, thrilling to the solemnity of the moment, the seriousness, the kind affection of the old frontiersman, the weird scene, the fire light, the tents gleaming ghostlike, the black wall of the canon and the tops of the mountain range broadening out beneath the stars in the clear sky where they twinkled above her head, the strange and terrible story, and now the letters in her hand, which somehow seemed to be imbued with human feeling. Kirkby patted her on the shoulder.

"Read the letters," he said; "they'll tell the story. Good night."

CHAPTER IV.

The Pool and the Water Sprite.

Long after the others in the camp had sunk into the profound slumber of weary bodies and good consciences, a solitary candle in the small tent occupied by Enid Maitland alone gave evidence that she was busy over the letters which Kirkby had handed to her.

It was a very thoughtful girl indeed who confronted the old frontiersman the next morning. At the first convenient opportunity when they were alone together she handed him the packet of letters.

"Have you read 'em?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Wall, you keep 'em," said the old man gravely. "Mebbe you'll want to read 'em agin."

"But I don't understand why you want me to have them."

"Wall, I'm not quite sure myself why, but leastways I do an'—"

"I shall be very glad to keep them," said the girl still more gravely, slipping them into one of the pockets of her hunting shirt as she spoke.

The packet was not bulky, the letters were not many nor were they of any great length. She could easily carry them on her person and in some strange and unexplicable way she was rather glad to have them. She could not, as she had said, see any personal application to herself in them, and yet in some way she did feel that the solution of the mystery would be hers some day. Especially did she think this on account of the strange but quiet open emphasis of the old hunter.

There was much to do about the camp in the morning. Horses and burros to be looked after, fire wood to be cut, plans for the day arranged, excursions laid out, mountain climbs projected. Later on unwonted hands must be taught to cast the fly for the mountain trout which filled the brook and pool, and all the varied duties, details and fascinating possibilities of camp life must be explained to the newcomers.

The first few days were days of learning and preparation, days of mishap and misadventure, of joyous laughter over blunders in getting settled, or learning the mysteries of rod and line, or becoming hardened and acclimated. The weather proved perfect; it was late October and the nights were very cold, but there was no rain and the bright sunny days were invigorating and exhilarating to the last degree. They had huge fires and plenty of blankets and the colder it was in the night the better they slept.

It was an intensely new experience for the girl from Philadelphia, but she showed a marked interest and adaptability, and entered with the keenest zest into all the opportunities of the charming days. She was a good sportswoman and she soon learned to throw a fly with the best of them. Old Kirkby took her under his especial protection and as he was one of the best rods in the mountains, she had every advantage.

She had always lived in the midst of life. Except in the privacy of her own chamber she had rarely ever been alone before—not twenty feet from a man, she thought whimsically, but here the charm of solitude attracted her, she liked to take her rod and wander off alone. She actually enjoyed it.

The main stream that flowed down the canon was fed by many affluents from the mountain sides, and in each of them voracious trout appeared. She explored them as she had opportunity, sometimes with the others, but more often by herself. She discovered charming and exquisite nooks, little stretches of grass, the size perhaps of a small room, flower decked, ferny bordered, overshadowed by tall giant pine trees, the sunlight filtering through their thin foliage, checkering the verdant carpet beneath. Huge moss covered boulders, wet with the everdashing spray of the roaring brooks, lay in midstream and with other natural stepping stones hardby invited her to cross to either shore. Waterfalls laughed musically in her ears, deep still pools tempted her skill and address.

Sometimes leaving rod and basket by the waterside, she climbed some particularly steep acclivity of the canon wall and stood poised, wind blown, a nymph of the woods, upon some pinnacle of rock rising needlelike at the canon's edge above the sea of verdure which the wind waved to and fro beneath her feet. There in the bright light, with the breeze blowing her golden hair, she looked like some Norse goddess, blue eyed, exhilirated, triumphant.

She was a perfectly formed woman on the ancient noble lines of Milo rather than the degenerate softness of Medici. She grew stronger of limb and fuller of breath, quicker and steadier of eye and hand, cooler of nerve, in these demanding, compelling adventures among the rocks in this mountain air. She was not a tall woman, indeed slightly under rather than over the medium size, but she was so perfectly proportioned, she carried herself with the fearlessness of a young chamois, that she looked taller than she was. There was not an ounce of superfluous flesh upon her, yet she had the grace of Hebe, the strength of Pallas Athene, and the swiftness of motion of Atalanta. Had she but carried bow and spear, had she worn tunic and sandals, she might have stood for Diana and she would have had no cause to blush by comparison with the finest model of Praxiteles' chisel or the most splendid and glowing example of Appelles' brush.

Uncle Robert was delighted with her; his contribution to her western outfit was a small Winchester. She displayed astonishing aptitude under his instructions and soon became wonderfully proficient with that deadly weapon and with a revolver also. There was little danger to be apprehended in the daytime among the mountains, the more experienced men thought, still it was wise for the girl always to have a weapon in readiness, so in her journeyings, either the Winchester was slung from her shoulder or carried in her hand, or else the Colt dangled at her hip. At first she took both, but finally it was with reluctance that she could be persuaded to take either. Nothing had ever happened. Save for a few birds now and then she had seemed the only tenant of the wilderness of her choice.

One night after a camping experience of nearly two weeks in the mountains and just before the time for breaking up and going back to civilization, she announced that early the next morning she was going down the canon for a day's fishing excursion.

None of the party had ever followed the little river very far, but it was known that some ten miles below the stream merged in a lovely gemlike lake in a sort of crater in the mountains. From thence by a series of water falls it descended through the foothills to the distant plains beyond. The others had arranged to climb one especially dangerous and ambition provoking peak which towered above them and which had never before been surmounted so far as they knew. Enid enjoyed mountain climbing. She liked the uplift in feeling that came from going higher and higher till some crest was gained, but on this occasion they urged her to accompany them in vain.

When the fixity of her decision was established she had a number of offers to accompany her, but declined them all, bidding the others go their way. Mrs. Maitland, who was not feeling very well, old Kirkby, who had climbed too many mountains to feel much interest in that game, and Pete the horse wrangler, who had to look after the stock, remained in camp; the others with the exception of Enid started at daybreak for their long ascent. She waited until the sun was about an hour high and then bade good-bye to the three and began the descent of the canon. Traveling light, for she was going far—farther, indeed, than she knew—she left her Winchester at home, but carried the revolver with the fishing tackle and substantial luncheon.

Now the river—a river by courtesy only—and the canon turned sharply back on themselves just beyond the little meadow where the camp was pitched. Past the tents that had been their home for this joyous period the river ran due east for a few hundred feet, after which it curved sharply, doubled back and flowed westward for several miles before it gradually swung around to the east on its proper course again.

It had been Enid's purpose to cut across the hills and strike the river where it turned eastward once more, avoiding the long detour back. In fact, she had declared her intention of doing that to Kirkby and he had given her careful directions so that she should not get lost in the mountains.

But she had plenty of time and no excuse or reason for saving it, she never tired of the charm of the canon; therefore, instead of plunging directly over the spur of the range, she followed the familiar trail and after she had passed westward far beyond the limits of the camp to the turning, she decided, in accordance with that utterly irresponsible thing, a woman's will, that she would not go down the canon that day after all, but that she would cross back over the range and strike the river a few miles above the camp and go up the canon.

She had been up in that direction a few times, but only for a short distance, as the ascent above the camp was very sharp, in fact for a little more than a mile the brook was only a succession of water falls; the best fishing was below the camp and the finest woods were deeper in the canon. She suddenly concluded that she would like to see what was up in that unexplored section of the country and so, with scarcely a momentary hesitation, she abandoned her former plan and began the ascent of the range.

Upon deliberation she rightly blame[d] [illegible] consequences de[cided]. Whether she should go up the stream or down the stream, whether she should follow the rivulet to its source or descend it to its mouth, was apparently a matter of little moment, yet her whole life turned absolutely upon that decision. The idle and unconsidered choice of the hour was frought with gravest possibilities. Had that election been made with any suspicion, with any foreknowledge, had it come as the result of careful reasoning or far-seeing of probabilities, it might have been understandable, but an impulse, a whim, the vagrant idea of an idle hour, the careless chance of a moment, and behold! a life is changed. On one side were youth and innocence, freedom and happiness, a happy day, a good rest by the cheerful fire at night; on the other, peril of life, struggle, love, jealousy, self sacrifice, devotion, suffering, knowledge—scarcely Eve herself when she stood apple in hand with ignorance and pleasure around her and enlightenment and sorrow before her, had greater choice to make.

How fortunate we are that the future is veiled, that the psalmist's prayer that he might know his end and be certified how long he had to live is one that will not and cannot be granted; that it has been given to but One to foresee his own future, for no power apparently could enable us to stand up against what might be, because we are only human beings not sufficiently alight with the spark divine. We wait for the end because we must, but thank God we know it not until it comes.

Nothing of this appeared to the girl that bright sunny morning. Fate hid in those mountains under the guise of fancy. Lighthearted, carefree, fitted with buoyant joy over every fact of life, she left the flowing water and scaled the cliff beyond which in the wilderness she was to find after all, the world.

The ascent was longer and more difficult and dangerous than she had imagined when she first confronted it perhaps it was typical and foretold her progress. More than once she had to stop and carefully examine the face of the canon wall for a practicable trail; more than once she had to exercise extremest care in her climb, but she was a bold and fearless mountaineer by this time and at last surmounting every difficulty she stood panting slightly, a little tired, but triumphant upon the summit.

The ground was rocky and broken, the timber line was close above her and she judged that she must be several miles from the camp. The canon was very crooked, she could see only a few hundred yards of it in any direction. She scanned her circumscribed limited horizon eagerly for the smoke from the great fire that they always kept burning in the camp, but not a sign of it was visible. She was evidently a thousand feet above the river whence she had come. Her standing ground was a rocky ridge which fell away more gently on the other side for perhaps two hundred feet toward the same brook. She could see through vistas in the trees the uptossed peaks of the main range, bare, chaotic, snow crowned, lonely, majestic, terrible.

The awe of the everlasting hills is greater than that of heaving seas. Save in the infrequent periods of calm, the latter always moves; the mountains are the same for all time. The ocean is quick, noisy, living; the mountains are calm, still—dead!

The girl stood as it were on the roof of the world, a solitary human being, so far as she knew, in the eye of God above her. Ah, but the eyes divine look long and see far; things beyond the human ken are all revealed. None of the party had ever been this far from the camp in this direction she knew. And she was glad to be the first, as the fatuously believed, to observe that majestic solitude.

STATE TAKES HAND IN FIGHT

New Jersey Leads In Advanced Legislation Designed to Check Spread of Tuberculosis.

What is designated by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis as the most advanced legislation in the campaign against tuberculosis that has been enacted by any state in the United States, if not by any country in the world, is found in a bill recently passed by the New Jersey legislature and signed by Governor Wilson. The new law provides that tuberculosis patients who refuse to obey the regulations laid down by the state board of health concerning the prevention of their disease, and thus become a menace to the health of those with whom they associate shall be compulsorily segregated by order of the courts, in institutions provided for this purpose. If such a patient refuses to obey the rules and regulations of the institution in which he is placed, he may "be isolated or separated from other persons and restrained from leaving the institution." The law further provides that all counties in the state of New Jersey shall within six months from April 1st make provision in special institutions for the care of all persons having tuberculosis in these counties. The state treasurer will subsidize each county to the extent of $3.00 a week for each person maintained in these institutions, except those who are able to pay for the cost of maintenance.

THE OLD PLEA

He "Didn't Know It Was Loaded."

The coffee drinker seldom realizes that coffee contains the drug, caffeine, a severe poison to the heart and nerves, causing many forms of disease, noticeably dyspepsia.

"I was a lover of coffee and used it for many years, and did not realize the bad effects I was suffering from its use. (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it, too, contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"At first I was troubled with indigestion. I did not attribute the trouble to the use of coffee, but thought it arose from other causes. With these attacks I had sick headache, nausea and vomiting. Finally my stomach was in such a condition I could scarcely retain any food.

"I consulted a physician; was told all my troubles came from indigestion, but was not informed what caused the indgestion. I kept on with the coffee, and kept on with the troubles, too, and my case continued to grow worse from year to year until it developed into chronic diarrhea, nausea and severe attacks of vomiting. I could keep nothing on my stomach and became a mere shadow, reduced from 150 to 128 pounds.

"A specialist informed me I had a very severe case of catarrh of the stomach, which had got so bad he could do nothing for me, and I became convinced my days were numbered.

"Then I chanced to see an article setting forth the good qualities of Postum and explaining how coffee injured people so I concluded to give Postum a trial. I soon saw the good effects—my headaches were less frequent, nausea and vomiting only came on at long intervals and I was soon a changed man, feeling much better.

"Then I thought I could stand coffee again, but as soon as I tried it my old troubles returned and I again turned to Postum. Would you believe it, I did this three times before I had sense enough to quit coffee for good and keep on with the Postum. I am now a well man with no more headaches, sick stomach or vomiting, and have already gained back to 147 pounds." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SEVERE STORM HITS OKLAHOMA TOWNS

APPROXIMATELY 41 LIVES LOST AND THE LIST OF INJURED TOTALS OVER 100.

20 VILLAGES STORM SWEPT

Heavy Wind Accompanied by Downpour—Relief Parties Sent out. Rock Island Bridge is Gone.

Oklahoma City. — Approximately 41 lives were lost in the storm which swept northward from Childress, Tex., into Oklahoma, and over a portion of the southwestern and central part of the state, according to reliable reports. There are reports of other fatalities, but this cannot be verefied. The list of injured totals more than 100. Fully 20 towns were embraced in the storm-swept area.

Relief parties were sent out from Arapahoe in automobiles and it is reported that the towns of Butler and Foss were literally wiped out.

The heavy wind was accompanied by a terrific downpour of rain and in many instances hail. The fall of rain amounted from one to five inches. As a result all of the smaller streams in Western Oklahoma are on a rampage. The Rock Island bridge over the Cimmerron river, 30 miles south of Enid, washed out and all trains are being detoured.

The two branches of Elk creek, west of Hobart, have joined the stream which is over a mile wide.

A farmer's family of four, living west of Hobart, names unknown, are said to have been killed. High water prevented any news from the surrounding country. All rural telephone lines are down.

All of Central Oklahoma seems demoralized and it will be several days before anything like an accurate estimate of the property loss or list of dead and injured can be secured.

A call for aid was sent out by the town officials of Lugert, who say that there are 30 destitute families there.

Following is a summary of the damage to life and property in the storm-swept territory:

Foss, Okla., 10 persons reported killed; 25 or 30 injured; town badly torn up.

Butler, Okla., nine reported killed; many injured; several buildings blown down.

Sentinel, Okla., two persons reported killed. Fifty houses blown down.

Hobart, Okla., country west of this point visited by terrific winds. Two known dead, four others reported dead, several injured, great damage to property.

Lugeht, Okla., two killed, five fatally injured and scores less seriously hurt. One store building left standing.

Rocky, Okla., one killed, half of town blown away. Upward of dozen injured.

Calumet, Okla., three killed, six or eight injured. Heavy property loss.

At Eldorado, Okla., it was reported that four were killed and many injured.

Martha, Warren and Blair still cut off from communication and it is reported that they are blown away.

Korn, Okla., town torn up, but no loss of life reported.

Colony, Okla., Indian agency building wrecked, no loss of life or injuries reported.

Reports of numerous smaller cyclones received from Minco, Yukon, Malhall and pointe in Garfield county, south of Enid.

In the vicinity of Kirkland, Texas, near Childress, seven killed and 30 houses wrecked.

WATER HIGHEST EVER KNOWN.

Situation so Acute That the Guards on the Levee Are Being Redoubled.

Baton Rouge.—With a rise of more than a quarter of a foot below the mouth of the Red river, where the belated floods of the Dog Tail and Panther Forest crevasses are pouring back into the Mississippi river, resulting in the highest water ever known here in the history of the river, the flood situation has reached such a serious point that levee guards south of this place were redoubled.

Reports from the sections already under water indicate that the work of the relief committees and the United States army is going ahead with such regularity as conditions will permit.

All reports of destitute and marooned have been followed up and relief accorded and refugees camps at Vicksburg, Delhi and half a dozen other places are hourly receiving recruits brought in by the rescue parties navigating the waters covering the thousands of acres many miles away from the river.

The levees in this section are being put to the most severe test since their construction, and it is believed that the next ten days will see the danger all passed, provided no further breaks occur.

SO BLUE ALMOST CRAZY

Mineral Point Lady Tells About An Experience That Almost Drove Her Insane.

Mineral Point, Mo.—Mrs. Clara Cluff, of this place, says: "I had a pain in my left side and back, and suffered a great deal with womanly troubles.

I would take spells that lasted two or three days, when it seemed like I was uneasy all the time, and didn't feel like doing anything.

I couldn't sleep good at night. I felt as though I had just done a hard day's work.

I had suffered for six years, and I can't tell you just how I did feel, I felt so bad. The doctors' treatment didn't seem to help, and I was so blue I was almost crazy!

I tried Cardui, and before I had taken two bottles I felt much better.

I took 12 bottles in all.

Now, though I haven't taken any for a good while, I still feel all right—better than I have for years.

I would have been crazy if Cardui hadn't helped me."

Cardui will help you, just as it helped Mrs. Cluff.

Why not try it?

It may be just the very thing your system has long been craving.

"Not at all. The marquis climbed a tree to get out of the way, and fell and broke his neck."

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

HIS SERMON IN A NUTSHELL

Comprehensive and Succinct Report of What Was Said in the Funeral Oration.

A popular Irishman, beloved for many a mile around his home town, died suddenly. He belonged to several organizations, and the A. O. H. of Bloomville, decided to send a representative to his funeral.

The church was packed and the clergyman most sympathetic. In expressing his certainty of immortality he went in for simile.

"We will say," he observed for illustration, "that here is a beautiful watch. The case is good and is studded with diamonds. It looks like the valuable part of the watch, but you can remove the works and they will keep on ticking."

The delegate returned to his home town and was sounded on the topic of the funeral sermon.

"Well," he reported, "the father said that Pat was no Waterbury."

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

Miss. Dorr.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes Miss. W. Dorr, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 147 pounds.

We are printing in another column of this issue a statement made to the Court of County Commissioners by County Treasurer Littlejohn.

This statement shows that there is in the county treasury for all purposes something over ELEVEN THOUSAND dollars, which we take to be a first-class showing for a county the size of Chilton; in the "General Fund" there is $2707.19; which would go a long way toward paying off the general debts of the county, but, under the law, the Treasurer is required to reserve enough in this fund to discharge all obligations incurred by the Circuit Court—the Treasurer estimates that it will require about $2000.00 to discharge these claims; he is also required to reserve funds for other preferred claims, which he estimates will take an additional $700.00.

This then will absorb practically all the money in the "General Fund," but does that bankrupt the county? Even when all these claims have been paid the county will have more than EIGHT THOUSAND DOLLARS in the treasury—quite a tidy little sum, we should say.

Of course no one will charge the Treasurer with sinister motives in making his statement; under the law it was duty to do so, but there will be many who, anxious to "throw off" on the Commissioners' Court and the Probate Judge, will exclaim "just a year or two of democratic administration and the county is bankrupt!" We do not pretend to defend either the Commissioners Court or the Probate Judge—all are capable gentlemen and amply able to defend themselves, but we wish to call attention to one or two facts which probably are not well understood. In the first place the Probate Judge Judge has no vote in the Commissioners Court—except in case of a tie vote between the Commissioners, which is almost outside the range of possibility since three of the commissioners are republicans and only one is a democrat. Hence, the charge that the Probate Judge is responsible for the finances of the county is the merest rubbish and the purest of political gabble.

The Commissioners are all gentlemen—the three republican members have the interests of the county at heart as much so as the democratic member—they certainly have as much interest in the affairs of the county and over which they have control as have those who are finding fault with their administration. They are honest, capable and conscientious—they are as well qualified to handle the affairs of the county as are those who are criticising their administration. The county is far from being bankrupt as a few republican politicians would have our citizens to believe—it is in a very healthy condition financially—far better than a majority of the counties of the State.

Then too, it must be remembered that the presen Probate Judge and two of the present Commissioners took charge at a very critical time—the county was as near the verge of bankruptcy then as now

The fault lies not with the Probate Judge or the Commissioners' Court, but with the system under which the county's finances are handled.

Most of the larger counties of the state have discarded the old system of keeping half a dozen or more "funds"—some to swell and grow, while others dwindle away. They act on the principle that if the county has any money on hand and owes debts of any kind the money on hand should go to discharge those debts regardless of what fund the money shall come from. There's as much reason in having half a dozen funds in a county system of financing its affairs as there would be for a house keeper to keep half a dozen funds and refuse to buy meat for his children because all the money happened to be in the "bread fund" or the "stocking fund."

But that is a matter for future discussion. Look over Mr. Littlejohn's statement; compare it with other years, recollect that three members of the court are republicans, recall that the Probate Judge has no vote in spending the county's money, bear in mind that the commissioners are business men who have the welfare of the county at heart, that they have discharged their duty under their oaths and then listen with patience to the "political twangle" of a few who, seeking office, would befoul their own nests in order to make headway.

The county is not "busted;" its a long way from it. A very healthy financial condition is the condition in which Chilton finds itself.

Elsewhere appears the announcement that the Court of County County Commissioners, in responce to a large petition, has ordered an election to determine whether or not a special tax of ten cents on each hundred dollars of taxable property shall be levied for school purposes.

This is not an INCREASE of taxation by any means; it is the same tax which has for years been levied for school purposes. Under the law the people of a county are permitted to assume this extra tax assessment for school purposes but they cannot do so for a term less than two years or more than six years at any one time. The time for the special assessment for schools has expired and it is for the purpose of determining whether or not they want this tax continued. Unless it is continued the schools of the county will suffer to the extent of about five thousand dollars each year, and the children of the county will be the sufferers.

It is in no manner a party issue, but one in which republicans, democrats, socialists and all are vitally interested. We owe it to the children of the county to continue this tax; to deprive them of it means to take from them that which is prised most highly—the right to acquire knowledge.

This tax has been levied for many years heretofore and should be continued without interruption.

Should you hear one say it is a party issue, or that it ought not to longer exist, tell him that you are for the education of Chilton's children; for giving them the same opportunities the other children enjoy and that you are going to vote for the retention of that tax.

Remember that the large corporations, who have no children to educate in Chilton, pay more than six tenths of the tax.

Quite a large crowd of Clantonites spent last Sunday at Mountain Creek, among them Senator and Mrs. Curry and daughters, Misses Annie Williams and Louise Hall and Mr. Frank Thomas.

Though in his 76th year, H.L. Knight, Covena, Ga., was recently cured of a severe and painful kidney trouble. He says: "I had to get up too often at night, and my back ached terribly. But after taking two bottles of Foley Kidney Pills my backache is cured, the secretions have cleared up, the Foley Kidney Pills have given me more relief than anything I have ever taken." Upchurch Drug Co.

Mrs. Arthur Johnson is expected home the latter part of the week from an extended visit to her old home in Owensville, Ind.

There is a man in Hiltonia, Ga., whose release from pain and suffering is due to Foley Kidney Pills. He recommends them. "I suffered with kidney trouble recently and had awful pains in my back. I got a bottle of Foley Kidney Pills and after taking them I am entirely cured and cheerfully recommend them to all." Upchurch Drug Co.

There are people in this town who unthinkingly neglect a "mere cold" though they would not otherwise expose their children or themselves to danger. Yet a cold neglected may develope into contagious diptheria, bronchitis, or pneumonia. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly for it stops coughs quickly and cures colds. It contains no opiates and is safe for children. Upchurch Drug Co.

HOW JESUS PREACHED TO SPIRITS IN PRISON

Who They Are and the Cause of Their Imprisonment.

Pastor Russell Explodes the Theory That Jesus Preached to Dead Humans in Prison—Fate of the Dead of the Titanic Disaster Pointed Out From Scriptures.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Atlanta, Ga., April 28.—While we weep with the survivors of the "Titanic" disaster, let us thank God that a better understanding of the Bible enables us to sorrow not hopelessly. Not long ago, misguided by our creeds of the Dark Ages, we would have asked, Were any of the 1500 who perished saints? And assured that very few of them would have claimed to be saints, we would have concluded that all the remainder plunged down to a Catholic Purgatory of terror, or worse, to a Protestant hell of eternal torture.

Even the tales of their great gallantry and heroism would not have altered the decision which would have hung on the question. Did they confess Jesus in word and deed? we would have asked. Were they church members? This is the same argument used respecting the 90,000 heathen who die every day in the year, "going down into Christless graves," the "London Missionary Society" truly says, but means and is understood to mean into Christless eternal torture!

Now, how different! Now we see that a faithful, elect Church is being selected during this Age; that in the next Age they with Jesus may assist, bless, uplift all the non-elect to an earthly salvation to human perfection, in the new Paradise—Earth—which Messiah's Kingdom will usher in. Thus, only the wilfully wicked will ever be annihilated.

But our old errors die hard; because we have twisted the Bible to fit them. For instance, let us consider St. Peter's words:—"Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the Just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened in the spirit, by which (two experiences—death and resurrection) He preached unto the spirits in prison" (I Peter iii, 18, 19).

This text has been made the basis for some very peculiar presentations. The difficulty in every case seems to be the failure to remember that the Bible always and everywhere teaches that the dead are really dead, that they will know nothing until the resurrection. Therefore, it would be impossible to preach to the dead humans.

Spirits Once Disobedient.

St. Peter tells us the time of the disobedience of these spirits—"in the days of Noah, while the ark was preparing."

Turning to Genesis vi, 1-5, we find there the cause of the disobedience of these angels who for a time had been permitted to see what they could do for the uplift of humanity, or, rather, permitted to demonstrate that the downward tendency of sin is incurable except in the manner which God has already arranged for through Messiah and His reign of 1,000 years.

The particular sin of those angels was that when they were granted the privilege of materializing—of taking human bodies—for the sake of helping and instructing mankind—they misused this power and took to themselves wives.

The offspring of this improper union were "giants," both physically and mentally superior to the fallen human family—"men of renown." The race thus in several centuries became so corrupt that apparently only Noah and his family were left uncontaminated.

It was then and there that God imprisoned these spirits ("angels, who kept not their first estate"), and are therefore called fallen angels, devils, demons. They were not imprisoned in some far-off world called hell, nor are they engaged there in stoking fires.

The record is that God cast them down, that they might not longer associate with the holy angels, but must be reserved in tartarus—our earth's atmosphere.—Jude 6; II Peter ii, 4, 5.

When imprisoned or cut off from the privilege of materialization, many of the fallen spirits continued their active opposition to God, like Satan, and are spoken of as his angels.

How Jesus Preached in Death.

Here arises another question: If Jesus really died, as the Scriptures declare; if "He poured out His soul unto death" and "made His soul an offering for sin," and His soul was not raised from the dead until the third day after His crucifixion, how could He in the meantime preach to spirits in prison, or to anybody else? We reply that He could preach in the same way that the Apostle refers to, saying, "Abel, being dead, yet speaketh" (Hebrews xi, 4).

"But when they perceived His resurrection on the third day to glory, honor and immortality ("far above angels, principalities and powers"), His sermon to them was complete, namely, that "the wages of sin is death," but "the gift of God is eternal life" (Romans vi, 23). And as they realized thus the Power of God and the Love of God for His human creatures, the Apostle's words must have come with power to their hearts.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

Traveling 150 miles in a motor boat through the parishes of Richland, East Carroll and Madison, Louisiana, an Associated Press correspondent only sighted land twice after leaving Delhi. Twice the small open boat came near being swamped by high waves and unusually swift currents sweeping across the thousands of acres of open farm lands.

General.

The exhibition in Philadelphia of moving pictures depicting the sinking of the Titanic has been forbidden by Mayor Blankenburg. In his letter ordering the police to stop the exhibitions the mayor said: "These pictures are all fakes. I think it is about the limit for the proprietor of moving picture houses to commercialize on such a terrible disaster.

It became known that two laborers employed in cutting a street through the farm of United States Senator Martine, known as the Cedar Brook farm near Plainfield, N. J., found a tin can containing $1,000 in greenbacks. The finders were William Myers, a negro, and Pasquale Delato, who equally divided the money between them. The money was discolored with age and the can looked as though it had been buried for years. There was nothing to show who buried the money.

Governor Herbert S. Hadley and his friends swung the Missouri Republican convention for Colonel Roosevelt after a 24-hour deadlock, in which the Taft leaders were finally driven to surrender. Eight delegates-a-tlarge to the national Republican convention, all Roosevelt men and all instructed for him, were elected after two Taft leaders had been elected and then had resigned their places on the Missouri delegation when the convention voted instructions for Roosevelt.

The army transport Buford left San Francisco, Cal., for the west coast of Mexico to pick up any American refugees who may wish to leave the country. The Buford will visit Topolobampo, Altata, Mazatlan, all in the state of Sinaloa; San Blas, Tepic, Manzanillo, in Colima and Acapulco, in Guerrere. The vessel is sent at the request of the state department after urgent requests from many Americans stranded in the Mexican states bordering the Pacific.

Military men and men prominent in public and private life gathered in New York City to pay final honors to Maj. Gen. Frederick D. Grant, who died there April 11. The funeral exercises were deferred to await the arrival of the general's daughter, the Princess Cantacuzne, from her home in Russia. President Taft, Vice President Sherman and Gen. Leonard Wood were perhaps the most distinguished persons who came to New York for the funeral.

The bodies of Col. John Jacob Astor and Isidor Strauss, who lost their lives in the Titanic disaster, have been recovered. There are forty-nine additional iaentifications of forty-nine of the heretofore unknown recovered dead. This makes a total of 205 corpses picked up at sea near the place where the Titanic went down.

Harold G. Lowe, fifth officer of the sunken Titanic, told the senate investigating committee his part in the struggle of the survivors for life following the Titanic catastrophe. His testimony developed that, with a volunteer crew, he rescued four men from the water, saved a sinking collapsible lifeboat, by towing it astern of his, and took off twenty men and one woman from the bottom of an overturned boat. Every one of those under his charge he landed safely on the Carpathia.

Stories of inhuman cruelties and barbaric tortures of the living, with unspeakable desecration of the dead, continued to become known here when other refugees, arriving from Mexico on the steamer Texas, submitted to interviews. W. R. M. Lima, an American attorney of Honolulu, and J. Flexon, an American railroad engineer, related such stories in Galveston, Texas. According to Mr. Lima, there are but few places in the entire republic of Mexico where Americans are safe.

According to a bulletin issued by the state board of health hookworm have been found in 18 per cent. of the specimens submitted to the state laboratory in twenty counties in Kentucky.

Narrowly escaping a disaster, the steamship Iroquois came into port at Charleston, S. C.

The revolution in Fez, the Moroccan capital, developed into a veritable massacre. It is now known that fifteen French officers and forty soldiers were killed in the fighting with mutinous Moorish soldiers, while 13 French citizens were massacred.

Approximately forty-one lives were lost in the storm which swept northward from Childress, Texas, into Oklahoma and over a portion of the southwestern and central parts of Oklahoma, according to reliable reports. There are reports of other fatalities, but these cannot be verified. The lists of injured totals more than one hundred. Fully twenty towns were embraced in the storm-swept area. The heavy wind was accompanied by a terrific downpour of rain and in many instances hail. The fall of rain amounted to from one to five inches. As a result all of the smaller streams in western Oklahoma are on a rampage.

Bonnot, leader of an organized gang of automobile bandits, who have been terrorizing Paris, France, and the surrounding district for months past, and Dubois, a notorious Anarchist, were shot to death in the most thrilling encounter in the annals of French crime. A garage at Choisy-le-Roi, six miles south of Paris, in which the bandits had taken refuge, was blown up by dynamite, after these two men had kept at bay for five hours a large part of the police force of Paris, a contingent of gendarmes, two companies of republican guards and a company of engineers. Ten thousand spectators viewed the battle from points of vantage.

Shipping men in New York express keen interest as to how the immense funds that have been subscribed in England and America for the relief of Titanic survivors will be distributed. The total already raised in London and New York is considerably in excess of a million dollars. Some of the survivors in New York have expressed apprehensions that professional beggars will try to take advantage of ehe sympathy aroused by the Titanic disaster with a chance of reaping a rich harvest.

When the White Star liner Olympic, sister ship of the Titanic, was ready to sail from Southampton, England, for New York, 300 firemen and engine room workers quit the vessel, declaring that the collapsible boats on the Olympic were unseaworthy. The Olympic is lying off Ryde, Isle of Wight, with 1,400 passengers aboard. There were reports that some of the passengers had refused to sail, but for the present they all remain aboard

Over one hundred dead bodies of the Titanic dead were seen afloat on the water by the steamship Bremen, which has just arrived in New York from Bremen. From the bridge officers of the ship saw over a hundred bodies floating in the sea, a boat upside down, together with a number of small pieces of wood, steamer chairs and other wreckage. In the vicinity of the disaster was seen an iceberg which answered the description of the one the Titanic struck. Smaller bergs were sighted the same day, but at some distance farther from where the Titanic sank.

Justin McCarthy, novelist and historian, and for many years a member of the English parliament, died at Folkestone, England. He had been ill throughout the winter and spring

Washington.

Mrs. William H. Taft has given the first dollar to a woman's Titanic memorial, which it is proposed shall be erected in Washington to commemorate all who went down with the ship. A committee of 100 women from all states has been named and no contributions will be accepted from men. It is planned to reach the 28,000 women's clubs with an appeal for the memorial. It is planned to make it "woman's tribute to heroic mankind."

An international conference to formulate regulations to diminish the likelihood of the repetition of the Titanic disaster was recommended in resolutions adopted by the American Society of International Law. Senator Root was authorized to bring to the attention of the government the action of the organization "as to the great desirability of such an international conference and of the adoption of such rules as may be formed to increase the safety of travel by sea."

Partial home rule for Alaska, with authority vested in the legislature to grant to women the right to vote, was approved by the house when it passed the bill for a local Alaskan government. Woman's suffrage scored its first victory in the house when by a vote of 31 to 35 an amendment was adopted assuring to the Alaskan legislature the right "to modify the qualification of electors by extending the elective franchise to women."

A feature which developed before the senate investigating committee into the Titanic disaster was that Officer Lowe was compelled to swear at J. Bruce Ismay, chief official of the White Star line. Lowe said he shouted to Ismay: "Get to hell out of here so I can work," while Lowe and other officers were trying to lower a lifeboat. Ismay was not trying to get into the boat, but his actions were confusing.

At the call of President Taft representatives of chambers of commerce and boards of trade from every part of the United States and the insular possessions gathered in Washington to form a national chamber of commerce to co-operate with the Federal government in promoting the nation's business interests and solving her economic problems. Seven hundred and fifty delegates responded to the president's call. Urging the establishment of a permanent trade body to help the government solve problems of business, Secretary Nagel was the chief speaker.

STATE NEWS OF INTEREST

MINOR HAPPENINGS IN ALABAMA CITIES, TOWNS AND VILLAGES.

TALK OF AN EXTRA SESSION

Many Believe Legislature Will Meet In Summer—Governor Opposed to Extra Session.

Montgomery.—Talk of an extra session of the Alabama legislature some time during the summer continues to be one of the leading topics in official circles Many people in this city, both in public and in private life, anticipate that the governor will issue a call for a special session wihin the near future, basing their belief on the theory that many reforms are needed in the laws enacted by the last legislature; that the condition of the state treasury is such as to demand immediate consideration on the part of Alabama law-makers, and that the railroad rate legislation has assumed such proportions as to be presented to the legislative body of the state. Governor O'Neal has placed himself on record as being opposed to an extra session, having issued a statement not more than a week ago to the effect that he would not call an extra session unless it should become imperative. At the same time the governor declares that the matter that causes him the gravest concern was the situation with reference to the railroad rate legislation. This matter, however, he hoped would be properly adjusted by the state's attorneys without the necessity of his intervention.

Montgomery.—Lawyers, physicians and other professional men of Alabama must pay an annual tax of $5 per year under section 33 of the state revenue code, which Judge Armistead Brown, of the Montgomery city court, has just held to be constitutional. The section was attacked by a local attorney, on the ground that the section was violative of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution because it exempts Confederate soldiers from the tax. The court held, however, that such exemption does not constitute a violation of the federal constitution. An appeal to the supreme court will be taken.

Montgomery.—The public schools of Alabama will, on May 3, celebrate Bird day. The state department of education has sent out to nearly all the teachers of the state copies of the Bird day book, which was prepared by John H. Wallace, Jr., fish and game commissioner, with the suggestion that the program as outlined in the pamphlet be carried out as nearly as possible. The celebration is usually held on the anniversary of the birthday of John James Audubon, which is on May 4, but inasmuch as that day comes this year on Saturday, the educational department has designated Friday for the celebration of Bird day.

Gadsden.—Cleve Campbell, on trial here for the murder of Jacob C. Lutes and his wife last November, was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to imprisonment for life by Judge J. C. Blackwood, before whom the trial was held. Will Cambpell and D. S. McLain, who are charged with the same crime, will probably be tried this week.

Montgomery.—It cost Charles Henderson, of Troy, $8,102.09 to make the race for president of the Alabama railroad commission in the democratic primary held April 1. These figures are taken from Mr. Henderson's expense account filed with the secretary of state.

Florala.—The Interstate chautauqua closed its fourth annual session here. The program this season has been one of unusual excellence, in spite of the heavy rains, which have fallen during the session, and have attracted large crowds.

Bay Minette.—Report comes from Foley that 300 troops from Fort Morgan arrived at that place for military maneuvers. Another body of troops is also expected.

Birmingham.—William Hammond Hale, aged 30 years, while working on the top of an electric pole at First avenue and Seventy-fourth street was electrocuted and instantly killed.

Selma.—The work of eradicating the cattle tick from Dallas county will be pushed vigorously during the summer months and this winter it is expected that the United States government will lift the cattle quarantine from the county. Dr. J. B. Reidy, of the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture at Washington, has been stationed in Selma to complete the eradication of the cattle tick in the county. With the co-operation of the citizens of the county, Dr. Reidy is certain this work can be completed by the summer's campaign.

Barnesville.—John Robinson, a prominent merchant and planter of Arkdell, this county, ended his life by shooting himself with a shotgun.

Gadsden.—J. T. Howe, who had been held a prisoner in the Etowah county jail for several months, was released on a bond of $9,800. Howe is under sentence of six months for violating the prohibition law and two years for perjury.

Montgomery. — Governor O'Neal at the request of the committee managing the Georgia campaign of Oscar W. Underwood, is making several speeches in the Empire state and will not return to Alabama, it is probable before the end of the week.

Cullman. — Although every conceivable place in the neighborhood has been searched, up to now no trace of Willie O'Rear, who is charged with the murder of Luther Kempson several days ago in the neighborhood of Jones chapel, can be found. The young man is not believed to have left the county, but it is strongly thought that he is yet in hiding near where the shooting occurred.

Montgomery. — Both sides in the railroad rate cases, involving the findings by Special Master W. S. Thorington in the cases of the Central of Georgia and the Western of Alabama roads and the bills of exceptions to the findings, filed by Attorney General R. C. Brickell, for the state, have agreed to submit their cases to Judge Thomas G. Jones for final decree on May 2.

Huntsville. — Charged with selling fertilizer without tags, the Farmers Cotton Oil company and the Alabama Oil company, both of this city, were arrested on recommendation of J. K. White, an inspector for the state department of agriculture. Mr White has been investigating the fertilizer business at this point for several days and claims he has found a considerable amount of fertilizer sold without the tags. Two cases have been made out against each of the companies.

Montgomery.—Summing up the fertiltilizer market for the season, a leading fertilizer manufacturer stated that there would be a falling off of about 15 per cent in the consumption of fertilizer in Alabama, as compared with the amount used last year. He said that fully 90 per cent of this year's business has already been done, so that there is sufficient information on which to estimate the 15 per cent loss. This falling off in sales he attributes solely to weather conditions. He believes that farmers of the state would have used as much fertilizer this year as last except for this condition.

Montgomery—April 26 is the day set apart by the Alabama state law to decorate the graves of the heroes of the "lost cause." By common usage the exercises are celebrated on the nearest Sunday to the 26th, when the graves of the honored dead are decorated with the beautiful blossoms of springtide and tributes of their memory are expressed by surviving comrades of those who reverse the glorious heritage bequeathed the South by the departed heroes who wore the gray. Not only are the graves of the Confederate dead remembered, but the fragrant blossoms of the South are tenderly laid on tne grave of the manly forms that wore the federal blue.

Montgomery.—Damage to highways in Alabama by the spring rains is estimated at $500,000 by W. F. Kellar, state highway engineer. He makes this statemeent following a recent visit to several parts of the state. "Spring rains came on top of an unusually severe winter," said Mr. Keller," and the roads have been put in bad shape. Bridges have been damaged or washed away and roadbeds in many places have been destroyed. The loss is enormous. It will take weeks to get the damage repaired."

Mr. Kellar in urging the use of the split log drag for all dirt roads in Alabama, declaring this to be the cheapest and most easy plan. He is having 200 models made and will send these to the probate judges and road men in every county.

Montgomery. — A handsome bronze tablet to the memory of the Ladies' Memorial association was unveiled in the old lecture hall of the Court Street Methodist church. The unveiling of this tablet brought to a close Memorial Day exercises in Montgomery and were a fitting climax to the day's program.

Gadsden. — The Republicans of Etowah county will put a full ticket in the field this fall, according to announcement made recently. A convention will be held at Attalla on May 4, and at this time delegates will be selected to attend the "insurgent" convention, which will be held in Birmingham May 11.

Birmingham.—The twenty-fourth annual encampment of the Department of Alabama, Grand Army of the Republic, was held here. The several posts of the Army in Alabama were represented.

Montgomery. — Ed Hartley, a young negro sentenced in the justice court of Lowndes county to serve three months for larceny, has been pardoned by Governor O'Neal into the hands of the president of the Alabama Reformatory school, near this city.

TO WARN GUNBOAT AWAY FROM MEXICO

GOVERNMENT THINKS IT INADVISABLE TO HAVE SHIP TOUCH AT PORT.

REFUCEES ARE ARRIVING

Japanese Decries Talk of Japanese Activity in Mexico—Calero Issues Statement on Matter.

Washington.—The torpedo boat destroyers Preble and Perry slipped out of San Diego. They are under orders to intercept the gunboat Yorktown by wireless and tell her not to stop at any Mexican port for coal in view of conditions prevailing in Mexico.

It is deemed inadvisable to have a gunboat of America to drop in at any of the coastal cities.

The Yorktown is enroute to San Diego from Guayaquil, Ecuador. She is stopping at various Central American ports on the way up the coast. She is accompanied by the collier Prometheus. Commander Washington of the Yorktown sent a radiogram to the department saying he would put into some Mexican port to take on more coal. As the Yorktown left San Jose de Guatemala and is now making her way rapidly at sea, the torpedo boat destroyers were ordered to get into communication and tell her at all possible hazards to make San Diego without taking on extra native or negro firemen or recoaling.

Refugees Arrive.

San Diego, Cal.—The steamer Benito Juarez arrived from Mazatlan with about 51 passengers, Mexicans and Americans, with little money, who left Mexico, they said, because all business was at a standstill. The Americans said they considered it wise to leave until order was restored.

Fabumaski Takasaki, who said he was a graduate of the Imperial College of Tokio, and had been sent to investigate the fishing resources and Magdalena bay by his government to a concession held by a local company, was among the passengers of the Juarez. He declared his business at Magdalena bay was in no wise connected with any project of his government to acquire a base.

Discussing conditions in Sinaloa, R. L. Fielder said he and his wife made their way from Basis, a mountain town in the interior, to Mazatlan on horse back, hiding in canyons and dense brush to dodge bandits who are operating freely.

"Mexico has always felt suspicious of the United States," said Dr. McGibbon, "but President Taft has done much to allay this feeling."

Dr. McGibbon declared there were no more than 50 Americans in Mazatlan when he departed, and that they are in no danger. Captain Francisco Miranda of the Benito Juarez confirmed this report.

No Japanese Question.

New York.—"There is no Japanese question in Mexico, and this talk about the Japanese and Magdalena Bay is ridiculous. It is absurd that you Americans should be exercised about the granting of a private fishing concession to Japanese.

These were the declarations of Manuel Calero, New Mexican ambassador to the United States, when he was asked about alleged Japanese encroachments in western Mexico.

RIOTING IN ZION CITY.

Zionists Attacked by Workmen While at Prayer.

Zion City, Ill.—Rioting, which may result seriously, started here when employes of independent manufacturing concerns attacked a group of 200 Zion men and women at a prayer meeting. Both men and women were beaten with clubs and black jacks and a number were seriously injured.

The fight came as the climax of a week of trouble between employes of the independent concern which recently have begun operations here and the church people, formerly followers of John Alexander Dowie.

As a protest against the use of tobacco by the employes of the manufacturing companies, followers of Wilbur Glenn Voliva, successor to Dowie's authority, have been holding prayer meetings in front of one of the places each day. Elder F. M. Royal had just called the second meeting when several score men rushed out of the plant, tros down or leaped over barriers which had been erected around the prayer platform, and drove the Zionists from that part of town.

Immediately after the fight Voliva ordered the large alarm bell rung and more than 1,000 men members of the church gathered at the auditorium to discuss plans for resisting further attacks by employes of independent companies, who filled the street and threatened to "clean out the town." A second clash between the church people and the independents was predicted at the auditorium meetings where Voliva urged his followers to protect their women and children from the "tobacco smoking cusses" in the employ of the independents.

TREND OF TRADE.

Is on the Whole in a Satisfactory Direction.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Trade reports are irregular in tenor, with here and there streaks of disappointment, but on the whole the trend is in a satisfactory direction. Retail trade has been impeded to a considerable extent by the backwardness of the season and, in fact, jobbers, as well as wholesale dealers, are now watching its pulse beat in order to gauge probable future effects on orders.

In the larger dry goods markets, as distinguished from the lesser centers, woolens and worsteds are firm, supplementary and duplicate orders for staples being the feature. But otherwise demand for dry goods seems to have receded. Indeed, the dry goods trade in general reports that untoward weather has hurt retail trade, and jobbers, as well as converters, say final purveyors are exercising more or less caution. Jobbers have not been able to get the full increase enforced by the manufacturers, wherefore they are inclined to attribute whatever degree of quiet has developed in trade to price advices, but the mills being in a satisfactory position as regards bookings are not disposed to credit such views.

Enlarged buying of pig iron, heavy orders for finished materials and further strengthening in prices furnish the noteworthy features of one of the country's leading industries. In the field of labor experiment is more general.

Collections show little change, being about fair for the country, as a whole and still slow in the South. Money is steady.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending April 25 were 248, against 260 last week, 240 in the like week of 1911, 189 in 1910, 268 in 1909 and 282 in 1908.

Business failures for the week in Canada number 23, which compares with 20 last week and 26 in the like week of 1911.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending April 25, aggregate 3,169,514 bushels, against 2,843,789 last week and 1,685,666 this week last year.

Corn exports for the week are 76,472 bushels, against 540,484 last week and 733,567 in 1911. For the 43 weeks ending April 25 corn exports are 32,375,433 bushels, against 43,786,180 last year.

VOLUME OF TRADE.

Well Maintained Despite Unfavorable Weather Conditions.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

That the recent improvement in the volume of trade is fully maintained is evidenced by the latest statistics. These proofs of business activity are all the more sgnficant because weather conditions have not been altogether favorable to distribution, and retail trade has, in particular, been somewhat checked as a consequence.

Although there is some shading of prices on structural material where desirable contracts are involved, the iron and steel situation as a whole reflects increased strength. Specifications continue at a good rate and the larger plants are still operating at approximately 90 per cent of capacity. In the Pittsburg district some of the smaller mills are working only part time, but generally conditions are improved. Revised estimates of the amount of steel bars taken by agricultural interests place the total at about 300,000 tons and quotations are now on the basis of $1.20 Pittsburg.

Plates and shapes are also firmer, although prices are largely nominal, as consumers covered their requirements to a large extent before the advance. Large orders for steel cars and railway equipment are absent just at present, but a heavy volume of business was carried over from last year and car plants are fairly busy. Moderate activity appears in pig iron.

The firmness in cotton and woolen goods continues, and advances are being made in cotton yarns. Weather conditions have been against an active expansion in retail trade in fabrics, but it is generally agreed that business is on a satisfactory price basis. Wash fabrics are in request for quick shipment; shirtings are being sold for spot, fall and spring delivery and there is a steady improvement in the call for hosiery and underwear. Export shipments of cotton goods are large, while some small sales of heavy goods were made for China shipment during the week. The well-sold conditions in men's wear mills are noteworthy, some concerns turning away business because of their inability to guarantee delivery.

Trading in footwear continues to improve, and it is evident that buyers now recognize the strength of the leather market and feel that there is little probability of a lower market on standard lines.

Trenton, N. J.—The court of errors and speals has decided against Leon F. Blanchard and other minority stockholders of the Prudential Insurance Company of America, who sought to have distributed among the stockholders of that company no dividends accumulated by the company's surplus under

GRAVES AT MOUNTAIN CREEK ARE BANKED WITH FLOWERS FOR OCCASION

A beautiful program. befitting to the occasion of the annual Memorial Day observances, was carried out Sunday at the Old Soldiers Home at Mountain Creek, when more than a hundred graves were decorated.

Senator Thomas Curry was orator of the day. Song was rendered by a quartette and there were recitations by Misses Louisa Hall and Minnie Taylor. Altogether the occasion was made one of great pleasure to the old soldiers and to all who were in attendance upon the occasion of the observances.

VOL. 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, MAY 9, 1912 NO. 7

E. CALLOWAY WRITES

Editor:—Will you furnish space for the following reply to a personal attack upon me, as Secretary of the Jury Commission, made by Judge Reynolds in his Court House harrangue last Saturday? I would pay no attention to his mud slinging whatever, were it not for the fact that he has shown himself to be such an ungrateful wretch, I think someone should call him to account. Let me explain just here: When he was making his desperate fight for re-election to the Probate Judgeship he sent over into Coosa county and asked me to come to his rescue; I laid down my work and came from Coosa to assist him all I could, and for days and nights I labored in his behalf, rendering him efficient aid and securing for him many votes which otherwise he would not have received.

When the time for "settlement" came he not only did not offer me one cent for my services, but actually refused to pay my expenses while in his own county serving him. This is the kind of animal he has shown himself to be all along and, to me, it occurs that he should be shown in his own true colors; then if people wish to follow him they will not do so blindly. Permit me further to say that I am in no wise attempting, as a democrat, to reply to his arraignment of the Democratic party; there are others who are able to do this, and, at the proper time, will, I presume, attend to the scurrilous attack of the ex-Judge.

First, I wish to tell him that I have in black and white, his assertions at the Court house, and that he will have to meet them later. I wish further to say to him that he knew we would be permitted to make no reply to his speech at the time he uttered it is why he descended to the low level of a paltroon to stick others in the back. But the reply will come; and whether it comes soon or late, your speech showed the coward that you are. You are ready to say things when you think you are backed by a crowd, but when you are singled out, you are mighty ready to get manly and soft. I want to tell you that there are yet many things in store for you, and that the assertions you made last week have put a black spot upon you, which time will not erase.

You went out of your way to state that it was in my power to say who should be on the juries in this county, and you tried to make your crowd believe that since I was a democrat that no republicans would be called to serve as jurors. Why did you attack me in this way? Was it to prejudice the people against me? Not that altogether; no, you are just simply ignorant of the law or else you wantonly and maliciously misrepresented the truth. Having served as long ss you did on the judicial bench you should, before you undertake to teach others, become acquainted with the subject you propose to teach. When you fail to do this you lay yourself open to the charge that you are either knowingly trying to deceive or else that you are unqualified to lead others—either a fool or a knave.

The law says that it is the duty of the Clerk of the Commission to enroll the name of every male person in the county, over twenty-one and under sixty-five years of age, on the jury roll and then the Jury Commission is to examine and select such persons as they deem qualified to serve and to put those names in the jury box, and the Clerk of the Commission has nothing in the world to do with it.

If you did not know these facts then you should have ascertained them before making your cowardly attack upon me; if you did know these facts then you ought to be ashamed to show your face in the presence of decent people for having attempted to mislead men who have reposed confidence in your integrity.

But you knowingly attempted to make the republicans believe that they would not be recognized in this matter by the democrats. You could have gotten information to the contrary at first hand and without the least particle of trouble, expense or inconvenience. Ask your Tax Collector (and you associate with him every day and discuss political measures and means) who it was that helped me in getting the names in beats 6 and 10 to be placed in the jury box; call upon Mr. Littlejohn, your treasurer, and another with whom you discuss political matters often, and Mr. Wilson, the Justice of the Peace, and they will both tell you that they assisted me in getting the names in beat 4 for the jury box; go to your brother, Charlie Reynolds, and ask of him who it was that helped me to get the names in beat 2; go to Mr. J. Bice, republican postmaster at Thorsby, and ask him who assisted me in getting names in beat 9; go to Mr. J. E. Robinson Sr. and request of him to tell you who helped me in getting names in beat 16? Ah! sir, you were asserting things that you knew absolutely nothing about; and more than half of your audience knew at the time you were making the assertions that they were not true; but when it suits your purpose to misrepresent, it matters little with you whether you know the real facts or not, you suit your speech to your desires.

You would rather cut loose and try, by such flimsy arguments as that to prejudice the people, than to lay principles before them which are sound, true and logical

Your greatest desire seemed to be to injure me. Why? You know why and our people will soon learn why. You know that I am able to meet you on the stump and discuss the principles of the two parties as they actually are, and you know it is something you cannot do; then, too, you know that I am fully acquainted with your deceptions and frauds and you wish to "put me on the shelf" and have me discredited with the people before the time comes for you to meet any one in honest joint debate. Your whole theme is an attempt to deceive and prejudice the people; you dare not touch the principles of democracy or republicanism and stick to your text; you do not know enough about either to make a speech and hence you take refuge in a low attempt to deceive and prejudice.

Your sling is an insult to every native born Coosian in the county; numbers of them know me and know my people, and I challenge you to find one of them who will say that I will not do the right when I see it. I am proud of my native county, and I believe that every Coosian in Chilton is proud to have come from grand old Coosa, but when you take your slings at them you may depend upon them to resent it in no uncertain way. I ask you to sift my past record and see if it is not as white as yours—yea, even whiter, for I would not descend to do the things of which you have been guilty.

You can sling your mud at the Coosians if you please, but I want to tell you that Coosians are to be found as lawyers, doctors, teachers, pharmacists and happy and contented farmers in every town and county in Alabama. We know that our opportunities have not been such as to enable us to equal [illegible] but we did the very best we could with the opportunities we had, and we are not ashamed to compare with the citizens of any county in the state.

It is not in my power to say who the jurors shall be, but if it was, I would not stoop below the dignity of a man to say to a republican that he must be deprived of his privilege and his duty because he happened to be a republican.

A man who is dishonest himself thinks that every other man is a thief; a man who is selfish thinks that every other man is selfish also, and a man who would let his political beliefs lead him off from the path of honesty and duty thinks that every other man would do likewise. This is your case, I guess, Judge. If you are clean cast the first stone.

Where are the creditors today who have felt the sting of your acts? Where is your manhood? Where is your conscience? Do you recall that I came into this county—and from COOSA county too—at your invitation, and gave of my life's blood, day and night in your behalf? Do you remember the pay in thanks or in money which you doled out to me to show your gratitude or appreciation? But "revenge is Mine, I will repay, sayeth the Lord," and for this time I will let you alone—ungrateful as you are.

It is I you would like to see crippled, and for the reasons given above. You know that your day of deceiving the people is about over; you tell the people that the negro howl of the democrats is nothing. You tell them that the negroes are not in the chief counsels of your party when you know and all other reading people know that your own first cousin, while chairman of the republican executive committee, called upon a negro to open the convention with prayer, you know that this negro was named Mixon and was a delegate to the convention, and you know that you stood there almost in touch of this negro and swallowed down everything he said; you know further that this negro was a delegate from the same district you represented. And you know again that negroes were elected as delegates to the national convention to select a candidate for president on the republican ticket for whom you are going to ask the white men of Chilton county to vote. You know also that you are a member of the state republican committee and that you sit on that committee with negroes. Will you deny these things and then have the effrontery to walk into God's temple and offer prayer, asking forgiveness for the sins of the people? Acknowledge the truth, even if it causes the Socialists to win over you.

You said in your speech that I had said that a man must employ a democratic lawyer in order to get justice in the courts; I said that there were times when it was discretionary with the judge as to how he should rule, and that it was as natural for a democratic judge to rule in favor of those who had put him in office—when the rule of law or procedure did not require otherwise—as it was for a republican president to appoint his republican friends to office. But if I had said what you quote me as having said, I would have the proof to back the statement, for when you and your brothers needed a lawyer to wind up your bankrupt affairs you employed democratic attorneys Do you SEE?

Go all over the county telling the people I am not qualified to be secretary of the Jury Commission, tell them that republicans will not be members as long as I [illegible] but if you are not qualified, why have you not, as the friend of the "dear people," undertaken to have me removed?

Sling your mud at the Coosians as you please, but I will tell you right now that we are not all fools as you seem to think, or void of principle because you say so. There are lots of good men in this county who are Coosians and who are republicans too, but when they find out about your slangy, insulting remarks about the "COOSIANS," they will write defeat upon your banner whenever you pop up again.

Now, do not, in order to win them, deny that you have offered them, insult—do not, like the dog, return to your vomit and devour it, because you want to win them over to you again; stand like a man to what you have said, and do not insult their inteligence by denying that you ever uttered such remarks.

You stated that the County court was being used to get democratic votes; this was another thing about which you knew nothing. But, that is not the purpose of this letter, either to defend the County court or the democratic party—it is for a personal attack that I am making my reply.

But, speaking of county courts' why did you not tell us some of the things you did while in office? Tell us why you hired detectives with the money belonging to the people to come here to investigate their manner of life and the rights which they enjoyed? Tell us why that self-confessed criminal got loose from you? Tell us why you had the letter of Judge Honeycutt published in the paper and changed the date?

I want to tell you, old fellow, that you are the man who defeated the republican party in this county; they followed you for a while, but they have at last caught on to your false doctrine and you had as well retire to the shades of private life while times are good for you.

Just a few more words and I am through. You said the democrats could not be elected to office, but had to be appointed. How did Judge Deason get his office? When they are appointed it is WHITE MEN who are appointed.

Ynu say the democratic party is as closely aligned with the negro as is the republican party. Even the negro himself knows better than this. They know their party. Where do you find the few influential negroes of the state?—in the republican party; in republican conventions where they can have themselves elected as delegates and where they can sit by the white delegates and enjoy the same priveleges; you never see them in democratic conventions or upon democratic delegations or on democratic committees.

I have yet other things in store for you, Judge, but I am taking too much space from the editor and I assume the personal responsibility for my utterances—I am man enough to back them with my open statement; I will not cringe when confronted with MY statements. Will you be as manly?

Yours truly,
E. E. CALLOWAY.

NEGRO VOTE IN MARYLAND IS AN UNCERTAIN FACTOR

First Presidential Primary Will Be Held Monday

COUNT WILL BE SLOW

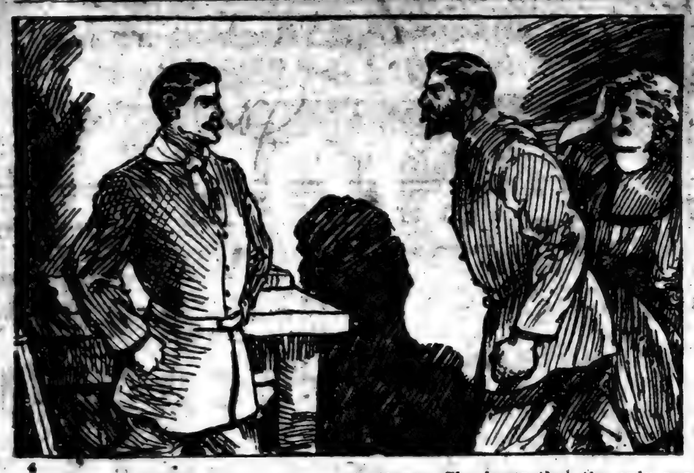
CONGRESSMEN WILL ALSO BE NAMED ON BALLOT.

Baltimore, Md., May —Maryland's first Presidential primary election to-morrow will decide the votes of the sixteen delegates this state will send each of the National Conventions. The law permits no divided delegations. So a victory in Maryland will mean sixteen delegates all in a block, bound to support the candidate for whom they are instructed, at least on the first ballot.

The names of Theodore Roosevelt and President Taft appear on the Republican ballot, while the Democrats will vote for Speaker Champ Clark, Governor Judson Harmon or Governor Woodrow Wilson. Active campaigns have been waged on behalf of these candidates. The election to-morrow will chose 129 delegates to the State Convention, and each county or district will bind its delegates to vote for a national delegation favorable to the Presidential candidate for whom such county or district declares its preference. Victory, therefore, will depend upon the [illegible] by counties or districts and not upon the popular preference of the State as a whole.

An uncertain factor in the contest is the negro vote, which is about 35 per cent of the whole, and in some of the eastern and southern counties comprises more than half the Republican suffrage. If the Republican election is close the result may depend upon returns from these counties, which, owing to the difficulties of communication on the "eastern shore" usually are the last to arrive.

In addition to the Presidential preference, both parties will name candidates for Members of Congress.



The polls will open at 6 a. m. and close at 5 p. m. in Baltimore, and open at 8 a. m. and close at 6 p. m. in the counties.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

Surveying the great range she wondered where the peak climbers might be. Keen sighted though she was, she could not discover them. The crest that they were attempting lay in another direction hidden by a nearer spur. She was in the very heart of the mountains; peaks and ridges rose all about her, so much so that the general direction of the great range was lost. She was at the center of a far flung cocavity of crest and range. She marked one towering point to the right of her that rose massively grand above all the others. Tomorrow she would climb to that high point and from its lofty elevations look upon the heavens above and the earth beneath, aye and the waters under the earth far below. Tomorrow!—it is generally known that we do not usually attempt the high points in life's range at once, content are we with lower altitudes today.

There was no sound above her; the rushing water over the rocks upon the nearer side she could hear faintly; there was no wind about her to stir the long needles of the pines. It was very still, the kind of a stillness of body which is the outward and visible complement of that stillness of the soul in which men know God. There had been no earthquake, no storm, the mountains had not heaved beneath her feet, the great and strong wind had not passed by, the rocks had not been rent and broken, yet Enid caught herself listening as if for a voice. The thrill of majesty, silence, loneliness was upon her. She stood—one stands when there is a chance of meeting God on the way, one does not kneel until he comes—with her raised hands clasped, her head uplifted in exultation unspeakable, God-conquered with her face to heaven upturned.

"I will lift up mine eyes to the hills whence cometh my salvation," her heart sang voicelessly. "We praise thee, oh, God, we magnify thy holy name forever," floated through her brain, in great appreciation of the marvelous work of the Almighty shaping master hand. Caught up as it were into the heavens, her soul leaped to meet its maker. Thinking to find God she waited there on the heaven kissing hill.

How long she stayed she did not realize; she took no note of time; it did not occur to her even to look at the watch on her wrist, she had swept the skyline cut off as it were by the peaks when first she came, and when at last she turned away—even divinest moments must have an end—she looked not backward. She saw not a little cloud hid on the horizon behind the rampart of the ages, as it were, no bigger than a man's hand, a cloud full of portent and which would alarm greatly the veteran Kirkby in the camp and Maitland on the mountain top. Both of them unfortunately were unable to see it, one being on the other side of the range, and the other deep in the canon, and for both of them as for the girl the sun still shone brightly.

The declivity to the river on the upper side was comparatively easy and Enid Maitland went slowly and thoughtfully down to it until she reached the young torrent. She got her tackle ready, but did no casting, as she made her way slowly up the ever narrowing, ever rising canon. She was charmed and thrilled by the wild beauty of the way, the spell of the mountains was deep upon her. Thoughtfully she wandered on until presently she came to another little amphitheater like that where the camp was pitched, only smaller. Strange to say, the brook or river here broadened in a little pool perhaps twenty feet across; a turn had thrown a full force of water against the huge boulder wall and in ages of effort a giant cup had been hollowed out of the native rock. The pool was perhaps four or five feet deep, the rocky bottom worn smooth. The clearing was upon the opposite side and the banks were heavily wooded beyond the spur of the rock which formed the back of the pool. She could see the trout in it. She made ready to try her fortune, but before she did so an idea came to her—daring, unconventional, extraordinary, begot of innocence and inexperience.

The water of course was very cold, but she had been accustomed all her life to taking a bath in natural temperature direct from the water as it came from the mountain side, and the water was not so much colder than that to which she was accustomed as to be a shock. She knew that the only people in that wilderness were the members of her own party, three of them were at the camp below; the others were ascending a mountain miles away. The canon was deep sunk, and she satisfied herself by careful observation that the pool was not overlooked by any elevations far or near.

Her ablutions in common with those of the rest of the campers had been by piecemeal of necessity. Here was an opportunity for a plunge in a natural bath tub. She was as certain that she would be under no observation as if she were in the privacy of her own chamber. Here again impulse determined the end. In spite of her assurance there was some little apprehension in the glance that she cast about her, but it soon vanished. There was no one. She was absolutely alone. The pool and the chance of the plunge had brought her down to earth again; the thought of the enlivening exhilaration of the pure cold water dashing against her own sweet warm young body changed the current of her thoughts—the anticipation of it rather.

Impulsively she dropped her rod upon the grass, unpinned her hat, threw the fishing basket from her shoulder. She was wearing a stout sweater; that, too, joined the rest. Nervous hands manipulated buttons and the fastenings. In a few moments the sweet figure of youth, of beauty, of purity and of innocence brightened the sod and shed a white luster upon the green of the grass and moss and pines, reflecting light to the gray brown rocks of the range. So Eve may have looked on some bright Eden morning. A few steps forward and this nymph of the woods, this naiad of the mountains, plunged into the clear, cold waters of the pool—a water sprite and her fountain!

CHAPTER V.

The Bear, the Man and the Flood.

The water was deep enough to receive her dive and the pool was long enough to enable her to swim a few strokes. The first chill of the icy water was soon lost in the vigorous motions in which she indulged, but no more human form, however hardy and inured, could long endure that frigid bath. Reluctantly, yet with the knowledge that she must go, after one more sweeping dive and a few magnificent strokes, she raised her head from the water lapping her white shoulders and shaking her face clear from the drops of crystal, faced the shore. It was no longer untenanted, she was no longer alone.

What she saw startled and alarmed her beyond measure. Planted on her clothes, looking straight at her, having come upon her in absolute silence, nothing having given her the least warning of his approach, and now gazing at her with red, hungry, [illegible] eyes, the eyes of the [illegible] filled with the [illegible] and carnal [illegible], and yet [illegible] surprise [illegible] in the horror of that moment. Alone, naked, defenseless, lost in the mountains, with the most powerful, sanguinary and ferocious beast of the continent in front of her, she could neither fight nor fly; she could only wait his pleasure. He snuffed at her clothing a moment and stood with one fore foot advanced for a second or two growling deeply, evidently, she thought with almost superhuman keenness of perception, preparing to leap into the pool and seize upon her.

The rush of the current as it swirled about her caused her to sway gently, otherwise she stood motionless and apprehensive, awfully expectant. She had made no sound, and save for that low growl the great beast had been equally silent. There was an awful fixity in the gaze she turned upon him and he wavered under it. It annoyed him. It bespoke a little of the dominance of the human. But she was too surprised, too unnerved, too desperately frightened to put forth the full power of mind over matter. There was piteous appeal in her gaze. The bear realized this and mastered her sufficiently.

She did not know whether she was in the water or in the air; there were but two points upon which her consciousness was focussed in the vast ellipse of her imagination. Another moment or two and all coherency of thought would be gone. The grizzly still unsettled and uneasy before her awful glance, but not deterred by it, turned its great head sideways a little to escape the direct immobile stare brought his sharp clawed foot down heavily and lurched forward.

Scarcely had a minute elapsed in which all this happened. That huge threatening heave of the great body toward her relieved the tension. She found voice at last. Although it was absolutely futile, she realized as she cried, her [illegible] released. She framed the [illegible] appeal.

"Help? For God's sake."

Although she knew she cried [illegible] to the [illegible] wake of the canon, the [illegible] flume, the rumbling river, [illegible] as if he did not know quite what to make of the white loveliness of this unwonted apparition flashing so suddenly at him out of the water, this strange invader of the domain of which he was sole master and lord paramount, stood a great, monstrous, frightful looking grizzly bear, Ursus Horribilis, indeed.

He was an aged monarch of the mountains, reddish brown in color originally, but now a hoary dirty gray. His body was massive and burly, his legs short, dark colored and immensely powerful. His broad square head moved restlessly. His fanged mouth opened and a low hoarse growl came from the red cavern of his throat. He was an old and terrible monster who had tasted the blood of man and who would not hesitate to attack without provocation, especially anything at once so harmless and so whitely inviting as the girl in the pool.

The girl forgot the chill of the water in the overwhelming fear that now possessed her. Her self possession, her power of mind over matter, her presence of mind, her control of herself, her will, her reason, her judgment, her memory, her consciousness, her very life itself, all were centered in the fear that now possessed her. Her eyes were fixed upon the bear, her ears were strained to catch the slightest sound, her every nerve was tense, her every muscle was ready for the slightest movement. Her mind was working with lightning rapidity. Her first thought was to scream, her second to remember that there was no one to hear her, her third to realize that she was absolutely helpless, her fourth to recall the fact that the bear was the most powerful and ferocious animal of the mountains, her fifth to remember that it was the most dangerous time of the year, when the bear had young cubs, her sixth to realize that the bear was probably hungry, her seventh to remember that the bear was a carnivorous animal, her eighth to recall the fact that the bear was a cannibal, her ninth to remember that the bear was a good swimmer, her tenth to realize that the bear could run faster than a horse, her eleventh to remember that the bear could climb trees, her twelfth to realize that the bear could not be frightened away by any BACKACHE NOT A DISEASE

But a Symptom, a Danger Signal Which Every Woman Should Heed.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Woodall's experience.

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Pure fresh healthy blood

That is what you need.

Clear the vicious poisons out of your circulation, and these mortifying skin-complaints will disappear. And other troubles, too.

"I am not like the same girl" writes Miss Mamie E. Nunley of Forrest, Miss. "My complexion and skin are not the same. Your Botanic Blood Balm is the best medicine I ever used".

"It is the best medicine on earth for scrofula!" declares Mr. Floyd Holliday of Cedartown, Ga. And Mrs. W. L. Oury of Little Rock, Ark. writes: "Four bottles of your Botanic Blood Balm cured me completely of a blood disease which physicians pronounced hopeless".

We have hundreds of such grateful letters.

We return your money if "B.B.B." fails to help you.

Don't hesitate. If your druggist can't supply you, write to us. Seek relief today.

NINE KILLED; 56 INJURED

VETERANS' SPECIAL LEAVES TRACK NEAR HATTIESBURG MISSISSIPPI.

INJURED WELL CARED FOR

Baggage Car, Day Coach and Three Sleepers Roll Down Steep Embankment.

Hattiesburg, Miss.—Nine persons, including three women and two children were killed and 56 persons injured when the first section of the special" of 11 cars, en route from Texas to the annual reunion at Macon, "Van Zandt Confederate veterans' Ga., was wrecked on a trestle, a mile south of Eastabuchie, Miss., on the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad.

The locomotive, baggage car, one day coach and three tourist sleepers were derailed and tumbled down a high embankment, making a conglomerate mass of wood and iron debris. Although several hundred Confederate veterans were aboard the train not one was numbered among the dead. Several of the veterans were injured, though none fatally.

Hattiesburg citizens from every walk of life met the train which brought the dead and injured here. The King's Daughters, U. D. C., the Masons, Elks and other benevolent orders and societies had active representatives on the scene anxious to care for the injured and the veterans and their wives were made to feel that they were in the hands of friends.

DEATH; DESTRUCTION IN WAKE OF CREVASSE.

New Roads, La.—The water from the Torras crevasse is rising so rapidly over the country south of there that hundreds of people are in imminent danger of losing their lives, according to information reaching here. The small relief parties are working day and night but they cannot get the inhabitants out fast enough.

At Batchelor, 12 miles south of the crevasse, the water is coming up with a rush and that town, which has been a relief base, will have to be abandoned. The only land in sight at that place is a small patch on the front near the levee, and the tracks of the Texas and Pacific railroad.

The waters are rushing over the fields with an awful current, sweeping houses and trees away. Those who have experienced floods in that section state that they have never before seen such a stage of water and such an overpowering current.

CLARK AND ROOSEVELT LEAD.

Roosevelt 66; Taft 63; Clark 72; Wilson 44; Convention Majority 65.

Baltimore.—Maryland's 16 votes in the national convention will be cast for Theodore Roosevelt and Speaker Champ Clark unless the few election districts still to be heard from change the result registered at the state's first presidential primaries. The result was close and Colonel Roosevelt on the face of the returns had but one more than the number of votes necessary to control the state convention.

Republicans: Roosevelt, 66; Taft, 63.

Democrats: Clark, 72; Wilson, 44; Harmon, 4; in doubt, 9.

Majority necessary to control the convention, 65.

TROOPS TO MOVE IN HURRY.

Cheyenne, Wyom.—Orders were received by the Colorado and Southern railway to seize all empty flat, box and stock cars, no matter to whom consigned, and send them to Fort D. A. Russell for shipping horses and equipment of the Ninth cavalry, which is expecting orders to move to the Mexican border at any hour.

Fully Assimilated.

Ray S. Baker, the author, in an argument on immigration at Lawrence, cited the marvelous speed wherewith the immigrant family, be it German or French or what not, becomes assimilated into the national life.

"An instance of this assimilation occurs to me," he said. "I know a worthy Neapolitan, one Paoli Cenci, who came to this country three years ago. Paoli's little son, Francesco, an American citizen of seven, looked up from his school books, the other evening to ask:

"Say, pa, what year was it you Italians discovered us in?"

ERUPTION COVERED BODY

"Three years ago this winter I had a breaking out that covered my whole body. It itched so it seemed as if I should go crazy. It first came out in little pimples on my back and spread till it covered my whole body and limbs down to my knees, also my arms down to my elbows. Where I scratched it made sores, and the terrible itching and burning kept me from sleeping. I tried several remedies all to no purpose. Then I concluded to try the Cuticura Remedies. I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, also the Resolvent, for about four months, and they completely cured me of eczema. I have had no return of the disease since. I never had a good night's rest after the skin eruption first broke out till I commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had only used them a few days before I could see they were beginning to heal, and the terrible itching was gone.

"Those that lived in the house at the time know how I suffered, and how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me. I never take a bath without using the Cuticura Soap, and I do not believe there are better remedies for any skin disease than the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Miss Sarah Calkins, Waukegan, Ill., Mar. 16, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Might Not Get the Children.

A young lady of ten was discussing her future with her mother.

"Yes, mommie," she said, "I shall get married and I shall have four children."

"That will be nice!" commented the mother.

"No!" continued the young lady after a minute or two of deep thought. "Maybe I won't have four children. I might marry a bachelor!"—Saturday Evening Post.

FOR EVERY FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST

To the head of every family the health of its different members is most important, and the value of an agreeable laxative that is certain in its effect is appreciated. One of the most popular remedies in the family medicine chest is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that is known to druggists and physicians as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This preparation is mild and gentle in its action on the bowels, yet positive in its effect. A dose of Syrup Pepsin at night means relief next morning, while its tonic properties tone up and strengthen the muscles of stomach, liver and bowels so that these organs are able in a short time to again perform their natural functions without help.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this simple, inexpensive, yet effective remedy, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and ask for a sample bottle. Dr. Caldwell will be glad to send it without any expense to you whatever.

"'That's easy,' replied he. 'My neighbors keep chickens. The rooster is my crownometer.'"—The Sunday Magazine.

FOR THE WOMAN WHO THINKS AND FEELS.

Some women complain that they periodically suffer from dull and heavy feelings, or dizziness in the head, nervousness, pain and bearing-down feelings which should not occur to the normal healthy woman. But most every woman is subject to these pains at some time in her life, due to abnormal conditions in life, such as corsets, over-taxed strength, bad air, poor or improper food, wet feet, sluggish liver, etc. A regulator and female tonic made from native medicinal roots with pure glycerin, and without the use of alcohol, called has proven its value in thousands of cases, like the following:

I have used them for thirty years for female troubles and general weakness with the very best result, and they have saved me hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. I buy the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and take them together. I never was disappointed in your remedies and take pleasure in recommending them to any suffering lady. I am now almost fifty years old; at forty-five I took your medicines, both kinds, and I passed that period very easily and left me fat and healthy. I feel like a young girl.

"If any lady cares to write me, I will gladly tell her more about the good work of your medicines."

The continued rains are making the farmers particularly blue—but if it results in the planting of less cotton and more corn, potatoes and pig meat it will yet prove a blessing in disguise.

Strange that some people—like the ostrich—stick their heads in the sand and think themselves well hid from public gaze. A large primary vote and a small general election vote are two things altogether different.

Let democrats not become discouraged over the "large" vote polled by the republicans in their primary. It was as the whistling of a youth in passing a cemetery; they were using every means to keep their courage up. The November election will be the true test and in that election democracy will triumph.

Some wise acre in the Union and Banner last week advised the people to refuse to take the Press out of their boxes, as later on they would be required to pay for them. Just how Mr. Wiseacre secured his information is not known. It is a settled fact, however, that this paper has never yet sued any subscriber for "back dues." The paper is going to quite a number of gentlemen who did not subscribe in person, but who are nevertheless "paid up" subscribers—the paper having been subscribed for by others and the editor directed to send them out to the addresses given. No "bills" or law suits will be incurred by those to whom the paper is sent—of this you may rest assured. We presume that the word "saunt out," by Mr. Wiseacre was merely an effort to cripple the Press, and at the same time to keep the people from knowing the actual facts or from reading both sides.

We have stated that so far as this paper is concerned it shall undertake to wage a clean warfare, if such a thing be possible—we mean that; but we cannot blame a parson for undertaking to answer a personal attack, and our columns are open to those who are maligned, abused, ridiculed or misrepresented. While we assume no personal responsibility for signed articles and regret their necessity, still we believe that when one person attacks another, simply because he as the disadvantage, he should be held up to the public gaze and the person attacked is the proper one to do so. Mr. Callaway feels that he has been so attacked and thinking so, has dared to answer in no uncertain tones, the charges made against him. He does not enter into a defense of the Press, the court or the Democratic party—he is content to fight his own battle just now and leave the others to do their fighting when necessity requires.

This being the case the Press willingly gives space to his article and asks all fair minded readers to peruse it with care.

We are publishing, by request, a communication and petition which bears upon the public school affairs of Clanton. It is extremely unfortunate that any occasion for discussion has arisen—it will not do the school any good and may do much harm. We are of the opinion that the least said just now is the easiest mended in the future.

However, the request for publication has come through proper channels and we can not afford to "turn it down," being signed as it is, by a large number of Clanton's best citizens.

We have no comment to make upon the petition; that we leave to others. We offer the "other side" equal space in our columns for reply, but commend to them the injunction of our Saviour: "Whosoever shall strike thee upon thy right cheek, turn to him the other also."

The Press has entertained the hope that the present campaign would be free from mud-slinging, personalities and the like, and it has repeatedly said that it would indulge in no such thing but would go ahead giving the people the news and refrain from indulging in such as was that of last year which thoroughly disgusted the people.

We are still of that mind and hope to so conduct our part of the campaign as to merit the approval of all decent and thinking people.

At the same time we are mindful of the fact that quite a number of things have been said to which we ought, in justice to ourselves, as well as to our friends, to make reply. For a while longer we are going to keep on the even tenor of our way and treat with silent contempt the slings that have been made at us. If they continue the public will know where to place the blame, and we believe they will not be long in doing so. If they cause then the campaign can be conducted on a higher plane and with due respect to manhood and decency.

We are not trying to dodge any issues and are ready for any charges, but these are matters in which the public is not interested, and hence we are going to try as hard as we can to keep our sheet clean; if the fight is thrust upon us we are ready for the fray. When the fight comes, as come it must, judging from recent utterances, we are going to "clear decks" and shoot broadside, and our slogan shall be "Lay on, McDuff, and damned be he who first cries, hold! enough!"

REPUBLICAN PRIMARY ELECTION FIGURES

On account of the lateness of the hour at which the primary election results were obtained (we having already gone to press with one form of our paper) it is impossible for us to give a tabulated statement of the vote cast in the republican primary, However; we give the aggregate results which we trust will prove entirely satisfactory to our patrons.

In the previous primary election (July 25th, 1910) the republicans cast a total of 1171 (see Union of Aug. 4th, 1910) and in the primary of May 6, 1912, a total of 1076 votes were cast—a falling off of 95 votes. In the Democratic primary of 1910 a total of 684 votes were cast, and in the primary of April 1st, 1912, a total of 911 votes were cast—a gain of 227 votes.

But we started out to give the vote in the recent primary; here it is:

For Assessor; J. N. Dennis, 632, H. A. Harris, 435.

For Collector; J. Dudley Collins, 577, J. A. Maddox, 315. J. Z. Mims, 178.

For Treasurer; J. W. Littlejohn, 1038.

For Superintendent; W. T. Bean 618, J. W. Moore, 445.

For Commissioner, Third Dist.; W. T. Herrod, 803, T. G. Milling, 196.

For Commissioner, Fourth Dist; J. S. Dennis, 484, Moses Robinson, 568.

For Coroner: G. O. Foshee, 993.

SCHOOL MATTERS.

Editor of the Clanton Press:

The petitions hereto attached were filed with the Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Clanton High School several days since, with a courteous request that action be taken thereon immediately and that the public be informed of such action in any manner that the Board deemed proper. It will be observed that the persons whose names appear on these petitions are not only citizens and friends of Clanton and friends of the cause of education, representing as they do, practically every business, trade and profession, but patrons of the Clanton High School, and fathers and mothers of fifty odd children who attend this school. These petitions were quietly pigeon-holed by the "Honorable" Board, and the polite request of these patrons of the school and citizens of the community was treated with silent contempt. The right of petition is a right that an Anglo-Saxon has asserted and enjoyed in the ages passed, and a right which he expects to assert and enjoy as long as the race exists, the "intelligence, wisdom and progress" of the present time to the contrary, notwithstanding. But then you know that when some people are placed in positions of public trust, they manage somehow to conjure up in their minds the idea that they are masters and the people, whose interests they are expected to promote, are their serfs. I ask that you publish these petitions that the public may know "what deeds are done in Rome."

Respectfully,

WHY CHRIST AROSE FROM THE DEAD

What His Resurrection Proved and Guarantees.

Pastor Russell's Easter Sermon Delivered In Academy of Music Before a Congregation of 2,500—Shows Some Inconsistencies of Present Beliefs.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 7. — Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle preached in the Academy of Music today to nearly 2,500 hearers. His topic was, "Why Christ Arose from the Dead." His text was: "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain and your faith also vain; yea, and we are found false witnesses of God. * * * Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." (I Cor. xv, 14, 15, 18.) He said:

The faith once delivered to the saints by Jesus and the Apostles in respect to the resurrection of the dead has been very generally lost. Christian people profess a belief in the resurrection, because they find it stated in the Bible, yet they are continually in difficulty in their endeavor to make the Scriptural teaching on the subject square with some of the unscriptural theories received into the Church and incorporated into many of the creeds.

St. Paul warned the Church against these human philosophies, and called them "science, falsely so-called," which make void the Word of God. These errors have been instrumental in dividing the faith of God's people into 600 different denominations, with 600 different professions. If God's people could all come back to the simplicity of the Bible's teaching, all of these differences would speedily disappear. God's Word would be seen to be beautiful and harmonious and satisfactory to the consecrated intellect.

The Bible Resurrection Reasonable.

Really the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead has been repudiated by all denominations, not willingly, not intentionally, but perforce, as it were. An opposite theory received and entrenched in the minds gives no place for the doctrine of the resurrection as the Bible presents it. Consequently we have twisted the doctrine of the resurrection and recite, "I believe in the resurrection of the body."

Yet, even this perverted view of the resurrection is not satisfactory to those who hold it. They wish many a time that the doctrine of the resurrection was not in the Bible, so much difference does it cause. For instance, how inconsistent it seems that they should say, "I believe in the resurrection of the body," and then say, as many do, Dying is but going home, getting rid of the mortal flesh, and being freed from its limitations. If it is a blessing to die and get free from the limitations of the body, how could it be a blessing to be reincarcerated in the body, and be obliged to keep it through all eternity?

There is nothing inconsistent in the Bible presentation of the resurrection. Not from the Bible, but from men, comes the suggestion of the resurrection of the body. The Bible invariably refers to the resurrection of the soul. It is the soul that dies; as we read, "The soul that sinneth it shall die." Adam was created a living soul, but his living soul came under the death sentence because he disobeyed God. It was his soul that was redeemed from death, not his body. "I will redeem thy life (look up the word life to see if it is from the Hebrew word meaning soul, and if so, add the word soul after the word life, in parenthesis) from destruction.—Psalm ciii, 4.

To accomplish this redemption we read that Christ Jesus "poured out His soul unto death." He made "His soul an offering for sin." Moreover, we are particularly told that it was the soul of Jesus that was raised from the dead: "I will not leave Thy soul in sheol." St. Peter quotes this statement as prophetical of the resurrection of Jesus that His soul was not left in hades. With what body do they come? is a totally different question. Some of the dead souls, in the resurrection, will come forth with spirit bodies, and others with human bodies, according to the Bible. But the important point is that it is the soul, the being, that comes forth. If the soul dies, as the Bible declares, then manifestly the soul should be resurrected.

Bible Made Void by Tradition.

The difficulty with us has been that we "have made void the Word of God" by our "traditions." We received from the Grecian philosophers a tradition which Socrates and Plato both advocated, namely, that when a human being dies he does not really die. The soul, it is claimed, cannot die, but whenever the soul gets out of the body, the body dies. How strange it seems that we all accepted this philosophy without a word of Scripture, but with hundreds of Scriptures to condemn it!

It behooves us to take a decided stand either with the Grecian philosophers and their theories, or with the Bible. The two are in conflict and whoever attempts to hold both is in confusion. If the dead are not dead, there is no reason behind it death, and if we live to die, how could [illegible]

GUN CLUB ORGANIZED

The Clanton Gun Club was reorganized last Friday night with eighteen or twenty charter members. Mr. J. E. Robinson Sr. was elected as President and Mr Jno. VanDerveer was made Secretary and Purser.

A committee on Constitution and By-Laws was appointed and other committees necessary to the perfecting of the organization were provided.

The Club has gone actively to work to secure a good shooting ground; automatic traps will be purchased and the club made the equal of any in the state. Miss Ethel Mullins was unanimously elected as Sponsor for the club.

Notice has already been served upon the Interstate Shooting Association that Clanton proposes to have, on August 13 and 14, a tournament at which more than forty shooters from this and other states are expected.

FIXING TO BEGIN TO GET READY TO START

Dr. P. I. Hopkins, as County Health Officer, has inaugurated plans for the draining of the east side of Seventh Street and other places that offer alluring invitations to mosquitoes as family raising quarters. But besides the pesky mosquitoes, there is a number of other reasons why these places should be cleaned, and Dr. Hopkins has set himself to the task of doing it—or rather having if done.

When compleled lets give him a seven story banquet—and then having ridded our town of these health nuisances, if he will undertake to fortify our nerves and ear drums by ridding us of the incessant train whistles, lets give him a seven-story mansion handsomely furnished.

THE DAY OF DAYS.

Though Cupid had been lingering in our community for some time, he did not accomplish any definite work until the twentieth hour of Tuesday, April 30th., when Mr. J. P. Parrish and Miss Parlee Jones were united in marriage.

Some few quivering moments after the sun had sunk beneath the western horizon on that beautiful Tuesday there could be seen twos and twos gathering about the home of the bride to witness the ceremony, than which none was ever more complete. It was conducted by Rev. Bob Aldridge of Birmingham.

The bride and groom are now happy dwellers of our community. All wish them a happy life.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

Senator Benjamin R. Tillman, one of the most picturesque figures of the United States, has published a sentimental appeal to the people of South Carolina to return him to his office. His term expires March 3, 1913. "I am asking you to re-elect me, although my health is broken and I am no longer the strong and vigorous man I once was," says the appeal. "I have a strong desire to die in harness for sentimental reasons only."

The lynching of Zach Walker at Coatesville, Pa., on the night of August 13, 1911, when he was burned after he had been arreseed for the killing of a special policeman, will go unpunished. After a jury had brought in a verdict of not guilty in the case of Lewis Denithorn, one of the six men accused of participating in the lynching who had not yet been tried, the commonwealth asked for the acquittal of the other five defendants.

Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama swept Georgia in the presidential primary, the first ever held in the state, by ap lurality of approximately 8,577 over his chief opponent in Georgia, Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey. Official returns from a large majority of the counties, and careful estimates where the official count could not be had, show that Underwood carried 97 counties, with aggregate pluralities of 16,007, while Wilson received 44 counties, with aggregate pluralities of 7,430, giving Underwood a plurality in the entire state of 8,577.

For the second time during the present year, President Taft participated in a celebration of St. Patrick's day. The president went to Savannah, Ga., to keep an engagement he made several months ago to speak at the centennial banquet of the Hibernian society. Mr. Taft's first celebration was in Boston more than six weeks ago, but even The Hub failed to turn out more enthusiastic crowds than did Savannah. The president was the guest of the Hibernian society and of Savannah.

General.

The Mexican government officially denied the statement given to the press by Mrs. M. L. Ryan to the effect that an American was killed shortly before she departed and his heart cut out and sent to the port city just before the steamship Kentuckian sailed there with the American refugees. Dr. Plutarco Ornealas of New Orleans, consul general of Mexico, was advised to give to the American press an unequivocal denial of Mrs. Ryan's statement.

The shooting of Private Baker of the Twenty-second infantry, while on border patrol duty, was done deliberately from the Mexican side of the river, according to Col. E. Z. Steever, who completed a thorough investigation. Baker was reclining on his elbow near the river bank when two Mexicans fired at him twice. One bullet shot off the soldier's fingers and scraped his foot. Colonel Steever has reported details of the affair to Washington.

Asking that its churches throughout the world come out squarely in favor of improved conditions for all wage-earners, a special committee has prepared for presentation to the quadrennial general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, at Minneapolis, Minn., a plan to "disprove the charge that the church is not in sympathy with the poor." The report of the committee which has been at work for four years states that labor and social conditions have become such that the church may take a prominent part in them.

Colonel Roosevelt renounced his claim to the eight delegates at large to the Republican national convention elected for him in Massachusetts. He wired them that he would expect them to vote for President Taft, taking this action, he said, because of the fact that President Taft carried the state on the presidential preferential vote. Colonel Roosevelt then announced his decision in a statement, copies of which he telegraphed to each of the eight delegates at large elected recently.

Mrs. A. M. Lewis of Fort Worth, Texas, who is only sixteen years old, and who has been thrice married and divorced, has now entrusted her happiness to a fourth husband, whose name is Glass.

The United States government has sent messages to all warships to keep out of Mexican ports.

Holding that Alaska is an organized territory and not a mere district, the Supreme court of the United States decides that the interstate commerce laws extend to it. The interstate commerce commission had declined to pass on a complaint.

The final fight for life in behalf of Clarence V. T. Richeson, who, while a Baptist minister, and engaged to marry a wealthy young woman, poisoned his former sweetheart, Avis Linnell, will be made this week in Boston, Mass. Richeson, who confessed the crime before being brought to trial, has been sentenced to die by electricity in the week beginning May 19, but his attorneys hope to prevail upon Governor Foss to allow a petition for clemency to go to the executive council.

Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church, in session at Minneapolis, Minn., appear to be about equally divided on the question whether the church law prohibiting dancing, card playing, gambling and going to theaters, circuses and horse races should be abolished, as recommended by the board of bishops. It was stated that the majority of the members of the church never had refrained from theater-going and dancing, and a motion was made that "the rule always had been a source of constant irritation and unrest in the church." It was also contended that abolishment of the rule would give the outside world the impression that the church was tending toward laxity and was endorsing the things which it formerly opposed.

Fifty-nine bodies of the unidentified Titanic victims were committed to their last resting place in three cemeteries in Halifax, Nova Scotia. A large plot of ground was purchased by the White Star company, and the graves will be marked with suitable monuments. Floral offerings were profuse. The Canadian army and navy were represented by officers of rank at each cemetery.

Floyd Allen, leader of the outlaw gang that wiped out the Carroll county court at Hillsville, Va., was in a state of collapse while his trial for the murder of Prosecutor Foster went on. He was pale and trembled in every limb when carried into court. Just as court convened Judge Staples was informed that the prisoner begged his guard to cut his throat. "I've got no chance," Allen said to the jailer. "Kill me quick and have it over with. I'm all in."

The wholesale price of beef has advanced a cent a pound to a higher record than any year since 1881. A carcass of native cornfed beef was quoted at Wallabout market in Brooklyn at a top figure of 13 cents, which oldtimers agreed was the highest price in over thirty years. Retailers were charging 25 to 26 cents a pound for porterhouse and 24 cents for sirloin steaks, 20 to 22 cents for rib roast, and even soup meat sold at 15 cents a pound.

Thirty embalmers worked in an improvised morgue at Halifax, N. S., preparing for inspection of more of the unidentified dead in whom centers fragile hope that relatives still searching for Titanic victims may find their kin. The unidentified list still stood at sixty when the work was resumed. Maj. Blanton Winship, U. S. A., said that he had seen the unidentified dead and had given up hope of finding Major Butt's body.

Another serious break occurred in the Mississippi river levee at Torras, La., on the west side of the swollen stream, where the flood waters from the disastrous Dog Tail crevasse find re-entry into the big river.

Washington.

On the legislative calendar, which, for partisan and political reasons, might be marked "must," are the following matters of legislation: The Lorimer case. Popular election of senators resolution. Tariff bills, metals, wool, chemicals, sugar, excise tax. Panama canal legislation. Postoffice appropriation bill, including provision for a limited parcels post and for government aid to good roads. Other appropriations bills. Naval appropriation bill involving policy of national defense and no-battleship economy program of house. The best judgment of senators on the time needed to dispose of these important matters indicates a session lasting all summer.

The life of Maj. Archibald W. Butt, as a soldier, newspaper man, aide to presidents and lodge member, and his heroic death on the Titanic, were commemorated by his commander-in-chief, a president, a secretary of war, a senator of his native state, a contemporary in the newspaper field and the fraternity of Masonry at an impressive memorial service in Washington. President Taft spoke with difficulty, and he was forced to an abrupt ending by a steady flow of tears.

Attorney General Wickersham appointed Stanley W. Finch, chief of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, a special commissioner to suppress the white slave traffic. Mr. Finch will begin a vigorous campaign in every state in the Union for the extermination of the vice. He will co-operate with societies and individuals interested to wipe out the traffic by a systematic and comprehensive plan of investigation and prosecution and by placing agents in every state.

A broad anti-injunction bill, such a measure as had long been advocated by labor unions throughout the country, was favorably reported to the house by Chairman Clayton of the judiciary committee. The bill provides that injunctions in labor disputes shall only be issued after the defendants have had opportunity to answer the complaint against them. It also provides that courts shall issue restraining orders for but seven days, and these only where the complainant shows that he will be done irreparable injury if the order is not issued.

THE SITUATION.

From Vicksburg, Miss., south to New Orleans, the Mississippi river is from half a foot to two and a half feet above any previous flood record stage.

An additional rise this week of approximatly one foot from New Orleans north to Baton Rouge is predicted by the weather bureau.

Soundings made by United States army engineers show that this record breaking volume of water in th big river is moving at the rate of 8.1 feet per second, or approximately one mile per hour faster than ever before recorded in the Mississippi's flood history.

Danger points in the levees in Louisiana; Baton Rouge, Bonnet Carre, 25 miles north of New Orleans; Morrison, Plaquemine, Scott's Landing; Cypress Hall, New Roads, and Third district, New Orleans.

New Orleans.—Large sections of 15 Louisiana parishes west of the Mississippi river are under water, four other parishes have flood water and are bound to get more this week; approximately 100,000 people in that territory have been driven from their homes; trains are taking out hundreds of families daily; fleets of motor boats and skiffs are being used to rescue marooned people; about a dozen lives all told have been sacrificed, principally because the people refused tc heed the warnings; several hundred thousand dollars' worth of rations have been distributed among the refugees, who are sheltered in all manner of houses from cabins to churches and lodge buildings.

Every day brings stories of suffering and of heroic rescues, of new sections inundated by the waters from the crevasses already recorded in the levees of the Mississippi river. The funds that will be required to take care of the flood victims for weeks, many of them for months, perhaps, cannot be expressed in a few hundred thousands of dollars.

It is a pathetic picture and presents a big problem which Louisiana and Mississippi, ably and generously assisted by the federal government, are giving their sympathetic efforts in grappling with.

But, withal, the still bigger question of protecting the remaining levees along the Mississippi river from the mouth of the Red south is causing deeper concern for the moment. Millions of dollars' worth of property is at stake and thousands of lives would be jeopardized if some of the biggest of the levees should give way.

Federal engineers, state and parish officials and an army of men scattered along the river from a point 60 miles below New Orleans to the Red river, are bending every energy to prove themselves equal to the task which they shoulder.

New Orleans.—Although no breaks were reported in the Mississippi river levees, the situation at Baton Rouge was reported "desperate," while a telegram from an assistant engineer at Melville said the situation was "extremely grave."

ROOSEVELT CONTRADICTS TAFT.

The Colonel Makes a Warm Answer to the President's Baltimore Speech.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—In a statement issued here by Colonel Roosevelt in reply to President Taft's speech in Baltimore the colonel asserts that Mr. Taft knew he was making an untrue statement when he said that the former president expressed the opinion that the anti-trust law ought to be repealed. He also again contradicts the president in regard to the Harvester trust case, saying that at a cabinet meeting and in private conversation with him, Mr. Taft "repeatedly and emphatically approved the course actually taken."

Rebels Defeated.

San Antonio.—Mexican Consul General Estava received dispatches from Eagle Pass telling of a victory of federal troops over rebels at Castro Clemegas, a point near Monclova. His advices say 700 rebels were killed.

Large Attendance.

Nashville.—Between 700 and 800 delegates from 20 southern states are in Nashville attending the first annual convention of the Southern Sociological Congress, which opened in this city May 7th.

STATE NEWS OF INTEREST

MINOR HAPPENINGS IN ALABAMA CITIES, TOWNS AND VILLAGES.

METHODIST WOMEN MEET

Prominent Church Workers From This and Several Other States Will Address Meetings.

Montgomery.—Women's Missionary Societies of various Methodist churches over the state will come to Montgomery Friday, May 10, for the first meeting of the Women's Missionary Society for the Alabama Conference, which will convene that night at Court Street Methodist Church at 8 o'clock, and continue for four days. A program has been arranged which will include mony of the most prominent Methodict Church workers in Alabama. Besides these several prominent persons from other States will appear.

Huntsville.—North Alabama fruit growers are anticipating an abundant peach and pear crop this year. The young buds have escaped the usual April freezes that has ruined the peach crop regularly during the last seven or eight years and if half the prospects are realized there will be more fruit here than in several yedrs past.

Florence.—John Clemmons, a farmer of Cowpen, in the Green Hill Beat, was killed while enroute to Florence. The tongue of his wagon broke while descending the steep hill at Shoal Creek bridge, nine miles east of Florence, and the wagon ran away, throwing him out and one wheel ran over his head.

Tuscumbia.—The remains of Dr. Frank T. Gilmore, who died at the State Hospital in Tuscaloosa reached Tuscumbia and were interred in Oakwood Cemetery, this city. The deceased was for many years a prominent citizen of Tuscumbia, where he practiced medicine, and was well-known throughout the county.

Bay Minette.—A number of complaints have been received from the vicinity of Robertsdale and Summerdale, where so much tobacco is being grown and where much heavy hauling is done, that the roads are in terrible condition, owing to the recent heavy rains.

Birmingham.—Federal officials in Birmingham express the opinion that the next Congress will appropriate sufficient funds for the erection of a postoffice suitable to the city's needs, on the site purchased for the purpose at a cost of $200,000, at Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth street.

Anniston.—J. T. Watt, agent for the farmers' demonstration work in this district while in Anniston stated that farmers throughout Calhoun and adjacent counties have done very little toward improving their farms for cultivation and that the continued rains have worked a great hardship on them everywhere.

Center.—Farmers living in Cherokee county say they have never known such a backward season. Very little farm work has been done. The owner of one of the largest farms in the county states that he has not plowed an acre of ground this year.

Montgomery.—At a cost of $50,000 a new dormitory will be erected at the Florence Normal college. The building committee met here and ordered that the contract be let at once. A few changes in the plans were made.

Montgomery.—The supreme court of Alabama took up the call of the Second judicial division. This is one of the heaviest divisions that comes before that court, inasmuch as Montgomery county is contained therein.

Gadsden.—D. S. McClain, third defendant in the Lutes murder case, was found guilty and sentenced to life in the penitentiary.

Centre.—The fourth year of the Cherokee County High school will close May 16 and there will be eight in the graduating class.

Cuba.—A determined fight on the boll weevil is being put up by farmers around here, despite the unfavorable weather.

Eufaula.—Eufaula's new railroad, the Eufaula and Chattahoochee Valley Railroad, to be built north of Pittsview in Russell county and later to be extended southward to the gulf, is now a practical certainty for the board of directors, at a meeting held here, entertained a proposition and planned the ways and means to build the road. The proposition as outlined was agreeable to all parties concerned and when the contract is signed operations will begin at an early date.

Wharton, Tex.—John L. Creoss, uncle of Col. W. C. Tunstall of Greensboro, died here on April 26, aged 86 years.

Huntsville.—Bob Britnell committed suicide by cutting his throat. He was near his home in the edge of the town. He was about 55 years old.

Eufaula.—The public schools will close on Friday, May 21, according to an announcement made by Superintendent H. L. Upshaw. The commencement exercises will be held Wednesday evening, May 29.

Eufaula.—The free clinic for the treatment of all persons suffering with the hookworm disease was opened here. The clinics in the southern end of the county at Clio and Louisville were also opened.

Montgomery.—Work has begun on quarters for military officers who will attend school of instruction to be held in Montgomery, May 7 to 11, under the direction of Joseph B. Scully, adjutant general, Alabama National Guard.

Birmingham.—Dr. Edward Howard Griggs closed his lecture course on the life and works of Tennyson and Shakespearian plays. Dr. Griggs had been in Birmingham a week, lecturing twice daily at the Central High School under the auspices of the Lyceum course.

Prattville.—At an informal meeting of members of the Prattville Methodist Church, ground was broken for the new church building to be erected. The oldest member of the church, Mrs. S. E. Morgan, threw out the first dirt necessary to remove to erect this building.

Livingston,—The closing exercises of the Alabama Normal college at this place will begin on May 26, when the commencement sermon will be preached by the Rev. L. S. Branscomb of Birmingham. The address to the graduating class will be delivered on May 29, by Hon. C. S. McDowell, mayor of Eufaula.

Bessemer.—This city wants one-fourth of the proposed million-dollar bond issue for a new courthouse and jail for Jefferson county. A mass meeting was held and citizens were unanimously of the opinion that, as their end of the county paid one-fourth of the taxes of the county, they should have that proportion of the public improvement fund for their own use.

Greensboro.—At the regular meeting of the Camp Allen C. Jones, United Confederate Veterans, the following were elected delegates to represent the camp at the Macon, Ga., reunion: Thomas F. Hall, J. D. Thomas, Robert H. Evins and John Turpin. Those chosen alternates are: George N. Nabors, R. H. Jackson, William N. Knight and Robert B. Waller. The members unanimously elected Miss Annie May Gewin sponsor for the camp.

Talladega.—O. P. Farnsworth, of Owensboro, Ky., with George C. Littell, who is a superintendent of the contracting firm, arrived here to begin work on the new government building. The appropriation for this building is $65,000. It is expected to be an ornament to the city. The new building will be situated on the lot formerly occupied by the Exchange hotel.

OPTIMISM APPARENT IN MOST SECTIONS

Tetail Trade Hadicapped by Bad, Wet Weather.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Though activity in some wholesale lines is not so marked as heretofore, dry goods, for instance, trade in general is of fairly steady proportions and what is probably most significant current business is being done on a basis that allows of room for profits. In this respect the situation is quite the antithesis of what it was at this time last year. Withal, the season is backward, re-orders are slow in appearing and retail trade, which had begun to show improvement, has been considerably handicapped by cold, wet weather. However, temperatures this week have aided this branch of distribution, save in the northeast and south, the former having been affected by spells of wet weather, while the latter zone still suffers from an oversupply of moisture, backward planting operations and overflowed lands in the lower Mississippi valley.

Optimism is apparent in most sections of the country, there is more or less doing on fall account, political conditions are practically disregarded, outdoor work is more active, employment is absorbing surplus labor, the iron and steel industry is operating more freely and actual strikes are relatively unimportant. Trade in dry goods outside of the larger centers is of steady volume but in the chief markets business is moderate, with a tendency to halt, except in departments purveying wash and white goods suitable for summer weather. Wholesale dealers in shoes say current trade is only fair and immediate business with the retail interests is quiet, owing to unseasonable weather, but business on fall account is looking up. Leathers continue very firm and it is predicted that side upper leather is to be advanced.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending May 2 were 224 against 248 last week, 234 in the like week of 1911, 191 in 1910, 214 in 1909 and 288 in 1908. Business failures in Canada for the week number 20, which compares with 23 last week and 26 in the like week of last year.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending May 2 aggregate 3,543,112 bushels against 3,169,514 last week and 1,944,327 this week last year. For the 44 weeks ending May 2 exports are 136,823,522 bushels against 101,724,105 in the corresponding period last year.

Corn exports for the week are 236,595 bushels against 76,427 last week and 275,059 in 1911. For the 44 weeks ending May 2 corn exports are 32,612,028 bushels against 44,061,239 last year.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

While the advance in industrial and trade activity is still gradual, evidences of improvement continue to multiply. The agreement to arbitrate the defferences between the railroads and engineers is a distinct help to the situation. The expansion of bank credits, especially in the West, the large output of new securities in April and the number of new incorporations—both greatly in excess of last year—the notable demand for steel products and cotton and woolen goods, and the statistics of traffic and clearings, all reflect a growth in business.

Reports from the leading trade centers reveal improved conditions, except in those cities chiefly in the East, where the weather was unfavorable.

New demands in iron and steel hove diminished somewhat following the advance in prices, but mills generally are booked ahead, practically to capacity during the second quarter of the year.

In finished lines concessions are the exception rather than the rule, although wire products are being shaded in some instances. Additional car orders are reported and fabricators of structural shapes are provided with considerable work.

On the whole the higher quotations have not been thoroughly tested, yet it is expected that the present level will be maintained. There is no particular activity in pig iron. It is predicted that the forthcoming statement of the leading interest will show a substantial gain in unfilled tonnage.

Adverse weather conditions in the early part of the week checked house trade with dry goods jobbers and retailers, and the distribution of seasonable cottons has been necessarily slow. The size of the cotton goods exports is unusual, running 50 per cent ahead of a year ago, and shipments from the port of New York last week reached over 14,000 bales. Worsted yarn markets are buoyant, and repeat orders on overcoatings and cloakings are frequent. Leading men's wear and dress goods mills are busy.

Business in footwear for fall delivery is good, but as most manufacturers have not started to produce these goods, the factories are not generally actively employed. Notable strength continues to characterise the entire market for hides and skins, with especial firmness in calf skins, in the latter both domestic and foreign stock showing sharp advances.

Score Injured by Tornado.

Linwood, Kan., a score of persons were injured, some fatally, and a dozen houses wrecked by a tornado which passed east of here.

HER AILMENT A COMMON ONE

Happy Experience of Mrs. Dillinger, Who Finally Found Relief in Cardui, The Woman's Tonic.

West Baden, Ind.—"For about four years," says Mrs. Sarah Dillinger, of this place, "I suffered with an ailment common to women, and I was so poorly that I could not do my work.

Since taking Cardui, the woman's tonic, I am stout, and able to work all day, hard. It is certainly a great medicine for women. I recommend it to a great many ladies.

My daughter is now taking Cardui, and it seems to be helping her already, although she has now taken only one bottle.

Cardui is the best medicine I ever took. It has done me so much good! It saved my life, and I can't praise it too much."

Every woman would always keep Cardui handy, for use when needed, if she knew what benefit it gives, in cases where weakened vitality makes the body and brain seem tired and worn-out.

A few doses of Cardui, at the right time, will often save much suffering by preventing a more serious sickness.

To relieve pain and misery, due to womanly troubles, nothing has been found, during the 50 years that it has been before the public to take the place of Cardui.

Won't you try it?

CLOSING EXERCISES.

PRESIDENT OF WOMANS COLLEGE TO MAKE ADDRESS.

On next Wednesday night at the Academy will take place the closing exercises of the Clanton Academy. The occasion will doubtless prove one of much pleasure and entertainment to the patrons of the school as well as to the general public.

The teaching force has been considerably handicapped during the past term by the prevalence of measles and mumps among the student body, but they expect, notwithstanding, to make a most creditable showing for the year's work.

Prof. Hicks has been extremely fortunate in securing the presence of President W. L. Martin of the Woman's College of Montgomery, as orator of the occasion. Dr. Martin's reputation as an educator is not confined to Alabama; he is known throughout the country, and, while not a great orator, he is a great man, filling a great place, and is thoroughly capable of giving to those who seek it, advice of a most wholesome character.

The exercises Thursday evening will bring the school to a close and the faculty and Board cordially invite every citizen of Clanton to attend both Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

VERBENA.

The Fifth District Sunday school Convention was held at Verbena Methodist church, Sunday, May 5.

The convention was fine, eight of the ten schools in the district being represented. All the speakers for the day were present and made fine talks.

We also had Mr. D. W. Dillard, of Mathews, Superintendent of the Home Department of Alabama, who made a fine talk on the work.

It is requested that every school pay the county pledge before the county convention in July.

The Mountain Creek Sunday school asked for the next convention, which will be before the county convention.

It is requested that the people of Verbena be thanked for their kindness to the people of the convention.

BETTIE M. GARDNER.

AN INVITATION

To the Confederate Veterans of R. E. Lee Camp, Clanton, Ala:

A special invitation is extended you to visit the Soldier's Home on June 3rd, 1912, and participate in the Memorial Service to be held on that day, in honor of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy. This invitation is extended from W. J. Bethune, Commander, Camp No. 1711, United Confederate Veterans, Soldier's, Home, Mountain Creek Ala.

FORCES BACK OF THE COLONEL

VIOLATORS OF THE LAW SEEKING IMMUNITY THROUGH THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

That the United States Steel Corporation is supporting the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt, not only by its votes, is evidenced by the returns to date. Pittsburgh, the center of its activities, tells the tale better than any other one instance, but there are others.

In Pittsburgh, where the final product of the United States Steel Corporation goes to market; in the coal regions where its mines are located; in northern Ohio ports, including Cleveland, where its ores are unloaded, in South Chicago and Joliet, Illinois, and in New York, where its main offices are located, the United States Steel Corporation, through the avowed and open work of George W. Perkins and his associates for Theodore Roosevelt, United States Steel has poured in its money and its votes for Roosevelt.

The latest manifestation of the Steel Corporation activity [illegible] evelt has appeared in West Virginia. At Morgantown, the greatest moneyed corporation in the world, operates a tin plate mill employing 700 men. Superintendent Lloyd of that mill is now actively working for Roosevelt and the Roosevelt forces in West Virginia confidently predict that Mr. Roosevelt will have the entire 700 votes controlled by the United States Steel Corporation.

Thus do "the people rule."

Who has the most to gain and who would most appreciate the renomination and re-election of Theodore Roosevelt to a third term in the White House? Here is the answer.

The United Steel Corporation, now being sued by the Taft administration for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law exactly as Theodore Roosevelt sued the Standard Oil Company for the same reason.

The International Harvester Company, suit against which was suppressed by Theodore Roosevelt, but which is being forced to disintegrate voluntarily or face a law suit by the Taft administration.

Dan R. Hanna of Cleveland, Ohio, newspaper publisher, who has been indicted by the Taft administration for rebating.

George W. Perkins, director of the United Steel Corporation and of the International Harvester Company.

Frank A. Munsey, magazine and newspaper publisher, who has "trailed" Perkins in steel stock manipulations and made a fortune.

Truman H. Newberry, a millionaire automobile manufacturer.

Alexander Revell, a millionaire furniture manufacturer.

Gifford Pinchot, a millionaire by inheritance, who wants to be Secretary of the Interior.

The Standard Oil Company has its eye on the Osage Oil lands in Oklahoma, worth millions.

Gov. Chase Osborne of Michigan, a millionaire lumberman and reputed large owner of Steel stock.

Chauncey Dewey, millionaire ranchman, of Chicago.

Alexander S. Cochran, millionaire carpet manufacturer, who is interested in the wool schedule of the tariff law.

Cecil Lyon of Texas, millionaire ranchman, whose work behind the scenes in Oklahoma Indian lands, Texas politics and Mexican concessions is most interesting.

Thomas Niedringhaus and Walter Dickey, Missouri millionaires.

W. S. Edwards of West Virginia, a relative of Theodore Roosevelt, who draws his immense income from Standard Oil stock.

William Flinn of Pittsburgh, discredited "boss" who had his officeholders vote him $21,000,000 in contracts in a few years and tried to make a deal with the late "Boss" Quay to protect his personal and political welfare.

Everett Colby, of New Jersey, millionaire by inheritance.

These are "the people" who will "rule" if Roosevelt has his way.—Taft Truths, April 23rd.

It must not be forgotten that Mr. Roosevelt is himself a millionaire. While he left the White House ostensibly "broke," it has only recently come to light that as a result of his two terms in the White House, he, like William J. Bryan, has found politics a profitable investment, and his publications have paid him in royalties, a sum of money exceeding half a million dollars, alone. Of course the Colonel is saving his money and merely contributing his time and energy to a game he likes because it pays and because it gratifies his personal ambition for power and the spectacular. It is this that is especially dangerous to the American people and to the American institutions.—Taft Truths, April 23rd.

In Missouri the Roosevelt forces, as in Oklahoma, have run special trains of negroes, most frequently, and sometimes whites, to all congressional district conventions. In the 14th district of Missouri it is a matter of court record that the judge, a Roosevelt man, paroled three prisoners out of jail and made them T. R. delegates in county convention.—Taft Truths, April 23rd.

Colonel Roosevelt and his managers are not conducting a campaign with expectation that the Colonel will win the nomination—they are too shrewd politicians to believe he can win. The speeches they are now making are for the sole purpose of defeating Mr. Taft's re-election. They know that the democrats will use these speeches in the campaign to follow the Chicago convention and they are seeking to defeat Taft by playing in the hands of the democratic party.—Taft Truths, April 23rd.

Mr. Crit Jones made a flying visit to Jemison Tuesday morning, returning in the afternoon.

Constipation, if Neglected, Causes Serious Illness

Constipation, if neglected, leads to almost innumerable complications affecting the general health.

Many cases of typhoid fever, appendicitis and other severe diseases are traceable to prolonged clogging of the bowels. Regard the effects of constipation, C. E. Ayers, 6 Sabin St., Montpelier, Vt., says: "I was afflicted with constipation and billousness for years, and at times became so bad I would become unconscious. I have been found in that condition many times. Physicians did not seem to be able to do me any good. I would become weak and for days at a time could do no work. Not long ago I got a box of Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, and after using them found I had never tried anything that acted in such a mild and effective manner. I believe I have at last found the remedy that suits my case."

Thousands of people are sufferers from habitual constipation and while possibly realizing something of the danger of this condition, yet neglect too long to employ proper curative measures until serious illness often results. The advice of all physicians is, "keep your bowels clean," and it's good advice.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory, your money is returned.

DR. SIMMONS Squaw Vine Wine

A Palatable Medicine especially prepared to relieve and cure the diseases which affect women

This excellent medicine is not only successful in conquering the painful and prostrating diseases that attack the female generative system but it is exceptionally pleasant to take. The usual rule that the nastier the medicine the more effective it is, is reversed in the case of Squaw Vine Wine. It is one of the pleasantest of medicines. The fresh juice of a well ripened sweet orange is not more agreeable. It is indeed a happy combination of sweet herbs compounded with just enough spirits to keep it fresh and active in its medicinal effect. Poor, tired mothers, worn out with the cares of a family and household, and suffering from those distressing aches, bearing down pains and nervousness which women only know, revive wonderfully under its strengthening and exhilirating influence. It eases pain, strengthens weakened parts, corrects irregularities, builds up a strong, vigorous body, restores brightness to the eye and color to the cheeks.

CLANTON PRESS

PUBLISHED IN THE INTEREST OF CHILTON COUNTY AND HER PEOPLE

OL 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1912 NO. 8

LETTER FROM SEDGER

Plantersville, Ala.

Editor Press:—Allow me a few words, mostly in reply to "Sly Old Fox." He certainly gave himself the right name; he must assuredly be a sly old fox and keep himself away back in the jungle, otherwise he would have been much better posted than he appears to be.

He first comes out in large head lines and says the treasury is empty and then insinuates that the democrats are to blame for it. Remember, Old Fox, that there is but one democrat on the Board of Commissioners, while there are three republicans on the same board. Of course, we have a democratic Judge, but he has a vote only in case of a tie, which is quite improbable with three republicans to one democrat; therefore if the treasury is empty as he proclaims, who is to blame for it if anyone? It must be the republicans.

Yes, Mr. Littlejohn, tell us who bought that stove pipe and why it was put under the ground? We would all like to know.

And then "Sly Old Fox" says he doesn't understand why some people are so much interested in the welfare of the people of the county. That is just what we democrats are trying to do now; get the people interested in the county; that is just why we are going to elect a democratic ticket in November.

Sly Old Fox says he thinks we (the democrats) have nominated the bitterest ticket he ever saw for the people. Now, I don't think the democrats could have put out a cleaner ticket if they had the entire state from which to make a choice. Unfortunately I am not acquainted with every one of them but what I do know and what I have heard I am confident that it is the purest and best ticket the people of Chilton have ever had.

Now, brother republicans, don't come with mud slinging, but if there is a man on the ticket who is not "O. K," just come out with plain facts and tell us what is wrong, and we will be reasonable enough to listen to facts. Don't fall out with a man because he is a democrat, that is his privilege and yours to be a republican, if you so desire. I am sure I have as good friends in the republican party as in the democratic.

Then Sly Old Fox says we are talking too much negro. I have heard very little talk of the negro except by those who have had to mix with them and are tired or it, or are ashamed of it. But give a man rope enough and he will hang himself, so I had better quit before I hang myself.

Yours truly,
Beat Eight Sedger.

CLANTON IN LINE

AT LAST WE HAVE A TEAM. SOME SWELL SWATTERS.

Last week a few of Clanton's young men arose on their hind legs and determined that the town should get in line with all the other towns of the United States and Canada. They resolved that Clanton should have a baseball team. Hurrah, for these young men! It took a long time to get together but they finally did so. Up to last week we were the only city, town, village, hamlet, settlement, address, habitation, bivouac, aerie, rookery, haunt, resort, retreat, wigwam, suburb or kraal without a sure enough baseball team, and we were taunted, sneered at, ridiculed and maligned because of that fact. But, adieu to those taunts and sneers now, for we have a crack-a-jack team and every one a bright star in his position. Mr H. M. Simpson was elected manager and Mr. Claude Reynolds Captain of the team. The young men are making every preparation to give us some good games these hot days, a nice ground will be maintained, the boys will soon bloom out in right new uniforms and Clanton's name will appear in the daily papers as having one of the best amateur teams in the entire country. The team went to Verbena last Friday and played an exciting game—the score being eight to nine in favor of Verbena. But our boys had not had practice and they were not well organized either. A few more days, however, and Captain Reynolds will have them in good shape.

In speaking of the game at Verbena Friday one of the team stated to the Press man that the Clanton team had three men who would make Ty Cobb turn green with envy and throw Home Run Baker into conniption fits; why do you know, said he, we have three men Sam Kanjutzky, Emmet McKee and Claude Marcus, who were up with the stick five times during the game and they haven't hit the ball yet?

PROF. HICKS ELECTED

SELECTED TO HEAD AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE AT CULLMAN

The many friends of Prof. W. L. Hicks, while regretting to see him leave Clanton, will be glad to know that he has received an appointment which is a substantial promotion over his present position.

In competition with thirty four others, he was elected as the head of the Agricultural College at Cullman, Alabama, and will assume charge of the college almost immediately after the close of the school here.

In addition to having greater opportunities to display his ability as a teacher and disciplinarian, he will have a much larger field of usefulness, in that the ctty of Cullman is considerably larger than Clanton. Besides all this he will have the advantage of state aid in the administration of the affairs of the school.

While his Clanton friends regret to part with him and his estimable family, they none the less rejoiee that his ability has been recognized in a substantial way.

SATURDAY NIGHT'S STORM

ALABAMA SUFFERS GREAT FINANCIAL LOSS; CHILTON CONTRIBUTED ITS PRO-RATA.

Some great musician tried upon one occasion to convey to the mind of man, in music, the fearfulness of a storm; another, less serious, attempted to minify the seriousness of the elements by writing doggerel in wnich he said:

"The lightning flashed,
The thunders roared
And kilt a little pig."

Before our musical soul became atuned we accepted the latter as the best solution of the difficulty, but years of experience has shown us the error of our mental meanderings. Storms are no respecters of persons, things or localities. They visit the palace of the prince with the same frequentness that they promenade around the pig sty; they gather in toll from the wealthy with the same even handed justice that they hold out to the poverty stricken.

Saturday night's storm proved the truthfulness of this statement.

Beginning about eight thirty the elements begun to belch forth thunder, lightning, rain and hail. It was an uncommon mixture and showed how angry the skies were; it was a fearful combination and showed how terrible are her passions.

For more than an hour rain and hail fell, they illumined the sky and the muttering tones of thunder warned the way-farer that war had been declared against fair weather. In Clanton citizens sought shelter early and remained indoors; the streets were deserted, save for an occasional rambler who had no place to hide himself. The storm passed away almost as gently as it came; it left neither destruction or death in its wake here but in other places havoc was wrought.

In Talladega business houses were destroyed; the Temple of Justice was practically demolished homes were unroofed, stock slain, and people made to understand the weakness of mortals. More than a hundred thousand dollars in property was swept away almost within an hour. No lives were lost but the fearfulness of the mental anguish they were made to suffer equals a hundred deaths. Everywhere men who were never before known to pray, were calling upon the name of the Holy Doctor protection and care; women who had desecrated their lives, were kneeling crushed prayer, crushing portion from their profligate sins.

All over the state the ravages of the storm were more or less considerable and the hour was filled with fearful forebodings.

In Chilton county, a county of Godly people, the storm, while severe, was not greatly destructive.

In the eastern part of the county it spent its fury in the destruction of Mr. William Jones' home and the partial demolition of the homes of Messrs Frank Calloway, J. M. Bates, John Ingram and Berry Blalock. Mr. Moses Robinson reports that a large tract of timber belonging to him was practically destroyed, necessitating the moving of a saw-mill to the scene of destruction.

AUDIT OF CITY BOOKS COMPLETED

AN EXTREMELY POOR SHOWING

Last week the Huffman Audit Company filed with the Mayor a report of its findings with reference to the books of the city officials.

It will be recalled by readers of the Press that Mr. Johnson, connected with the Huffman Audit Co., was engaged to go over the books of the city officials and ascertain just how much had been paid into the treasury and how much paid out; it was also the purpose of the audit, so the Press understands, to ascertain what persons had paid taxes and who had not paid, but we understand that this part of the work was not required, nevertheless a startling situation was revealed.

Just how the city has managed to rock along under the circumstances is amazing. Just take a glance at these figures:

For the year 1912 there has been paid into the city treasury for taxes, the stupendous sum of $199.37; not one dime of this vast amount has been paid by a city official, though they have the disbursing of it all.

What they are going to do with the surplus, after all the city debts and the city officials have been paid is problematic, but it may be that they will purchase United States bonds with it.

The Press understands that quite a number of citizens boast of never having paid any taxes (or licenses) and that there are others who, owning thousands of dollars in property (real and personal) manage to get off by paying taxes on a few hundred dollars worth of property.

There should be some adjustment; the poor cannot pay if the rich will not.

The nominal amount of taxes for the city is a little over $2000; the amount already collected, if deducted from the amount due will leave something over EIGHTEEN HUNDRED dollars due the city in taxes; Think of it—EIGHTEEN HUNDRED DOLLARS DUE and less than two hundred paid! Who paid the $199.37? The real poor of the city we doubt not.

MOUNT NEBO

We are glad to say the storm was not as severe in this vicinity as was reported at other places, although there was a great deal of hail and the rain fell heavily for a while.

On account of the severe weather, the Epworth League at this place has not met in several months, but it was the intention to have had a meeting Sunday afternoon but the committee failed to get out a program.

There was quite a large crowd there and the time was spent in singing, conducted by Messrs J. D. Sims and F. Iven Popwell.

There is a large number enrolled as members of the league, and all are requested to come back on the Fourth Sunday afternoon, when it is expected a program will be rendered.

Mrs. P. A. Vance, who has been sick for some time, is rapidly improving.

Miss Pearl Durbin is visiting her sister, Mrs. G. C. Harris this week.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Jones of Clanton were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Headley Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Roper, who has been teaching at Stanton this year, are now with her parents Mr and Mrs J. D. Sims.

Next Sunday is Rally Day.

It will be noticed that but one member of the Grand Jury comes from Precinct number four (Clanton) and not a single member of that body is from the town of Clanton. Every one of them except one are farmers.

HOMER DAVENPORT'S

ETHICS AND WORK.

A lawyer may prosecute thieves for years and then defend thieves for years and then not lose caste. The ethics of his profession permit him to accept service either to prosecnte or defend a criminal. A physician is permitted by the ethics of his profession, and indeed required to attend all who need his services, under reasonable conditions.

A railroad carries all who pay the fare under reasonable conditions, but neither politics, religion nor business has anything to do with it. The artisan works for any who will employ him, under conditions. Hotels receive guests without regard to politics, under conditions.

The newspaper worker and the newspaper artist are put on a different plane by common consent. Even before Homer Davenport's body was buried, there was criticism that he drew pictures ridiculing republican candidates and principle and then being employed by a republican paper he drew pictures ridiculing democratic leaders and democratic principles. The public expects that a newspaper writer and a newspaper artist shall stand by his principles and not be a democrat on democratic papers and a republican on republican papers because he changes employers. An editorial writer loses caste if he writes democratic articles for one paper and because he changes employers writes republican articles the next week.

So Davenport lost caste because he drew as ably for one side as the other. He had a right to sell his work where he pleased, but the public expects more of a man when he does newspaper work, just as it demands certain standards for men in the ministry of the church.

Other professions are not bound by party lines nor by religion, but the newspaper man and the minister stand on a different plane.

Mr. T. H. Pyron, Clanton's up-to-date Journeyman, has removed his [illegible]

Circuit Court In Session

Farmers Taken From Their Crops Without Any Apparent Good Reason.

Several weeks ago certain persons in Clanton, realizing the necessity for Chilton county farmers to be in their fields, and wishing to give them the best advantage of every opportunity, petitioned Judge Pearson to postpone the present term of the Circuit Court. It will be remembered that for almost two months rain fell almost daily and that as a consequence the farmers were greatly behind in their labors. It was argued with the Judge that to postpone the Court would work a hardship upon but few and would be of incalculable benefit to every farmer in the county. It was also stated that the county would save at least two thousand dollars by the postponement of the Court. To this reply was made that the democrats were trying to hide their rascality and extravagance by seeking to have a session of the Grand Jury postponed. It is true that one or two county officials would have been put to some inconvenience, and perhaps to some loss, but the general rule of life—"the greatest good to the greatest number" would assuredly have been carried out had the Court have been postponed. It now remains to be seen whether or not the democrats were trying to hide any "rascality" or seeking to avoid a session of the Grand Jury in order to shelter extravagance. The Grand Jury will soon report and we bet dollars to doughnuts that it will find neither rascality or extravagance. It is rather a strange fact that whenever a man in this county starts out with some praiseworthy motive or is actuated by a desire to serve his fellowman he is invariably charged with having some selfish end in view or is seeking to "grind an axe." He never gets credit for loving his fellowman or with attempting to do something for the benefit of his community or county. There is always someone looking for a "nigger in de woodpile." Because the court officials and the attorneys were not unanimous in their request for a postponement of the Court Judge Pearson denied the petition and called the court to assemble at the time set.

This was proper and right. He acted as any other Judge would have done under similar circumstances. Tho' wishing sincerely to accommodate the farmers, there was no other course open to him; he had to assemble the court. Now let's take a peek:—Monday morning broke bright and clear; the sun has shown every day since then and it has been ideal weather for farming. Most of the farmers are greatly behind in their work and a day now means two day's work—the loss of a day means more than the loss of two days in August. Almost every member of the Grand Jury is a farmer; nine-tenths of the petit jurymen, two thirds of the witnesses are farmers. They will have to remain here at Clanton—most of them for a week—during ideal farming weather, even though they have already lost practically two months because of the rain. But let' peek further into the scene:—Here is a list of the cases docketed up to and including Wednesday of this week. Glance over this list and see what has been done. Twenty-seven jurymen are here drawing pay from the county for services and mileage; eighteen Grand Jurymen are here drawing pay from the county for services and mileage; [illegible] witnesses and court officials, [illegible] to jurors for adjustment. WHY? WHY? WHY?

Now the question naturally arises—If all these cases were settled by consent, dismissed by consent, continued by consent, non-suits taken, and so on and so forth, why was it necessary to bring forty or fifty farmers into Court, take them from their crops to have these things done by CONSENT? Why bring them here from their crops when but three insignificant suits, involving LESS than the cost of the witnesses and court officials, were [illegible] to jurors for adjustment. WHY? WHY? WHY?

Boys don't look like [illegible] trying to [illegible] were trying to [illegible] [illegible]

The Court adjourned sometime before dinner Tuesday—having nothing to do, yet the jurors and witnesses are required to be on hand; the Judge is practically idle for the time being. The only thing grinding is the Grand Jury.

The Chalice of Courage

Being the Story of Certain Persons Who Drank of it and Conquered

A Romance of Colorado

By Cyrus Townsend Brady

Author of "The King and the Man," "The Island of Regeneration," "The Better Part," "Hearts and the Highway," "As the Sparks Fly Upward," etc.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror.

CHAPTER V (Continued).

Suddenly the rolling thunder peals concentrated, balls of fire leaped out of the heavens and struck the mountains where she could actually see them. There were not words to describe the tremendous crashings which seemed to splinter the hills, to be succeeded by brief periods of silence, to be followed by louder and more terrific detonations.

In one of those appalling alternations from sound to silence she heard a human cry—an answering cry to her own? It came from the hills behind her. It must proceed, she thought, from the man. She could not meet that man, although she craved human companionship as never before, she did not want his. She could not bear it. Better the wrath of God, the fury of the tempest.

Heedless of the sharp note of warning, of appeal, in the voice ere it was drowned by another roll of thunder, she plunged on in the darkness. The canon narrowed here; she made her way down the ledges, leaping recklessly from rock to rock, slipping, falling, grazing now one side, now the other, hurling herself forward with white face and bruised body and torn hands and throbbing heart that would fain burst its bonds. There was once an ancient legend, a human creature, menaced by all the furies, pitilessly pursued by every malefic spirit of earth and air; like him this sweet young girl, innocent, lovely, erstwhile happy, fled before the storm.

Then the heavens burst, and the fountains of the great deeps were broken open and with absolute litteralness the floods descended. The bursting clouds, torn asunder by the wild winds, driven by the pent-up lightning within their black and turgid breasts, disburdened themselves. The water came down, as it did of old when God washed the face of the world, in a flood. The narrow of the canon was filled ten, twenty, thirty feet in a moment by the cloud burst. The black water rolled and foamed, surging like the rapids at Niagara.

The body of the girl, utterly unprepared, was caught up in a moment and flung like a bolt from a catapult down the seething sea filled with the trunks of the trees and the debris of the mountains, tossing about humanly in the wild confusion. She struck out strongly swimming more because of the instinct of life than for any other reason. A helpless atom in the boiling flood, growing every minute greater and greater as the angry skies disgorged themselves of their pent-up torrents upon her devoted head.

CHAPTER VI.

Death, Life and the Resurrection.

The man was coming back from one of his rare visits to the settlements. Ahead of him he drove a train of burros who, well broken to their work, followed with docility the wise old leader in the advance. The burros were laden with his supplies for the approaching winter. The season was late, the mountains would soon be impassable on account of the snows, indeed he chose the late season always for his buying in order that he might not be followed, and it was his habit to buy in different places at different years that his repeated and expected presence at one spot might not arouse suspicion.

Intercourse with his fellow men was confined to this yearly visit to a settlement, and even that was of the briefest nature, confined always to the business in hand. Even when busy in the town he pitched a small tent in the open on the outskirts and dwelt apart. No men there in those days pried into the business of other men too closely. Curiosity was neither safe nor necessary. If he aroused transient interest or speculation it soon died away. He vanished into the mountains and as he came no more to that place, he was soon forgotten.

Withdrawing from his fellow men and avoiding their society, this man was never so satisfied as when alone in the silent hills. His heart and spirit rose with every step he made away from the main traveled roads on the more difficult mountain trails.

For several days he journeyed through the mountains, choosing the wildest and most impassable parts for his going. Amid the canons and peaks he threaded his way with unerring accuracy, ascending higher and higher until at last he reached the mountain aerie, the lonely hermitage, where he made his home. There he reveled in his isolation. What had been punishment, expiation, had at last become pleasure.

Civilization was bursting through the hills in every direction, railways were being pushed hither and thither, the precious metals were being discovered at various places and after them came hoards of men and with them—God save the mark—women; but his section of the country had hitherto been unvisited even by hunters, explorers, miners or pleasure seekers. He was glad, as he had grown to love the spot where he had made his home, and he had no wish to be forced, like little Joe, to move on.

Once a man who loved the strife, noble or ignoble, of the madding crowd, he had grown accustomed to silence, habituated to solitude. Winter and summer alike he roamed the mountains, delving into every forest, exploring every hidden canyon, surmounting every inaccessible peak; no storm, no snow, no condition of wind or weather daunted him or stopped him. He had no human companionship by which to try his mettle, but nevertheless over the world of the material which lay about him he was a master as he was a man.

He found some occupation, too, in the following of old Adam's inheritance; during the pleasant months of summer he made such garden as he could. His profession of mining engineer gave him other employment. Round about him lay treasures inestimable, precious metals abounded in the hills. He had located them, tested, analyzed, estimated the wealth that was his for the taking—it was as valueless to him as the doubloons and golden guineas were to Selkirk on his island. Yet the knowledge that it was there gave him an energizing sense of potential power, unconsciously enormously flattering to his self-esteem.

Sometimes he wandered to the extreme verge of the range and on clear days saw far beneath him the smoke of great cities of the plains. He could be master among men as he was a master among mountains, if he chose. On such occasions he laughed cynically, scornfully, yet rarely did he ever give way to such emotions.

A great and terrible sorrow was upon him; cherishing a great passion he had withdrawn himself from the common lot to dwell upon it. From a perverted sense of expiation, in a madness of grief, horror and despair, he had made himself a prisoner to his ideas in the desert of the mountains. Back to his cabin he would hasten, and there surrounded by his living memories—deathless, yet of the dead!—he would recreate the past until dejection drove him abroad on the hills to meet God if not man—or woman. Night-day, sunshine-shadow, heat-cold, storm-calm; these were his life.

Having disburdened his faithful animals of their packs and having seen them safely bestowed for the winter in the corral he had built near the base of the cliff upon which his rude home was situated, he took his rifle one morning for one of those lonely walks across the mountains from which he drew such comfort because he fancied the absence of man conduced to the nearness of God. It was a delusion as old nearly as the Christian religion. Many had made themselves hermits in the past in remorse for sin and for love toward God; this man had buried himself in the wilderness in part for the first of these causes, in other part for the love of woman. In the days of swift and sudden change he had been constant to a remembrance, and abiding in his determination for five swift moving years. The world for him had stopped its progress in one brief moment five years back—the rest was silence. What had happened since then out yonder where people were mated he did not know and he did not greatly care.

In his visits to the settlements he asked no questions, he bought no papers, he manifested no interest in the world; some things in him had died in one fell moment, and there had been, as yet, no resurrection. Yet life, hope and ambition do not die, they are indeed eternal. Resurgam!

Life with its tremendous activities, its awful anxieties, its wearing strains, its rare triumphs, its opportunities for achievement, for service, hope with its illuminations, its encouragements, its expectations, ambition with its stimulus, its force, its power; and greatest of all, love, itself alone—all three were latent in him. In touch with a woman these had gone. Something as powerful and as human must bring them back.

It was against nature that a man endowered as he should so live to himself alone. Some virile pitiable cry in his soul in its ceremonial of battle and struggle, pain, heartache and heartbreak, recollection, some day, in short, burst these grave clothes and wound about him and be once more a man and a master among men, rather than the hermit and the recluse of the solitudes.

He did not allow these thoughts to come into his life; indeed, it is quite likely that he scarcely realized them at all yet; such possibilities did not present themselves to him. Perhaps the man was a little mad that morning, maybe he trembled on the verge of a break—upward, downward, I know not so it be away—unconsciously as he strode along the range that morning.

He had been walking for some hours, and as he grew thirsty it occurred to him to descend to the level of the brook which he heard below him and of which he sometimes caught a flashing glimpse through the trees. He scrambled down the rocks and found himself in a thick grove of pine. Making his way slowly and with great difficulty through the tangle of fallen timber which lay in every direction, the sound of a human voice, the last thing on earth to be expected in that wilderness, smote upon the fearful hollow of his ear.

Any voice or any word then and there would have surprised him, but there was a note of awful terror in this voice, a sound of frightened appeal. The desperation in the cry left him no moment for thought, the demand was for action. The cry was not addressed to him, apparently, but to God, yet it was he who answered—sent doubtless by that Over-looking Power who works in such mysterious ways His wonder to perform!

He leaped over the intervening trees to the edge of the forest where the rapid waters ran. To the right of him rose a huge rock, or cliff, in front of him the canon bent sharply to the north, and beneath him a few rods away a speck of white gleamed above the water of a deep and still pool that he knew.

There was a woman there!

He had time for but the swiftest glance; he had surmised that the voice was not that of a man's voice instantly he heard it, and now he was sure. She stood white breast deep in the water staring ahead of her. The next second he saw what had alarmed her—a Grizzly Bear, the largest, fiercest, most forbidding speciman he had ever seen. There were a few of those monsters still left in the range; he himself had killed several.

The woman had not seen him. He was a silent man by long habit, accustomed to saying nothing, he said nothing now. But instantly aiming from the hip with a wondrous skill and a perfect mastery of the weapon, and indeed it was a short range for so huge a target, he pumped bullet after bullet from his Winchester into the evil monarch of the mountains. The first shot did for him, but making assurance double and treble sure, he fired again and again. Satisfied at last that the bear was dead, and observing that he had fallen upon the other side of the basin, he [illegible] until he came [illegible] shivering in the water, whose sensation so far as a mere man could, he thoroughly understood and appreciated, and whose modesty he fain would spare, having not forgotten to be a gentleman in five years of his own society—high test of quality, that.

He climbed out upon the bank, uprooted a small tree, rolled the bear clear of the heap of woman's clothing and marched straight ahead of him up the canon and around the bend.

Thereafter, being a man, he did not faint or fall, but completely unnerved he leaned against the canon wall, dropped his gun at his feet and stood there trembling mightily, sweat bedewing his forehead, and the sweat had not come from his exertions. In one moment the whole even tenor of his life was changed. The one glimpse he had got of those white shoulders, that pallid face, that golden head raised from the water, had swept him back five years. He had seen once more in the solitude a woman.

Other women he had seen at a distance and avoided in his yearly visits to the settlements. Of course, these had passed him by remotely, but here he was brought in touch intimately with humanity. He who had taken life had saved it. A woman had sent him forth; was a woman to call him back?

He cursed himself for his weakness. He shut his eyes and summoned other memories. How long he stood there he could not have told. He was fighting a battle and it seemed to him at last that he triumphed. Presently the consciousness came to him that perhaps he had no right to stand there idle; it may be that the woman needed him; perhaps she had fainted in the water; perhaps—. He turned toward the bend which concealed him from her and then he stopped. Had he any right to intrude upon her privacy? He must of necessity be an unwelcome visitor to her; he had surprised her at a frightful disadvantage, he knew instinctively, although the fault was none of his, although he had saved her life thereby, that she would hold him and him alone responsible for the outrage to her modesty, and although he had seen little at first glance and had resolutely kept his eyes away, the mere consciousness of her absolute helplessness appealed to him—to what was best and noblest in him, too. He must go to her; yet stay, she might not yet be clothed, in which event—. But no, she must be dressed, or dead, by this time, and in either case he would have a duty to discharge.

It devolved upon him to make sure of her safety; he was in a certain sense responsible for it, until she got back to her friends, wherever they might be; but he persuaded himself that otherwise he did not want to see her again, that he did not wish to know anything about her future; that he did not care whether it was well or ill with her; and it was only stern obligation which drove him [illegible] head and [illegible] to him. He was prepared to withdraw instantly should circumstances warrant, and he was careful so to conceal himself as to give no possible opportunity for her to discover his scrutiny.

With a beating heart and eager eyes he searched the spot. There lay the bear and a little distance away prone on the grass, clothed but whether in her right mind or not he could not tell, lay the woman. For a moment as he bent a concentrated, eager gaze upon her he thought she might have fainted or that she might have died. In any event he reflected that she had strength and nerve and will to have dressed herself before either of these things happened. She lay motionless under his gaze for so long that he finally made up his mind that common humanity required him to go to her assistance.

He rose to his feet on the instant and saw the woman also lift herself from the grass as if moved by a similar impulse. In his intense preoccupation he had forgot to observe the signs of the times. A sense of the overcast sky came to him suddenly as it did to her, but with a difference. He knew what was about to happen, his experience told him much more as to the awful potentialities of the tempest than she could possibly imagine. She must be warned at once, she must leave the canon and get up on the higher ground without delay. His duty was plain and yet he did it not. He could not. The pressure upon him was not yet strong enough.

A half dozen times as he watched her deliberately sitting there eating, he opened his mouth to cry to her, yet he could not bring himself to it. A strange timidity oppressed him; halted him, held him back. A man cannot stay away five years from men and women and be himself with them in the twinkling of an eye. And when to that instinctive and acquired reluctance against which he struggled in vain, he added the assurance that whatever his message he would be unwelcome on account of what had gone before; he could not force himself to go to her or even to call to her, not yet. He would keep her under surveillance, however, and if the worst came he could intervene in time to rescue her. He counted without his cost, his usual judgment bewildered. So he followed her through the trees and down the bank.

Now he was so engrossed in her and so agitated that his caution slept, his experience was forgotten. The storm in his own breast was so great that it overshadowed the storm brewing above. Her way was easier than his and he had fallen some distance behind when suddenly there rushed upon him the fact that a frightful and unlooked for cloudburst was about to occur above their heads. A lightning flash and a thunder clap at last arrested his attention. Then, but not until then, he flung everything to the winds and amid the sullen and almost continuous peals of thunder he sent cry after cry toward her which were lost in the tremendous diapason of sound that echoed and re-echoed through the rifts of the mountains.

"Wait," he cried again and again. "Come up higher. Get out of the canon. You'll be drowned."

But he had waited too long. The storm had developed too rapidly; she was too far ahead of and beneath him. She heard nothing but the sound of a voice, shrill, menacing, fraught with terror for her, not a word distinguishable; scarcely to her disturbed soul even a human voice, it seemed like the wierd cry of some wild spirit of the storm. It sounded to her overwrought nerves so utterly inhuman that she only ran the faster.

The canon swerved and then doubled back, but he knew its direction. Losing sight of her for the moment he plunged straight ahead through the trees, cutting off the bend, leaping with superhuman agility and strength over rocks and logs until he reached a point where the rift narrowed between two walls and ran deeply. There and then the heavens opened and the floods came and beat into the open maw of that vast crevice and filled it in an instant.

As the deluge came roaring down, bearing onward the sweepings and scourings of the mountains, he caught a glimpse of her white desperate face rising, falling, now disappearing, now coming into view again, in the foamy midst of the torrent. He ran to the cliff bank and throwing aside his gun he scrambled down the wall to a certain shelf of the rock over which the rising water broke thinly. Ordinarily it was twenty feet above the creek bed. Bracing himself against a jagged projection he waited praying. The canon was here so narrow that he could have leaped to the other side and yet it was too narrow for him to reach her if the water did not sweep her [illegible] It was all done in a second. Foreshadow a projection on [illegible] with fierce the [illegible] of the torrent toward him and with it came the woman.

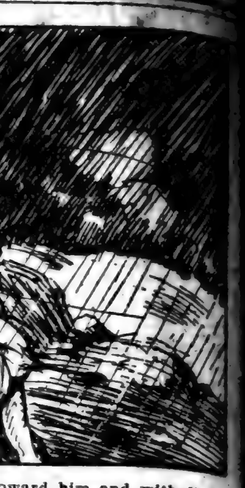
She was almost spent. She had been struck by a log upheaved by some mighty wave, her hands were moving feebly, her eyes were closed, she was drowning, dying, but indomitably battling on. He stooped down and as a surge lifted her, he threw his arm around her waist and then he braced himself against the rock to sustain the full thrust of the mighty flood. As he seized her she gave way suddenly, as if after having done all that she could there was now nothing left but to trust herself to his hand and God's. She hung a dead weight on his arm in the ravening waters which dragged and tore at her madly.

He was a man of giant strength, but the struggle bade fair to be too much even for him. It seemed as if the mountain behind him was giving way. He set his teeth, he tried desperately to hold on, he thrust out his right hand, holding her with the other one, and clawed at the dripping rock in vain. In a moment the torrent mastered him and when it did so it seized him with fury and threw him like a stone from a sling into the seething vortex of the mid-stream. But in all this he did not, or would not, release her.

Such was the swiftness of the motion with which they were swept downward that he had little need to swim, his only effort was to keep his head above water and to keep from being dashed against the logs that tumbled end over end or whirled sideways, or were jammed into clusters only to burst out on every hand. He struggled furiously to keep himself from being overwhelmed in the seething madness, and what was harder, to keep the lifeless woman in his arms from being stricken or wrenched away. He knew that below the narrows where the canon widened the water would subside, the awful fury of the rain would presently cease. If he could steer clear of the rocks in the broad he might win to land with her.

The chances against him were thousands to nothing. But what are chances in the eyes of God! The man in his solitude had not forgotten to pray, his habits stood him in good stead now. He petitioned shortly, brokenly, in brief unspoken words as he battled through the long dragging seconds.

Fighting, clinging, struggling, praying, he was swept on. Heavier and heavier the woman dragged in an unconscious heap. It would have been easier for him if he had let her go; she would never know and he could then escape. The idea never once occurred to him. He had indeed withdrawn from his kind, but when one depended upon him all the old appeal of weak humanity awoke quick response in the bosom of the strong. He would die with the stranger rather than yield her to the torrent or admit himself beaten and give up the fight. So the conscious and the unconscious struggled through the narrow of the canon.



Presently with the rush and hurl of a bullet from the mouth of a gun, they found themselves in a shallow lake through which the waters still rushed mightily, breaking over rocks, digging away shallow-rooted trees, leaping, biting, snarling, tearing at the big walls spread away on either side. He had husbanded some of his strength for this final effort, this last chance of escape. Below them at the other end of this open the walls came together again. There the descent was sharper than before and the water ran to the opening with racing speed. Once again in the torrent and they would be swept to death in spite of all.

Shifting his grasp to the woman's hair, now unbound, he held her with one hand and swam hard with the other. The current still ran swiftly but with no gigantic upheaving waves as before. It was more easy to avoid floating timber and debris, and on one side where the ground sloped somewhat gently the quick water flowed more slowly. He struck out desperately for it, forcing himself away from the main stream into the shallows and ever dragging the woman. What it hours or minutes or seconds after that he gained the battle and neared the shore at the lowest edge?

SUFFERED ALL NIGHT LONG

Painful Experience of Mrs. Stephens. Husband Tries in Vain to Obtain Relief.

Pontotoc, Miss.—"All night long," says Mrs. P. G. Stephens, of this place, "I would suffer with my back, and I had such dragging down pains I could not stand it to walk or ride, for it would put me in bed.

My health had been bad for two years. My husband got the best doctors that he knew, but their medicine did me no good.

I used Cardui, the woman's tonic, and it put me on my feet again. I am feeling as well as I did when I was 16 years old.

I used about 7 bottles in all, and Cardui has helped me more than anything that I used.

I took lots of other medicines, but they did me no good.

As long as I live, I won't be without Cardui in the house."

As a remedy for weak, tired, worn-out women, who suffer from any of the aches and pains caused by womanly troubles, Cardui has been proven safe and reliable.

Composed of gentle-acting, herb ingredients, its action is mild and natural, and it has no bad after-effects. It is therefore harmless for young or old.

It has helped others, and should certainly help you, too.

Try it.

FOUGHT HIS WAY TO FREEDOM

The Emperor of Rome Admired the Courage and Pluck of Caractacus.

One of the most unique captives ever brought home to Rome by Julius Caesar was Caractacus of the early Britons. This great chief lost everything in fighting to drive out the Romans and was taken prisoner with his wife and children. When brought before the Roman emperor the proud ruler of the primitive people never showed the least fear. His arms were chained, and the emperor roared to try to frighten Caractacus, but the brave chief never so much as quaked. Instead he looked the monarch in the eye and said:

"You fight to gain the whole world and to make everybody your slaves. I fought to keep my own land and for freedom."

The great courage the chief showed finally touched the heart of the emperor, and the ruler of the Romans resolved to see if Caractacus would be as brave when facing warriors. On one of the great holidays in Rome Caractacus was taken to the great open-air amphitheater where the populace gathered. He was told that if he could defeat the bold knight that would be sent against him he could go back to his home. Caractacus fought as he never had before; for something sweeter than his life was at stake—that of his wife and children. Justice seemed to have tempered the metal of his weapons, and when he struck the strong armor of his antagonist gave way before his fearful blows. The result was that Caractacus and his family returned to Britain and to happiness.

All He Wanted Was Just Plain Eggs.

A youth entered one of the "ham-and-row" cafes on Grand avenue and ordered eggs. "Up or over?" asked the man behind the counter. "I just want eggs," replied the prospective diner. "But do you want them up or over?" repeated the waiter, and again the guest asserted that he desired "only eggs." The third time the party of the second part insisted on his query, whereupon the patron, with a sigh of despair, said "I guess I'll take a steak."—Kansas City Star.

Not In Any Way Desirable.

"Do those people who moved into the flat across the hall seem to be desirable neighbors?" asked the man.

"No," replied the woman. "I watched everything that came out of the moving van. They haven't a thing that we would care to borrow."

Calculation.

"Going to make garden?"

"I dunno," replied the man who always looks discouraged. "I'm busy now figuring up how many tons of letters I'll have to raise to pay for the spade and the rake and the rest of the outfit."

Gera, Reuss-Schleiz, Germany.—Prince Henry XLIII of Reuss (Branche Cadette), died from scarlet fever. He was 18 years old and the oldest son of the hereditary Prince Henry XXXVII, who is regent of both the Reusses.

Annapolis.—Work was started on the crypt that will be the final resting place of the remains of John Paul Jones. The crypt, for which Congress made an appropriation of $75,000, is to be constructed in the basement of the chapel of the Naval academy. It will be built of marble and granite.

Springfield, Ill.—Miners in the Illinois fields voted by a majority of almost 13,000 votes, to accept the wage agreement arranged at the Peoria conference. An increase of 5.55 per cent in the day wages, and tonnage rates is granted the miners in the agreement, which is for two years.

Cheyenne, Wyo.—The democratic state convention unanimously adopted the majority report of the committee on resolutions by which Wyoming's six delegates to the national convention are instructed to vote for Champ Clark "as long as there is a possibility of his nomination."

Greensboro, N. C.—Delegates to the republican national convention from the Second, Tenth and Eighth districts were chosen and instructed for Roosevelt.

Washington.—Tuberculosis of the spine is not too remote an effect of negligence of an employer to justify a jury in awarding damage for negligent injury under the federal employers liability law to an employe. Such was the decision of the supreme court.

Washington.—Many million dollars in taxes were lost by Oklahoma by a decision of the supreme court of the United States. This tribunal held that the state cannot tax land allotted to Indians less than twenty-five years.

TEN YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Continual Pain, Dizziness and Nervousness Caused by Weakened Kidneys.

Mrs. Elizabeth Weiss, 2442 North Seventh St., Philadelphia, Pa., says: "From morning until night I underwent tortures. My head throbbed and I could scarcely stay on my feet from dizziness. My back ached as though it would break and I was so nervous I cried. I doctored but grew no better and the outlook was dark, indeed. Yet relief was to come and I can always thank Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me and for over a year I have had no suffering from my kidneys."

Tommy (aged eight)—Say, papa, what is the difference between an artisan and an artist?

Papa—One eats regularly and the other doesn't.

Surgeon In Ancient Times.

High honorariums were paid surgeons in ancient times. When Darfus, the son of Hystaspes, sprained his foot Damocedes was called in, another surgeon of renown having failed to effect a cure. Damocedes was successful, and the king took him to his harem and introduced the doctor to the ladies of the court. The ladies filled a vase of gold with money and precious pearls, which a eunuch was ordered to carry to the doctor. The eunuch let fall the vase, and the careful historian tells us that slaves gathered up the pearls.

Milky Way Causes Glaciers.

Another suggested cause of glacial periods is that they have been due to the shifting of the milky way, such as is known to have occurred. Assuming that much of the earth's heat comes from the stars, Dr. Rudolf Spitaler finds that the change of position in relation to the milky way might have given a different distribution of temperature from that existing at the present time. The stars are not only crowded in the region of the milky way, but many of them are of the hottest type.

MRS. SELBY AND PRIZE BABY

"I have always used Cuticura Soap and no other for my baby and he has never had a sore of any kind. He does not even chafe as most babies do. I feel sure that it is all owing to Cuticura Soap, for he is fine and healthy, and when five months old, won a prize in a baby contest. It makes my heart ache to go into so many homes and see a sweet-faced baby with the whole top of its head a solid mass of scurf, caused by poor soap. I always recommend Cuticura, and nine times out of ten the next time I see the mother she says: 'Oh! I am so glad you told me of Cuticura.'" (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redondo Beach, California, Jan. 15, 1911.

Before Allowing an Operation

Please Read These Two Letters.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before. Then after all that suffering Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored her health.

HERE IS HER OWN STATEMENT.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement—I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for several months without much relief, and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. To-day I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise every woman who is afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Mich.

"THERE NEVER WAS A WORSE CASE."

Rockport, Ind.—"There never was a worse case of women's ills than mine, and I cannot begin to tell you what I suffered. For over two years I was not able to do anything. I was in bed for a month and the doctor said nothing but an operation would cure me. My father suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so to please him I took it, and I improved wonderfully, so I am able to travel, ride horseback, take long rides and never feel any ill effects from it. I can only ask other suffering women to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation."—Mrs. MARGARET MEREDITH, R. F. D. No. 3, Rockport, Ind.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine, made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body * * * * *." He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

MRS. MURREN.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes MRS. G. M. MURREN, of Corona, Calif. "Had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat as it made me worse. Whenever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint—it hurt so. I grew very thin and weak from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it, and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grew strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat everything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce. He has my undying gratitude."

Talladega, nestling in the valley and by mountain cliffs, thought herself safe from the destructive influences of a storm, but old dame Nature has taught her a severe lesson—she knows better now.

The Press received the other day a mail sack of assorted vegetable seed from Congressman Blackmon for distribution. Those who wish seed for garden planting can get a supply by calling upon the Press man, but dont wait too long, they may be gone.

Don't forget the election to be held in June to determine if the school tax shall be continued. By all means get it out of your mind that this is a political matter, either democratic or republican. It is for the schools and the school children of the county It has been levied for the past six years and should be continued.

The Roosevelt convention in Birmingham last Saturday reminds one of the old republican conventions of the Black belt before the negro was disfranchised. They were there in numbers, and hobnobling with the white delegates to beat the band. But that was to have been expected; Taft had captured the "regular" convention —some weeks ago—and Roosevelt had to get up a counter convention of some sort; it was necessary for him to have negroes as delegates in order to fill out his delegations. The convention was unanimous for Roosevelt, but on other mattees it resembled the proverbial "rough house." Messrs Moses Killgore, E. E. Calloway, Arkie Mahan, J. T. Hinton and others of this county attended, but not as delegates, mind you; oh my no, they just went up to view the landscape o'er and to count the burrs.

MASONIC RESOLUTIONS

To the Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren of Amand Lodge, No. 250, A. F. & A. M.

We, your Committee, appointed to draft resolutions upon the death of Bro. Ellet E. Estes, beg leave to submit the following:

Whereas, on the 16th day of April, 1912, our beloved brother, Ellet E. Estes, was called from this earthly home to that home beyond where no traveler ever returns and pain and sorrow are no more. Brother Estes was born in Tripp county, Georgia, Nov. 30th, 1837, later removing to Coosa county, Alabama, then to Chilton county, and on December 23rd, 1882, was initiated into the mysteries of Masonry in Amand Lodge No. 250, and was elected Worshipful Master soon thereafter and served in that capacity for many years, always loyal to the fraternity, submissive to his fellowman and obedient to his Creator. Bro. Estes lived a long and useful life, having passed his 74th mile post and nearing his 75th, when he was called to join that Celestial Lodge Above not made with hands.

And whereas, we deeply sympathize with the bereaved family and his many friends, but can only point them to Him who doeth all things well, and while we regret the loss of a member of our Lodge, we bow in submission to the Great Architect Above, who can do and none can hinder; trusting to strike hands again where parting is no more.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of the county papers, a copy to the bereaved family and a copy spread upon the minutes of this Lodge.

Respectfully submitted,
J. L. Dupree
J. T. Rockett
R. J. Eiland
Committee.

MR. W. HAM FOSHEE

RETURNS SINCERE THANKS.

Maplesville, Ala., April 25.
Editor Press:—

Please allow me space to thank the democratic voters of the county for the loyal support given me during the recent primary.

I wish to say that I think just as much of those who did not support me as I ever did. Those who voted for Mr. W. O. Perry selected as good a man as Chilton county ever had and if he had received thenomination I would have beenas enthusiastically active for him as I feel that he will be for the entire ticket in November.

I expect to do all within my power to assist in the election of the ticket next November; we have an exceptionally strong ticket this year and can go before the people with no apology for our candidates.

I sincerely trust that those who did not support me in the primary will give the entire ticket their loyal support in November.

Thanking one and all for the support given me, and promising, when elected, to discharge my duties to the best interests of Chilton county and without fear or favor, I am,

Sincerely,
W. Ham Foshee.

AN OFFER UNSURPASSED

IN NEWSPAPER HISTORY HERE.

We have made special arrangements with Norman E. Mack, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee and Publisher of the "NATIONAL MONTHLY" to furnish that splendid magazine in connection with the Press, at the exceptionally low price of one dollar and twenty five cents ($1.25) per year. Mr. Mack, occupying the place that he does as Chairman of the National Committee, is in position to gain all the "inside" secrets of both the great political parties; he is an able writer himself and has a corps of able writers and contributors on his publication. It is without doubt the best authority on democratic principles, democratic practices and democratic situations publihed in the entire country. A constant reader of this magazine cannot help but keep posted as to the movements of the two great contending parties.

This offer holds good but for a short time; if you are already a subscriber to the Press come in and pay up and get the NATIONAL along with the Press; if you are not a subscriber now is the time to "get busy" for surely you want to keep up with local and national affairs—this can be done only by reading the National and the Press. Remember the price of the two for a short time only is $1.25. The regular price for each is one dollar per year—so that you get both for the price of one, plus twenty five cents.

If you do not care for the Press but want the National, then send the Press to some friend and secure this valuable offer; if you want the Press but not the National, then send it to some friend —he will welcome it

Facts Relative to the Citizenship of Chilton County.

A few days ago one of the most prominent business men of this county made the remark that the people of Chilton were good providers for their families and that as a whole they were a very contented lot. This is undoubtedly a true statement. This county is filled with prosperous people. People who do not mind hard work and who enjoy their achievements. You are prosperous now and deserve it for you have worked hard for that prosperity. However when you study statistics and listen to men who have traveled and who have seen poverty surrounding people of other counties you must acknowledge that we should each day make an effort to strengthen our conditions.

When we consider that 97 out of every 100 people in the United States at the age of 65 are dependent on some relative or town for at least a portion of their support; when carefully compiled statistics prove that 30 per cent of all old people are actually paupers; when the record of business failures tell us that only 2 out of every 100 men meet with any considerable success in business; we naturally feel uneasy and are prone to ask the question, "Why?" Some of your best and most prominent citizens have realized "Why" and they have taken the precaution to put their money in something that is absolutely safe; something that has no element of chance attached to it; something that has done more for the families of both the poor and rich than any other known thing. They have thought of the future welfare of their loved ones; they know how very hard it would be for the hard-worked wife or the frail little ones to keep things humming along in the same sweet way should Daddy fail to come home with his salary or with money made by the sweat of his brow. Some of your most successful business men; men whom you honor and trust and to whom you oftimes go for advice have put their seal of approval upon an investment, combined with protection, which is being offered to you good people right here in your midst. Think for a moment! Have you looked into the future and figured on the happiness of your good wife and your trusting children? You should think about this because you owe it to yourself, to your family and to your county. Who is to furnish your loved ones the necessities of life? You may die at any time; we all have to go sometime and it is imperative that we make arrangements for the comfort of those dependent on us, for when the salary has ceased our earning capacity is no more and there is no one who can take your place. The Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., one of the oldest and most trusted Insurance Companies in the world; one whose Policies at average ages can be bought for ten cents a day; one whose policy conditions are liberal because of loan and cash values paid up and extended values at end of second year; one whose big annual dividends begin reducing the premium the second year; a Company that has on its books over $125,000.00 Life Insurance on some of your most enviable citizens, offers to every citizen of Chilton county who is eligible to life insurance the best, and the safest way to provide for your families after you are gone.

You should not hesitate, delays are always dangerous, get busy now and see J. Renfroe Mullins, Clanton, Ala., C. C. Pitts, Jemison, Ala., or Floyd B. Fowell of Powell & Co., State Managers of the Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Company, Montgomery, Alabama.

CLANTON'S OPPORTUNTY

CONCERT OF ACTION WILL LOCATE A LARGE MANUFACTURING PLANT.

An opportunity for Clanton's citizens to show their enterprise and town pride is to be given Friday night, May 17th, at the Court House. A meeting of the citizens of the town who are interested in its progress and development is called for eight o'clock at that place to take action leading up to the securing of a large manufacturing enterprise. Heretofore our citizens have been slow to take advantage of such opportunities, but the Press indulges the hope that this time will prove an exception to the rule.

Those behind the manufacturing enterprise are anxious to come to Clanton, they will come if proper inducements are offered them; they ask but little. they expect but little. Will Clanton unbutton herself for once and do the right thing or will she continue to live in a quart cup? That's the question. This enterprise, if located here, will bring thousands of dollars to our town, will mean another weekly payroll whose recipients will spend their cash among our merchants; will bring a class of residents here who will assist largely in building the town and attracting other enterprises. What say the business men of Clanton? Do you want the town to grow? Are you satisfied to stand still? Do you want others to do the work and you reap the benefit? Show where you stand and what you propose to do by attending the meeting Friday night. The opportunity is ours, will we grasp it? That's the question. How will YOU answer?

Mr. J. T. Hinton of Jemison was here Saturday to take the train for Birmingham; he wanted to see the "burrs" in the "Teddy" convention and did see them to his own satisfaction. While here he said "Let the Press come to my address."

Mr. Robinson will remain at the Springs several weeks, taking baths. His many friends hope that he will return in the course of a few weeks fully restored to health.

GREAT CUT PRICE SALE

EQUAL TO THE 8th WONDER

Opens May 18th at 8 O'clock a. m. Railroad Fare Free

This Sale will break all former attempts at price cutting in Maplesville. No fair minded person can afford to miss this opportunity

This unusual rainy season has proved a very detrimental factor to the business interest of this section and from a personal standpoint we tell you frankly that ours in particular has felt the set back very keenly. We bought heavily and continued to buy until at present we have the best selected stock in our section. New, crisp, Merchandise, snappy styles and attractive value, but our better judgment tells us that to carry this stock over would be a big loss, to say at least "bad business," so we have instituted a systematic and general cut in prices that will be head and shoulders ahead of any former attempt on our part and that is certainly saying something for we hold the record and are the original price cutters and sale givers of our section. During this sale we will simply ignore cost price and give you the treat of your life. Your eyes have never beheld such bargains as await you at this sale. Now do not be skeptical but just hitch right up and come, for first choice will mean something here. Listen to us, we certainly intend to do big things this time. An old adage, "a burned child dreads the fire." We have been caught before with too much stock to carry over, so this time while it is new and fresh we will and most emphatically turn loose. See the prices, Come quick..

AWAKE FOR 30 YEARS

Man's Eyes Open Since Stricken With Sorrow.

Spends His Nights at Work and Complains of No Weariness—Furnishes Puzzle Physicians Cannot Solve.

Trenton, N. J.—Having been without sleep for thirty years, Albert E Herpin, a Trenton man, at last complains of feeling weary. Mentally he experiences no weariness, but he says he is physically weak and believes a nap of only five minutes' duration would give him new life. Physicians who have been following the sleepless wonder's case for years say he is merely suffering from overwork, and do not agree with the theory that so many years of wakefulness has caused his physical health to fail.

Since the power of sleep left him Herpin has never before expressed a desire to even doze. He has shown no lassitude day or night. The only rest he gets is when he sits in a comfortable chair for several hours each night, but he does not even then close his eyes.

His sleeplessness has brought him considerable money, as he thought out inventions during some of his resting periods that proved successful. He works every day, excepting Sunday, in a local pottery, and he spends most of the night working out inventions or decorating pottery for friends.

Herpin is always in good spirits and when he reports to his employers in the morning he seems as fresh as any of the other workmen who had hours of sound sleep. Those who work with the sleepless man assert that he keeps constantly busy and exhibits not the slightest symptoms of drowsiness. The only complaint that Herpin has made because of his condition is that he becomes lonely frequently at night when he has nothing to keep him busy.

Herpin lost his ability to sleep after the death of his wife, 30 years ago. He was then 30 years old. He consulted physicians, who studied his strange condition, but who were unable to help him. From time to time he has been secretly watched at night. The medical men who undertook this task are convinced the man has not slept a moment since first attacked by the strange malady from which he is believed to be suffering.

Experts from all parts of the United States have visited Herpin's home and studied his condition and have gone away convinced that he has been awake longer than any man in the world. Herpin enjoys the visits of these experts, as many of them remain with him for nights. He says he never believes he will sleep again.

GERM IS SLAIN BY HOT AIR

French Physician Discovers New Method Which May Revolutionize Treatment.

Paris.—A remarkable new treatment of diphtheria has just been communicated by the distinguished physician, Robert Rendu, to the Lyons Medical association.

In the course of his experiments with the bacilli of this disease Dr. Rendu found that they were extremely sensitive to heat, and he was able to kill them in fifteen minutes at a temperature of 50 degrees centigrade (122 degrees Fahrenheit) or in one minute at 80 degrees (176 degrees Fahrenheit).

To apply such heat to the mucous membrane in the throat in which diphtheria microbes congregate the inhalation of hot air seemed a possible method, and in experiments with himself the investigator found to his own surprise that he was able without any difficulty to inhale air at 100 degrees or the boiling point (212 degrees Fahrenheit) for two minutes at a time.

Cases in which this treatment has already been tried on diphtheritic patients are stated to be completely successful, but some doubts exist as to the hot air or to the serums, applied at the same time.

BACHELORS FORM NEW CLUB

Vancouver Men Organize to Promote Wife-Seeking Activity Among Members.

Vancouver, Wash.—Bachelors of Vancouver have organized a club for the sole purpose of obtaining wives. The formation and election of officers occurred Thursday evening.

The head of the organization, Clement Scott, a prominent business man, says that all love-sick maidens of various and uncertain ages may put in their bids for the would-be benedicts, and they will receive the prompt attention of the board, who will act upon them.

Soothes His Conscience.

Washington.—A conscience-troubled citizen of Shepherdstown, W. Va., forty years old, who used some canceled postage stamps, has sent ten cents to the treasury to pay the debt. He wrote Secretary MacVeagh that while he used only three cancelled two-cent stamps, he was sending ten cents to "make sure."

Ball Breaks Man's Nose.

Venice, Cal.—Oscar Hildinger dauntlessly told Miss Ruby Dunn that he never saw a girl who could throw a baseball hard. The girl threw it. Dunn wears a broken nose.

SEVILLE HOUSES MAY FALL

Authorities Require 4,000 Inmates to Vacate and They Are Homeless—Collapse of School Buildings.

Madrid.—An inquiry provoked by the recent collapse of a school building at Seville has revealed the fact that there is imminent danger of 411 houses in that city tumbling down in like manner. They have been vacated, with the result that some four thousand people are homeless.

The collapse of the schoolhouse, which cost the lives of a master, an old woman and several youngsters, aroused great public feeling and prompted the civil governor to order an official investigation by the municipal architects.

Their report shows that 411 houses are in such a dilapidated condition as to be absolutely dangerous to the inhabitants.

When the tenants were served with a notice to move at once, very few could comply with the order, being unable to find other lodgings at anything like the same rent. They accordingly stopped where they were until the police expelled them, putting four thousand people into the streets. The majority of those thus evicted found shelter in the houses of relatives, friends and neighbors.

Another problem which then faced the authorities was what to do with the furniture and goods of these. The alcalde eventually settled the matter by ordering all the furniture to be deposited in the Plaza de Toros. So the bull ring is now packed with wardrobes, tables, desks, chairs and so on. Every family has its separate allotment, and the whole is guarded by the police.

Meanwhile, in cases where their condition permits, the houses are being repaired.

SONGS CURING CRAZED MAN

Effect of Melodious Rendition of Simple Hymns Astonishes Los Angeles Physicians.

Los Angeles.—A girl's sweet singing is calming into sanity in the county hospital here the mind of a man demented. Where drastic medical treatment has been powerless to effect a cure, her melodious rendition of simple hymns and pastoral melodies is producing striking mental improvement.

The girl, a young nurse, is no coloratura soprano, nor, perhaps, could she tell C from G on a musical staff, but her songs are songs of sympathy, and for more than a week have been the only influence that has controlled the patient.

May Flynn is the nurse, a recent recruit at the county hospital, and Stephen S. Stephens the man, who, out for a brain jangled by wild delusions, is a fine specimen of the American workman.

Physicians and internes watching the effect of the girl's voice on the patient, declare that she holds out the only hope of his recovery.

CHINA HONORS YALE MAN

Chung Mun Yew Made Minister to United States by Oriental Republic.

New York.—Chung Mun Yew, the old Yale coxswain, has been appointed minister of the Chinese republic to the United States, according to a Shanghai dispatch to the Herald. Chung entered Yale in 1883, after preliminary studies in the Hartford (Conn.) public schools, and made the crew in the freshman year, steering the Yale shell to victory against Harvard. He's elected to the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, the only one of his race to be so honored.

He was called back to China before completing his studies, but returned to this country some years later and acted as an interpreter at the legation in Washington when Dr. Wu Ting-fang was minister.

Previous reports have been to the effect that the post at Washington would be raised to an embassy and that Dr. Wu would be sent here as ambassador.

TO DIG FOR MONEY

Massachusetts Hermit Believed to Have Hidden Fortune.

Administrator of Eccentric Man's Estate Warns Private Treasure Seekers From Property—Will Make Thorough Search.

Great Barrington, Mass.—When Nelson Noteware, an eccentric hermit of Sheffield, died in his mountain hut last winter, a report spread that he had buried money in various places on his premises, and several citizens of Sheffield announced that as soon as the frost was out of the ground they would dig up every foot of the ground to search for it. Thereupon Frank J. Davis, administrator of the estate, published in a local newspaper a notice "that all persons are forbidden trespassing on the premises of the estate of Nelson Noteware."

Being asked if he believed there was money buried on the Noteware property, Mr. Davis said:

"I am inclined to think there is. When Mr. Noteware was taken sick he sent for me to take care of him. One day some money was wanted and he told me to go to a certain part of the room and I would find a box containing money. I did so, but could find nothing. Then, working himself along from his chair to the spot he had indicated, from a lot of old cans and kettles he dug out a tin box, such as baking powder is put up in, full of silver coins. On another occasion he told me to look beneath a certain jar for the money. I did so, but could find nothing. Then he went to the spot and shoved the jar aside and, lifting up a board, dug from the ground a good-sized tin box crammed ful of folded bank bills and silver pieces.

"While he was yet able to get about the place, but not strong enough to work, he never wanted me nor anybody to go to a certain part of the premises that he was in the habit of visiting frequently. I have always believed that it was because he had money buried in that vicinity. When the weather becomes settled I shall make a systematic search."

BROTHERS JAILED BY THIRD

Los Angeles Teller Is Pursued and Arrested, Accused of Embezzling $5,000.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Merril P. Level, a teller in the All Day and Night bank here, and his younger brother, Ellis, are in jail here whether they were brought from St. Louis through the efforts of their half-brother, Policeman John Level.

Merril and Ellis both are charged with embezzlement of $5,000. Besides this, Merrill says, Ellis "double-crossed" him and kept the money. Merril says only $2,600 was taken and of this amount $1,000 has been recovered by the police from the younger brother.

April 9, he said, he passed to his brother Ellis, through the window of his cage, $2,600 in a package. He then told officers of the bank a sneak thief had stolen the money while he was out of the cage for a moment.

Ellis ran away to St. Louis with the money, and Merril, obtaining leave of absence by saying that his mother was ill, followed him. John, the half brother, followed both and caught Merril. He trailed Ellis back here. Each brother blames the other.

HIS RABBIT FOOT WAS LUCKY

Engineer Receives No Longer to Be Superstitious, and Is Robbed of His Valuables.

Darby, Pa.—After carrying the hind foot of a graveyard rabbit for several years as an omen of good luck George Darby and the engineer of Verlenden's mill discarded it as a piece of superstition. A few minutes later he discovered that some one had robbed him of his gold watch and chain, a diamond ring valued at $100, $1.50 in money and other valuables.

Bradley had his valuables in the pockets of his vest, which was hanging in the closet in the engine room. Two strangers called in the office of the mill and asked to see the engineer, and after he had talked to them a few minutes concerning a position Bradley hurried to the engine room, when he discovered his loss.

It is supposed by Chief of Police Smith that a third man was in the game.

HASTY MAN GETS "BENDS"

Why Kansas City Worker Was Put in Airtight Compartment Seven Hours.

Kansas City, Mo.—Undergoing treatment for the "bends," a form of paralysis that afflicts workers under pressure of compressed air when they are too eager to get to the outer air, O. M. Williamson, engineer of Wyandotte county, Kan., was a prisoner for an air-tight compartment seven hours here recently. His experience was the penalty for a too hasty break for the outer air after a trip to the caisson underneath the pier of the Junction street bridge.

Good Ideas in Estate.

Geneseo, Ohio.—Many of Frank Stevens's ideas will be carried out in the management of his estate, which was valued at $100,000 when he died. Stevens left a will in which he directed that his body be cremated and that his ashes be placed in a vase on the mantel in the parlor of his home. He also directed that his wife should not wear mourning clothes and that no funeral sermon should be preached.

IDOL HAS BAD REPUTATION

Gautama Figure, Made of Carved Teak, Said to Walk Around the House at Night.

London.—For months past the attendants in the Indian section of the Victoria and Albert museum have kept observing eyes in a weird looking Gautama Buddha figure, which entered the museum a year ago with a sinister reputation. A lady sold it to the museum authorities on account of its supposed uncanny ways in her house. So far the figure, which is made of carved teak and stands seven feet high, has exhibited no signs of unrest in its new home, but the attendants, primed with a knowledge of its past record, have not yet relaxed their attention.

Its history, so far as he knows it, was related recently by C. Stanley Clarke, the officer in charge of the Indian section. "The lady from whom we purchased it," he said, "told me that it belonged to her father, a sea captain, who acquired it in lower Burma about 1853. He sailed with it for England. Near Liverpool the ship caught fire and the superstitious sailors, believing the Buddha to be the cause, threw it overboard.

"The ship was brought safely to harbor. Soon after the Buddha washed ashore near the vessel. The captain succeeded after great difficulty in satisfying the authorities that the figure belonged to him.

"When he died it passed to his daughter. Then the trouble began. Everybody in her house, she told me, had become frightened of the Buddha. The servants stated that at night it walked about the house; friends who stayed with her declared that its eyes haunted them and at times appeared to move. Her children were scared out of their wits. She was therefore compelled to part with it. Its behavior here, however, has so far been exemplary."

WOMAN REFUSES HER LEGACY

Fiancee of New York Man Turns $20,000 Over to Heirs-at-Law.

Newburg, N. Y.—When Cornelius L. Waring, Republican politician and lawyer of this place, was stricken with paralysis 18 months ago his engagement to Mrs. Margaret Parker was formally announced. Waring improved, but was stricken and died March 20 last. His will was admitted to probate on April 2, and by it he practically cut off his family, leaving but small bequests to them, while to Mrs. Parker, his fiancee, he gave $5,000 and made Mrs. Julie H. Coles, who lives in the Amidon apartments, New York city, residuary legatee for nearly $20,000.

Mrs. Parker, on learning the conditions, summoned her attorney, Edward J. Collins, and instructed him to prepare a transfer of the amount left her to the relatives of Waring, to be distributed as the law directs where a person dies intestate. She says she was actuated purely by a desire to be just and fair to the heirs-at-law.

ODD ROW OVER WOMAN'S HAT

Why Pennsylvania Miss Marched Man Out of Theater at Pistol Point.

Burgettstown, Pa.—At the point of a revolver Miss Margaret Gribben, a bookkeeper of a coal mine at McDonald, is alleged to have walked Harry Tilton, a teacher in the local public schools, out of a theater and delivered him at the office of a justice of the peace, to whom, however, she refused to make any charge. Later the manager of the theater preferred a charge against Miss Gribben of carrying concealed weapons. A hearing will be held late today.

All Burgettstown is interested. The trouble occurred over the refusal of the young woman to remove her hat. A mind reader was the attraction last night. Tilton sat behind Miss Gribben. When written questions from the audience were called for Tilton wrote, "Ask the lady in front to remove her hat." The mind reader read the question aloud. Miss Gribben arose from her seat and walked Tilton out at the revolver's point.

SHIP IN PORT EACH NIGHT

Why Captain of British Craft Was Twenty-Five Making Short Sea Trip.

Boston.—The British schooner Vera Roberts was 28 days coming here from St. John, N. F., because she put into some port along the way every night. Captain Roberts afflicted with rheumatism and he did not care to be at sea at night.

"It is all right for these young sea dogs whose bones don't ache to stay out all night," explained Captain Roberts, "but an old fellow like me can't stay out nights. It's bad for the rheumatism. So I took it easy, making a port every night and staying there until the sun came up."

Mistake Man for Ghost.

San Bernardino, Cal.—Mistaken for a ghost by the Colorado River Indians, Captain James Bartlett, collector of specimens for the Smithsonian institution, returned with his body painted and bedecked. He was tortured by a religious dance.

Water Mills Idle.

Sylvania, Ala.—Many of the water mills on the Sand mountain are idle on account of the drought. Some of the mills have not been operated for months. Farmers who have commenced planting corn must haul water for their stock.

MUD GOOD AS STOVE

Earth Heated by Volcano Hot Enough for Cooking.

Los Angeles Physician Tells of Visit to the Taal Crater in the Philippines. Says It Is an Individual Type.

Los Angeles.—Writing from Manilla, P. I., Dr. J. N. Martin of Los Angeles, says he had the pleasure of visiting the Taal volcano. "I passed a whole day and night on Volcano island," he writes, "which was longer than I had intended, because the launch that conveyed us there and was to have brought us back failed us through an accident to her machinery.

"My interest in Taal was out of the ordinary, as I had already seen every other type of volcano except that represented by Taal, and was greatly entertained and deeply impressed by the wonderful results of the explosion of last year.

"Taal is, undoubtedly, one of the places that should be visited by all who have not seen it, as it is a type of volcano the equal of which is not to be found in any other part of the world. At the present time the heat is increasing and at a depth of a few inches below the surface the mud is hot enough for cooking purposes.

"One of the things I was most agreeably impressed with in Manila was Bilibid prison. Manila has the model prison in the world. I have never seen anything anywhere in any country in which I have traveled, and I have traveled much with my eyes open, that will compare with Bilibid as a prison or with its administration.

"The same I must say as to the Iwahig penal colony and its management. It is a model colony and a credit to any government.

"There is one thing I think of now and which I would like to mention before I overlook it, and that is the cockpits. I have not much to say on the subject, and may confine my remarks to saying that a people, any considerable part of which spends its Sundays in the cockpits, will never be able to rise to the level of the respected or progressive nation.

"As far as political relations with the United States are concerned I am a strong advocate of the retention of the Philippines as a part and parcel of the nation."

BOY BRIGAND IS A TERROR

Youngster, Sentenced to Prison, Tells of Daring Deeds He Had Planned to Court.

Dunbars, Pa.—When the law through the instrumentality of Judge Maxwell, put its hands on Peter Striney and sent him to the Eastern penitentiary at Philadelphia for from five to ten years, it made short shrift of a young bandit who, by his own confession, had started on a career of crime incited by lurid reading and a natural bent for adventure, and had he not been captured as he was—and that was at the point of a pistol—this part of Pennsylvania ere this summer was over would have been infested with a band of robbers whose leader at least would have stopped short of nothing not even murder.

Even before the court, as he stood to hear sentence pronounced, Striney with not a little braggadocio, declared that he had spent part of his money to buy firearms, so that he would be equipped for highway robbery. His prospective fields of operations were the lonely roads of Sullivan and Bradford counties, a territory with which he is well acquainted, having been reared in Sullivan county, and before his last escapade, for which he is now sent to prison, he was sent to the reformatory at Huntingdon for a time committed while yet only a stripling of a boy.

Striney was sentenced by Judge Maxwell for robbing the Susquehanna & New York railroad station at Powell in broad day.

CALLS RAW SULPHUR PURE

United States Appraisers Hold Japanese Product Must Pay 24 a Ton Duty.

Washington.—Sulphur omitted by the geyser craters of Japan in an almost pure state is refined sulphur in the meaning of the tariff law, although the substance has been untouched by the hand of man. The board of general appraisers at New York, the treasury department is advised, has held that such sulphur is dutiable at $4 a ton. The importers asserted it was entitled to free entry as crude sulphur.

The issue was raised over an importation from Bungo province, Japan, which was 99.6 per cent pure. Although it has been subjected to no artificial process in that province there are, perhaps, a hundred geysers and tepid lakes where sulphur is emitted. The board held that it was immaterial whether the heat necessary to the refinement of sulphur was supplied through the agencies of some chemical combination or the earth or by artificial means.

Wireless by Phone.

Paris.—M. Ducretet has invented what he claims to be the first practical system of wireless telephony. Messages are sent by means of a powerful electric arc, and are received by a telephone. Distance is said to be no object.

MAYOR TO WORK IN

Head of Cincinnati Has Unique Way for Knowing His Town and His Servants.

Cincinnati, O.—Mayor [illegible] Hunt of this city proposes to [illegible] ize himself with the various service departments in a novel manner. The mayor will make a most sweeping investigation of inspection, not as a mere onlooker, recipient of information which subordinates may be able to [illegible] but will mingle in person with laborers of the street and other employes of this city. Hunt characterizes it as more than inspection.

Cincinnati's chief executive will don the garb of the laborer and work a day to a week at the job, sweeping the streets, answering the call of the fire gong, passing a day at each of the police district houses and make the rounds with captain and corporal, as well as ride a night on a "beat."

Mayor Hunt will begin with the street cleaning department, working a day or so touring the city with Superintendent Marsh. Then will follow the actual work, sitting in the midnight hours with seats of the water wagon and sprinklers. Following this the mayor will don the garb of the "white wings," assist in sweeping refuse from the thoroughfares. He will even go so far as to try his hand at driving one of the ash carts. Other departments follow, such as passing a week at the fire engine houses, getting acquainted with the firemen, answering all alarms, being once at the scene of the conflagration, Mr. Hunt will be a member of the fire department. Not a department will be overlooked in an effort to ascertain the actual working conditions.

GIRL OF 16 WEDS MAN OF 60

Old Suitor Wanted to Wed Daughter of Former Sweetheart—Couple Caught Eloping.

Scranton, Pa.—How an old man, disappointed in love twenty-five years ago planned to fill the void in his heart with the sixteen-year-old daughter of his old sweetheart was practically told in the police court here when James Leary of Nichols, was faced Magistrate W. S. Millar on a charge of abducting Irene Lunn, 16, from her home in the same village.

The couple were taken from a train here when it was learned that they were on their way to Brick Church, New Jersey, to be married. According to the girl's story, in which Leary concurred, the man, bent and withered by his sixty years, was the fiance of her mother long ago. Parental objection separated them, and each married the other. Leary's wife died in recent years, and in his loneliness he turned to Mrs. Lunn. He was admitted to the Lunn home as a boarder, and lived with the family for years.

When Irene reached young womanhood the old man found much in her to admire, and in their constant companionship they became enamored. The elopement was finally planned.

MAN SILENT FOR 49 YEARS

Strange Sailor, Marooned in 1863, Used to Talk, Read or Write—Now His Legs Severed.

New York.—Death has finally claimed "Cerome," a legless and silent stranger of mystery, who was found marooned on the beach at Mink Cove, near Digby, N. S., in 1863. During nearly a half century the man has steadfastly refused to divulge the secret of his identity, his nationality and the reason of his abandonment of his strange vessel.

One afternoon in August, 1863, fishermen saw an unknown schooner tack into the harbor. A boat was lowered over the vessel's side. The next day a man was found in a dory on the shelving beach. A bottle of water and a package of sea biscuit were within his reach in the boat. The man's legs had been severed and the wounds were still fresh, the work having been done apparently by a skilful surgeon. Nothing could be extorted from the man, and his silence was never broken.

WIFE DIVORCED BY LETTER

Reading, Pa., Woman Loses Husband—He Wants Good Saver.

Reading, Pa.—Charles A. Hart of Reading has been granted a divorce from his wife, Anna, now a trained nurse in Philadelphia. NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

Another day of sunshine in New Orleans and throughout southern Louisiana cheered more and more the hearts of those who are concerned over the high flood stages of the Mississippi river. State and Federal engineers announced that the few reports received from points north of New Orleans where gangs are repairing and strengthening the levees, were encouraging, although it was admitted that the situation at Baton Rouge was still somewhat serious, and would demand careful watching and continued hard work to prevent a break in the front levee.

Twin cyclones struck Talladega, Ala., doing a property damage of approximately $165,000. There was no loss of life. One storm struck the town from the southwest, going east and when immediately over the business district was met by another storm. The twin disturbance united, doing heavy damage in the way of broken windows and unroofing stores. Talladega county court house was badly damaged, the force of the wind snapping four massave granite columns like reeds.

Marshal C. H. Slaughter and Deputy Sheriff Charles White of Archer, Fla., were decoyed to a lonely spot near there and assassinated. J. A. Manning, another deputy, feigned death nd escaped after being wounded. He shot one of the murderers, capturing him and his three sons, who are now in jail.

New Orleans withstood the severest rainstorm in her history. All of the lower half of Louisiana was affected, and thousands of the people who live behind the already terribly strained levees that hold back the Mississippi's flood waters were panicky. The wind ranged from 27 miles an hour at New Orleans to 40 miles at Baton Rouge, and at many points along the river it swept the waves of the swollen stream over the levees. The Mississippi river at New Orleans was banked up by the high winds, and rose eight inches in two hours, forcing the waters over the levees at several points.

Gen. Bennett H. Young of Louisville, Ky., commander of the Army of Tennessee, was elected commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, succeeding Acting Commander-in-Chief Gen. C. Irvine Walker of Charleston, S. C. The names of General Walker and Gen. W. K. Van Zandt of Texas were both presented, but they withdrew and the election of General Young was made unanimous by a rising vote. Gen. Irvine C. Walker was unanimously elected honorary commander-in-chief.

The choosing of Chattanooga, Tenn., as the convention city for 1913, the unanimous, enthusiastic acceptance of the invitation of General Trimble, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., to merge the blue and the gray at Gettysburg in July to heal all remaining sores of the long internecine strife of the sixties, the crowning of Miss Mary Scandrett of Macon as queen of the 1912 reunion before 20,000 people on Coleman's hill, and a Georgia sun melting mellowly over the city all day, featured the third day of the twenty-second annual reuion of the Confederate veterans in Macon, Ga.

The destitution and distress that follows in the path of crevasses had a practical demonstration when the steamer Whitman with 750 refugees from the McCrea section of Pointe Coupee parish, landed at Melville, La. These unfortunates were picked up along the levee where they had been for three days without shelter, and an almost continuous rain had prevented the cooking of the rations which had been given them. Many, however, refused to be taken away.

General.

After adopting resolutions favoring the entire Progressive movement the Kansas Republican convention named four delegates at large to the national convention and instructed them for Colonel Roosevelt. The Taft strength in the convention was 104, the Roosevelt strength 790.

Worn out by grief over his father's death and his efforts to cheer his youthful stepmother, young Vincent Astor, new head of the family in America, has turned to his "real mother," Mrs. Ava Astor, for solace.

Senator Clapp of Minnesota heads the subcommittee which will investigate the campaign contributions.

The bureau of fisheries, confident that the diamond back terrapin can be cultivated in the United States for commercial purposes and placed within the means of everybody, wants an appropriation from congress to pay a certain guitarist.

Standing upon the bridge of the Carmania in mid-ocean, Mrs. J. H. Loring of New York and London scattered armfuls of flowers upon the waters of the Atlantic in memory of her husband, who lost his life on the Titanic. When the Carmania arrived in latitude 41.1 and longitude 50.14, the nearest position to where the Titanic sank, Mrs. Loring, attired in deep mourning, was escorted to the bridge by Captain Dow. Many passengers, touched by thed evotion, wept.

Twelve hours of fighting on the desert plains of Merico 300 miles to the south of the American border between a force of 5,000 rebels under General Orozco and an equally strong body of Federals under General Huerta, resulted in a decided advantage to the government. At nightfall the sandy mesas between there and Yermo, 14 miles north, where insurrectos were gradually forced back, were covered with dead and wounded. Nearly 500 are believed to have been killed and wounded on both sides.

By a vote of 1,099 to 555, members of the Typographical union of Chicago voted not to go on strike in sympathy with the pressmen who are out in all Chicago daily newspaper offices. J. M. Lynch, international president of the Typographical union, and Walter W. Barrett, president of the Chicago local, expressed themselves as well pleased with the result. This vote is final. The pressmen were downcast over the failure of the Typographical union to join them.

A graphic picture of the scenes that accompanied the sinking of the White Star liner Titanic giving a new viewpoint to a tale already told many times, was painted for the British government's court of inquiry which is investigating the great sea horror. Frank H. Morris, a baker of the lost ship, told how foreign steerage passengers were prevented from rushing the lifeboats, how sixteen persons were saved from a collapsible boat as it was sinking and how the lifeboat in which he was rescued passed among hundreds of human beings floating in the water in its path, while only three of them cried out for help.

An attack of William J. Bryan, stating that "his attitude in this preconvention campaign be accounted for only on the hypothesis that he hopes to be again nominated at the Baltimore convention," was given out at Washington, D. C., by the Harmon national headquarters. The statement calls upon "the Democrats of the country to give candor to the real situation." It declares that a successful Democratic candidate must carry Northern states, as well as those that Bryan carried in his last campaign.

Apparently beaten in their efforts to tie up Chicago newspapers officers of the Webb Pressmen's union, according to a statement issued by the publishers, have started a movement for a nation-wide strike of newspaper pressmen. This and charges by the publishers that the pressmen were using misleading statements in efforts to gain sympathy were the principal developments in the situation. The publishers said they expected normal conditions to prevail before the end of the week.

In the same hall where the regular Republican organization of Pennsylvania was overthrown last week, the regular Democratic state organization was swept out of power by the "reorganization" faction of the party. The victory of the new men in control of the party's machinery was complete, and no resistance was made by the regulars after the vote on permanent chairman of the state convention showed that the "reorganizers" had control of the convention.

What probably was the iceberg which was struck by the Titanic was reported by Captain Wicke of the German tank steamer Clio. The captain says that on April 25, in latitude 41.25 north, longitude 48.43 west, he saw an iceberg about 130 feet high.

Washington.

President Taft took a step toward revision of the patent laws, which have remained unchanged since 1870. He sent a message to congress asking for legislation to authorize him to appoint a commission to investigate the patent laws and repjort what changes were necessary to make them fit modern conditions. The president gave reasons to show the need for the change. He enumerated five reasons which demanded the revision of the law.

Charges against Judge Robert W. Archbald of the commerce court were unfolded before the house committee on judiciary which is to determine if impeachment proceedings shall be brought against the jurist. How Judge Archbald, in partnership with Edward J. Williams, a Scranton coal dealer, while deliberating as a judge on the "lighterage cases" to which the Erie railroad was a party, is alleged to have negotiated an option from that railroad for 42,000 tons of culm dump property to be sold at a $12,000 profit, was related to the committee by Williams himself.

President Taft sent to congress a message approving the plan of the commission of economy and efficiency to retire all government employees at the age of 70 years on annuities equal to half-salary with a maximum limit of $600. The plan provides that employees entering the service shall make annual contributions to provide a retirement fund. The commission estimates that the plan would cost the government $237,000 a year during the next twenty years and that the saving during the succeeding thirty years would equalize it.

STATE NEWS OF INTEREST

MINOR HAPPENINGS IN ALABAMA CITIES, TOWNS AND VILLAGES.

HIGHWAY ROUTE SELECTED

Perry Commissioners Select Lower Route, Which Will Cost in the Neighborhood of $85,000.

Marion.—At a meeting of the county board of commissioners, held in connection with the advisory members, the route for the new public highway to connect Marion and Uniontown was selected. Three routes had been surveyed by County Engineer Scales, one via Scott's station to cost $85,000 and one by what was known as the central route, to cost $100,000, and the lower route, which was selected, to cost $85,000. The appropriation for this road is only $50,000, according to the vote of the people in the bond election, and doubtless the difference will have to be made by private subscriptions as the work must commence at both Uniontown and Marion and build towards the connecting point.

Tuscumbia.—In order to increase the interest in raising thoroughbred horses the Colbert County Fair association will have a horse show on May 24-25, which will exceed anything in that line that has ever been held in Colbert county. The interest has been transmitted to the nearby towns, and many have entered their horses and vehicles, the children are entering their pony carts, as the Tri-Cities can boast of more Shetland ponies than any other section of Alabama.

Selma.—Shortly after he had eaten his mid-day meal, Mr. T. D. Smith took his shotgun and started for a distant field. In getting through a wire fence, which separated two fields, he pushed his shotgun, which was loaded with buckshot, ahead of him, when in some manner one of the barrels exploded and the contents lodged in his groin, inflicting what is considered a dangerous wound.

Carrollton.—The grand jury of this county has adjourned after returning 39 true bills. No other court was held, Judge Harwood deeming it wise to give the farmers an opportunity to get their crops planted and the grand jury was impaneled for the purpose of investigating the most serious crimes as well as those which would be out of date when the regular term of court comes in November.

Marion.—Reports from the rain and hail storm have reached here covering a distance of from 15 to 20 miles in all directions, and the rain was the heaviest ever known to fall in so short a time. Here in Marion exceeding five inches in one hour and considerable hail the size of a bird egg was seen on the streets. The damage to crops was large and lowlands will be abandoned for use of cotton this year.

Huntsville.—Son Peake, convicted in the federal court of retailing, was sentenced by Judge W. I. Grubb to a term of six months imprisonment on that charge and thirteen months for illicit distilling. Sentence was suspended to September 1 in order to allow Peake to make a crop for the support of his family.

Birmingham.—In the first division of the criminal court Judge Samuel E. Greene pronounced sentence of death on Armstead White, a negro convict, convicted of murder in the first degree, and set the date of his execution on June 21.

Stevenson.—A severe rain and electrical storm passed over Stevenson. Lightning struck the cupelo of the Methodist church and also did considerable damage to the Sunday school room. The amount of damage can not now be estimated.

Courtland.—Lawrence county is now building a new $15,000 jail and in the meanwhile her prisoners are being taken care of by the Morgan county authorities.

Mobile.—Birmingham was chosen as the city for the 1913 convention of the Alabama division Travelers' Protective association at the final business session of the convention here.

Jacksonville.—Mrs. J. C. Burgess died at her home here. The deceased had been suffering some time with pellagra.

Cullman.—The local option election which is to be held on the 20th inst., is beginning to attract considerable attention among the people of the county now, and it seems as though now that the fight will be considerably warmer than was thought for in the beginning. The local optionists are making an aggressive compaign in the interest of the return of the open saloon, and the drys are also beginning to show fight by the publication of a petition asking the voters to maintain the present prohibition law in the county.

REFORM COURT PROCEDURE

Chief Justice Dowdell Heads Governor's Appointee's First Meeting May 23.

Montgomery.—Twenty-nine of the ablest lawyers in Alabama have been appointed by Governor O'Neal on a committee to compile a simplified system of civil and criminal procedure. This system will be presented to the next Legislature, and recommendations asking that it be adopted for the state will be offered.

Members of the commission are called to meet with the Governor Thursday afternoon, May 22, at the State Capitol. Plans for the work of the Commission will be outlined, and the duties of the body will be entered upon immediately following that meeting.

John R. Dowdell, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, is named at the head of the list but the Governor expects the commission to name its own chairman. Judge Ormand Somerville and Judge Thomas C. McClellan are the other members of the Supreme Court on the Commission. Judge R. W. Walker and Judge Edward deGraffenreid will represent the Court of Appeals.

Judge John Pelham of the Court of Appeals will represent the Alabama State Bar Association. Other members of the commission are practicing attorneys.

Governor O'Neal has written a letter to each one of the appointees, in which he deals with the question of reformation of legal procedure in Alabama. This matter has caused him considerable concern during the last few years. He recommends adjustment to the last Legislature, but no action was taken.

But the Governor is bent on throwing out what he chooses to call 'our illogical and antiquated system of legal procedure." He declares that, in the event of an extra session of the Legislature, he will stump the State, if need be, to force that body to take cognizance of recommendations that will be made.

Opelika.—An interesting visitor in the city was Judge J. M. Richards, who with his wife are spending a few days with his sister, Mrs. B. L. Dyer, en route from Weatherford, Tex., to the U. C. V. reunion in Macon. In 1872-3 Judge Richards was editor of the Opelika Locomotive and LaFayette Reporter, making his home in the latter city and coming to Opelika every morning to get out his paper here. In 1873 Judge Richards edited the Montgomery News, moving from there to Texas, where he has resided thirty-five years, and is practicing law.

Tuscumbia.—Complaint having been made to the Tuscumbia excise commission that the Colbert County Club of this city, regularly chartered, was not being conducted as a social club, under the provisions of the famous Smith bill, but, on the contrary was being operated openly as a saloon, a hearing was had before the commission with the result that the commission revoked the club's license.

Scottsboro.—A construction company began tearing down the old courthouse, with the view of remodeling the same. This has been a troublesome question for several years. It is the third contract the county has made with contractors, all former contractors having failed to comply with the terms of their contracts.

Hollywood.—H. O. Bynum and Miss Lora Allen, of the county high school, were married by Rev. Gainor, of the Christian church, who was also driving with Miss Bryan, another teacher in the high school, and friend near here. The couple were married in the public road. After the ceremony they proceeded at once to the station, where they took the train for Atlanta, Macon and other Southern points.

Huntsville.—The federal court is behind with its docket, and will be busy all week disposing of criminal cases. The railroad suits that have been selected for trial are those of Alexander Eccles & Co., cotton brokers of New York, who claim that the railroad should reimburse them for losses sustained through the failure.

Jasper.—The city of Jasper has recently issued $15,000 worth of bonds for the purpose of extending the sewer system of the city. This extension of the sewer will take in all of East Jasper and bids are being advertised and the work of putting in the sewer will begin as soon as the bids are closed.

Gadsden.—The semi-annual convention of the Etowah County Sacred Harp Singing association will be held in this city on May 19. The meeting will be held at Elliott park and a considerable gathering is anticipated as these conventions are always largely attended.

Opelika.—The work of County Superintendent of Education J. A. Albright and Prof. L. N. Duncan, of Auburn, in boys' corn clubs is bearing good fruit, as in this county so far 73 boys have entered the corn contest. There is great interest in corn growing in this county and the results of these hustling boys will be watched with interest.

Gadsden.—The Steamer Alabama, up river, bringing a cargo of 140 tons of cotton bales. They were brought from this place Sunday night.

ELECT SENATORS BY POPULAR VOTE

HOUSE ADOPTS RESOLUTION 237 TO 39—NOW GOES TO THE PRESIDENT.

UNDERWOOD THE EXCEPTION

Does Not Side With Other Representatives—Resolution First Introduced in 1826.

Washington.—Despite fierce opposition of Southern representatives, the house accepted the Bristow amendment to the popular election of senators resolution by a vote of 237 to 39. The announcement of the result was greeted by cheers on both sides of the house.

Both houses of congress have now approved this fundamental change in the organic law by the requisite two-thirds majorities, and if the amendment is ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states, it will become amendment No. 16.

Since the first resolution for the direct election of senators was introduced in 1826, the house has five times passed such a resolution, but the senate never yet has come to terms with the house.

On February 28, 1911, the house resolution failed by four votes in the Senate. It contained, as reported from the senate judiciary committee, the objectionable Sutherland amendment, or Bristow amendment, as it later became known, which some Southern congressmen feared would open the way for interference by congress with the election laws of the Southern states.

The first paragraph of section 4 of article 1 of the constitution now reads:

"The times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives, shall be prescribed in each state by the legislatures thereof; but the congress may at any time make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing senators."

It was pointed out that the second sentence above quoted would permit congress to exercise a power in an election where all the electors of a state voted, which would be radically different from that now exercised, where the legislature only elects. Such power might lead to United States marshals or federal troops being stationed at the polls, it was urged by Senator Bacon.

Representative Charles L. Bartlett, of Georgia, offered an amendment expressly providing that congress should have no power to interfere with the franchise laws of any state, having in view the disfranchisement laws of Southern states.

Majority Leader Underwood was a notable exception to his colleagues in the vote on the Bartlett amendment. He made a vigorous speech against the Bartlett amendment and voted against it. He voted for the Bristow amendment in the final show-down.

Mr. Underwood took the position that, while he was really in favor of the Bartlett amendment, it was well known that the senate would never agree to the change in the constitution if the Bartlett amendment should be insisted upon.

FLOOD SITUATION IS IMPROVING.

New Orleans.—With the exception of Conrad's Point, six miles below Baton Rouge, where sand boils have developed near the base of the levee, only encouraging reports were received at the offices of the United States engineers of the Mississippi river, flood situation.

The weather bureau reported the river at a stand at Baton Rouge, while other points from Cairo south reported falling stages.

A hurry call was sent from Conrad's Point to Baton Rouge for workmen and material. Chief Clerk Schmidt of the United States engineers' office said that a force of laborers and government employes had been at that place several days and he was of the opinion that they were fully prepared to take care of any situation that might arise.

All other points along the river report the situation improved.

NEWS BREVITIES.

Jackson, Ky.—Edward Callahan, the Kentucky feudist, who was shot from ambush, died. Pneumonia developed in his left lung through which the bullet passed.

Washington.—The senate judiciary committee will favorably report to the proposal to limit the tenure of office of the lieutenant of the United States.

Her Little Ring.

Mary had a little ring; 'twas given by her beau; and everywhere that Mary went that ring was sure to go.

She took the ring with her one day, when she went out to tea, where she might display it to the girls, who numbered twenty-three.

And when the girls all saw that ring, they made a great ado, exclaiming, with one voice: "Has it at last got around to you?"

They Saved His Life.

Does it pay to stop your motor car after an accident and go back to see what has happened? Two young motorists on the south side believe it does.

With a green chauffeur these two boys were trying out a new model touring car. They were sitting in the back seat when the greenhorn at the steering wheel gave it a twist and came within an ace of hitting an old man at a crossing. The victim was so shocked that he fell to the pavement, and a crowd gathered in an instant.

Looking back, the motorists decided that things looked bad, but that they had better go back and see whether the old party was killed. Finding him all right, but winded, they took him for a nice ride around the parks. So pleasant did they make it for him that when they took him home to his wife he introduced them as "The two young men who saved my life."

They are now thinking of applying for Carnegie medals.

KNOWS NOW

Doctor Was Fooled by His Own Case For a Time.

It's easy to understand how ordinary people get fooled by coffee when doctors themselves sometimes forget the facts.

A physician speaks of his own experience:

"I had used coffee for years and really did not exactly believe it was injuring me although I had palpitation of the heart every day. (Tea contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee—and is just as harmful as coffee.)

"Finally one day a severe and almost fatal attack of heart trouble frightened me and I gave up both tea and coffee, using Postum instead, and since that time I have had absolutely no heart palpitation except on one or two occasions when I tried a small quantity of coffee, which caused severe irritation and proved to me I must let it alone.

"When we began using Postum it seemed weak—that was because we did not make it according to directions—but now we put a little bit of butter in the pot when boiling and allow the Postum to boil full 15 minutes which gives it the proper rich flavor and the deep brown color.

"I have advised a great many of my friends and patients to leave off coffee and drink Postum, in fact I daily give this advice." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Many thousands of physicians use Postum in place of tea and coffee in their own homes and prescribe it to patients.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in Pkgs.

As we go to press the Court is engaged the trial of Lula D Sanders vs W C Robinson, making the fourth case submitted to a jury.

PLANTERSVILLE.

The people of this section are far behind with their farm work on account of so much rain. Mulberry creek, near Plantersville, was impassable last Wednesday morning. High waters prevented the mail carriers from delivering the mail on that day.

Not all of the corn has been planted and but little cotton. The farmers in some sections were only able to plow one half day last week. The people are getting blue over the continued wet weather. But we are thankful it is as well with us as it is.

Plantersville Public school closes Friday night. Exercises will be held at the High school auditorium. Everybody invited.

It is reported that Dr. James E. Young, D. D. S., of Marion, formerly of Plantersville, is to be married Wednesday to Miss Lillian Williams of Barnsville.

Plantersville High school baseball team will soon be prepared to play ball, as they are going to purchase a new outfit in full.

The saw mill at Riderville did not run last week; cannot get logs to the mill on account of so much rain.

Mr. Woodard Davids of Riderville visited homefolks at Moro Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. F. H. Batton made a business trip to Selma last Thursday.

Mrs. Tommie Broadhead has been on the sick list for some time; we wish for her a speedy recovery.

Rev. P. S. Maness failed to fill his appointment at Fellowship Sunday on account of rain. A large number was disappointed on reaching the church and finding the preacher absent.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER CASE

President McCormick Makes a Reply to Charges.

HE DEFENDS THE ORGANIZATION

Statement Issued in Connection with the Government's Suit to Dissolve International Harvester Company.

The government filed a dissolution suit in the federal court at St. Paul, Minn., April. 30, against the International Harvester company, alleging violation of the Sherman law and making the general charges that are customary in a bill of this kind, and asking for whatever reliefs are considered necessary by the court. The bill is a very long one and therefore cannot be reproduced, but it sets forth, in effect, that the Harvester company is a monopoly in restraint of trade, has used oppressive methods in forcing its agents to handle its goods exclusively, etc. To these charges President McCormick has made the following reply:

"The International Harvester case differs radically in its facts from all the so-called 'trust' cases heretofore decided under the Sherman law. The International Harvester company was organized in 1902 for the purpose of securing economy in the manufacture and sale of harvesting machinery, and of increasing the foreign trade. It had no water in its capitalization, and it has earned only a reasonable return on its capital,—less than 7 per cent per annum on the average. The prices of its machines are now substantially the same as in 1902, notwithstanding an increase of 15 per cent in raw material prices and 30 per cent in wages. The company has caused a large saving to American farmers in the cost of agricultural implements. It has increased the foreign trade in agricultural implements four-fold in nine years; its foreign sales in 1911 were over $42,000,000. It has not sold cheaper abroad than at home. Its treatment of its customers, its employes, its agents and its competitors has been in accord with the highest standard of ethics and honorable business methods. To the farmers it has given better service and better machines; to agents and dealers, a less hazardous and fluctuating business and to its employes it has given higher wages, improved and sanitary working conditions, insurance against sickness, accident and old age, and a share in the profits.

"The charges of misconduct found in the bill have been met and disproved by the company in other cases; and they will again fail, because they are untrue. The supreme court of Missouri, in a suit in which those charges were fully gone into, said:

"'On the whole, the evidence shows that the International Harvester company has not used its power to oppress or injure the farmers who are its customers.'

"And again:

"'The price of harvesting machines has not increased in proportion to the increased cost of construction or the increased merit of the machines, and respondent has brought other farm implements into trade.'

"'The evidence also shows that the machines manufactured by the International Harvester company have been greatly improved in quality and the item of repair material has been reduced in price and placed within closer reach of the farmer.'

"The organizers of this company acted under the advice of able counsel, and in the sincere belief that they were violating no law. If under later decisions it should be held that the law was violated, it could only be through the creation of a power to oppress which has never been exercised.

"More than six years ago the company asked for its investigation by the United States government, and opened all its books and records for inspection, and furnished all information requested. No suggestion of any change in its business methods has been made to it by the government at any time. Recently, a full and frank discussion of the whole situation has been had between the representatives of the government and the company, in an honest desire upon both sides to avoid litigation. Some plan may yet be found which will obviate the necessity of any protracted litigation by satisfying the claims made under the Sherman act without seriously impairing the economic advantages and benefits secured by the organization of this company. No form of reorganization, however, was suggested by the government which seemed practically possible.

"The government has been careful to avoid embarrassment to the foreign business from the litigation; the bill makes no attack upon, and seeks no change in the present business of the company. The filing of the bill will in no way interfere with the company's carrying out its business the same as heretofore."

Judge Longshore is shrewd,
And slick as an eel,
The law to disfranchise
The nigger he'd repeal.

"They'll disfranchise the poor"
You know the Judge cried;
It would be too rude
Or I'd say the Judge lied.

Have you seen "that picture?"
It will open your eyes;
And to many good men
It will be a surprise.

His shame and disgrace
Will last till he's dead,
For aligning himself
With the Southern "Burhead."

The Judge should remember
The things that he said,
And stay out of conventions
With the black, kinky-head.

But you know there was pie;
And you can see there was wool,
But over in Shelby
He has lost all his pull.

White men rule Dixie
As sure as you're born
You cannot mislead them
With Longshore's horn.

Our fathers were brave men
Who long wore the grey;
They stood for the right
On election day.

When a Southern bred man
Will with BURR-HEADS mix
There is something sure wrong
He's in the h—l of a fix.

You cannot do now
As they did back in sixty,
And as sure as you try it
There'll be h—l in Dixie.

Educational Taxation

A Timely Article By Mr L. B. Pounds

I wish to call your especial attention to a matter of vast importance, that will soon claim the attention of every good citizen of this county, and every voter who desires to see real progress and an onward and upward move to better conditions, for all the people, more especially the coming generations of children, who are soon to be the men and women of this country, on whose heads and shoulders will rest the destiny of our common country, for weal or woe; a question and a duty confronts each and all of us, viz.:—On June 3rd., next, there is an election called for the purpose of granting the County Board of Commissioners the privilege of again levying a tax of TEN CENTS on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property in this county, for the purpose of the better maintenance of the public schools of the county. Now, this amount of tax has been levied and collected for the last six years, and has proven to be a great help in support of our public schools; we cannot afford to take a backward step, just now, in the matter of better schools.

We believe when our people take a proper view of this matter that they will register their approval, in calling upon the commissioners to again place this same tax for schools that we have had for six years past, but is now barred unless the voters grant them an extention, under the law that provides for the same.

If it were not for the remarks we have lately heard, that it is believed that the people will vote it down, we would not attempt agitation in favor of the continuance of the school tax. The hope that no kind of politics or partisanship will be the means of causing the voters of this county to take this educational bread out of the children's mouths; so let us, for once, divest our minds of all prejudice and turn out on that day and say by our votes that we are all in favor of educating the children of Chilton, for it would be one of the greatest calamities that has ever befallen our people if we fail.

Let me here repeat the language of (I believe) Rodger Sherman, when he said: "We must educate!! We must educate,!! or our boat will sink in the vortex, and our ship of state go down.,

Now let me call the attention of the average tax payer to the fact that the corporations and franchises will pay at least two-thirds of said tax, and furthermore that the state is already returning to this county, for schools and old soldiers, more money than is paid into the state treasury from this county, and now, in the face of these facts, are we going to neglect our plain duty and allow a matter of so great importance to pass us by, and in after years, live to see and regret our folly and realize that we, by indifference, neglect or carelessness, see that we were the chief factors in robbing our children and our neighbor's children of their chief birth right?

Oh! no, let us arouse ourselves and act the part of intelligent men and patriotic citizens and say by our votes that we care more for the future welfare of our children than we do for a dime.

PROF. HENSON RESIGNS

SUPERINTENDENT NOT YET SELECTED. RESIGNATIONS FROM BOARD.

Last Saturday night Prof. Henson, who had been elected as Superintendent of Clanton Academy to succeed Prof. W. L. Hicks, tendered his resignation to the Board of Trustees, having accepted a position as Superintendent at Cuba, Alabama. Prof. Henson decided that under the circumstances it would perhaps be best for all concerned if he should not accept the place tendered him here and so, having another place offered him with inducements which he considered as great, if not greater than those Clanton afforded, he took the action above mentioned.

Just who will be elected to fill the vacancy has not yet been determined, tho' the school board have a number of applications on file.

Within the past few days two members of the Board have resigned, leaving but three gentlemen on the Board at present; as soon as the City Council fills the vacant places, the Board will be called together, and will go into the matter of electing a Superintendent and assistant teachers.

All the good ones have not been selected by other schools by any means; Clanton will have a first class corps of teachers for next year and of this you may rest assured. Now let's all get together—forget bygones and work for the building up of the school system—we owe that much to the children.

Report of Grand Jury

Roads Due to Weather. No Rascality Unearthed

The State of Alabama,
Chilton County.

Circuit Court of said County.
Spring Term, 1912.

To Hon. W. W. Pearson, Judge of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit:

We, the Grand Jury, duly empanelled and sworn at the Spring Term, 1912, of the Circuit Court of Chilton county, Alabama, beg leave to submit this our final report:

We have investigated seventy (70) alleged violations of the law and have returned into your Honor's Court twenty-eight (28) Indictments.

THE PROHIBITION LAW.

Quite a number of witnesses were summoned before the Grand Jury and examined as to violations of the prohibition law. It seems to be the opinion of many people that the way to suppress blind tigers or to secure evidence against them is to furnish the names of every person whom they know in any special community who is addicted to the use of liquor, to the Grand Jury, and have these persons summoned before the Grand Jury to be questioned as to where they got their liquor. This details a lot of work upon the Grand Jury and much expense upon the county, as it is rare that any evidence of value can be gotten from such witnesses. Their invariable answer is, "I ordered it," or "I have not bought any whiskey from any one in Chilton county in the past twelve months."

We believe that proper efforts on the part of any three reputable citizens in any community in Chilton county would rid that particular community of blind tigers within twelve months, but it cannot be done by the indiscriminate summonsing of witnesses before Grand Juries. We believe that the illegal sale of liquor is on the increase in Chilton county and pledge ourselves individually and collectively to do all in our power to stamp it out and call on all good citizens to aid us in this work.

COUNTY OFFICERS' BONDS.

We find the books of all county officers neatly kept. In view of the fact the books of the County Officers were but recently examined by one of the State Examiner's did not, owing to lack of time, go into the accuracy of the books, as the Examiner's report will cover that, when issued.

We find the bonds of all the County Officers ample in their security.

COUNTY PROPERTY.

We find the jail clean, well kept and the prisoners properly cared for.

As to the Court House, we find certain repairs needed, to-wit: New floor in closet down stairs and some repairs needed in brick work and shingles on roof. There are a few repairs also needed at the jail—replacing some loose bars and wood work about the windows.

COUNTY ROADS.

The County Roads we find in very bad condition indeed; but owing to the excessively bad weather we have had for the past six months we are unable to say whether their bad condition is really due to neglect on part of those whose duty it is to keep the roads in repair, the bad weather or whether the present road system will eventually result in bad roads. It is our opinion that the said officials [illegible] responsible for their condition, and that it is impossible, under the circumstances. However, we think it well to add that we do not believe that the present system of road building in Chilton county will ever give us such roads as our people need and our citizenship demands.

COUNTY POOR.

A Committee of this Grand Jury has visited the poor house and find therein nineteen inmates, eighteen white and one colored. They are all well cared for and seem to have comfortable and clean quarters. However, the tin roof on one of the buildings is loose and should be repaired.

Having finished the duties for which were empanelled and thanking Your Honor for his able charge, we respectfully request that we be finally discharged.

L. O. Dver, Foreman.

COUNTY TREASURER'S REPORT.

May 14th, 1912.

To the Honorable Solicitor and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury of the Spring Term Court of Chilton County, Alabama:

Gentlemen:—

I beg to report to your Honorable body that I have on hand to credit of the following funds:

May 14th to cash on hand Gen. Fund	$ 2,353.78
May 14th to cash on hand Fine and For. Funds	1,556.10
May 14th to cash on hand, Redemption of land	122.60
May 14 to cash on hand, Special Road Funds	7,413.08
	$12,445.46

I, J. W. Littlejohn, Treas. of Chilton County, Alabama, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct statement of the finance of Chilton County as appears from my books.

Respectfully submitted,
J. W. LITTLEJOHN.

LYCEUM COURSE.

CLANTON SECURES ENTERTAINMENTS.

Last Thursday Mrs. Richardson of Montgomery came to Clanton for the purpose of closing contracts for a lyceum course to be presented in Clanton during the coming winter. Heretofore such entertainments have not received that cordial support which ordinarily they should and consequently, it was a matter of some speculation as to whether those who are interested in such affairs could afford the expense involved, but Mrs. Richardson was not to be denied; she determined that Clanton should have some high class entertainment, and would not listen to any kind of protest. The Editor accompanied this accomplished lady in a tour of the city and called upon quite a number of citizens to enlist their aid. The result was that a course was planned for three [illegible] performances, one to be [illegible] in October, another in [illegible] and a third in March of next year if the first one is patronized liberally it may be that others will be provided, but on many [illegible] the young men of the town who are interested in such [illegible] "stung" because [illegible] of interest on the part of our citizens that they were loathe to [illegible] a guarantee. The plan for [illegible] to secure [illegible] is for [illegible] to guarantee [illegible] to bring such [illegible] here.

JUDICIAL COMMISSION MEETS

Body Headed by Chief Justice of Supreme Court Dowdell Assembles at Capital.

Montgomery.—The judicial commission, appointed by Governor O'Neal to recommend reforms in the civil and criminal procedure of the state, and for the purpose of redistricting the judicial divisions of the state met here May 23, and will probably be in session for several days. The commission is composed of 30 of the ablest and most brilliant lawyers of the state, and the result of their investigation is anticipated with the keenest possible interest on the part of the entire legal profession of the state.

The commission is headed by Chief Justice J. R. Dowdell of the supreme court, who is a strong advocate of judicial reform along various lines. Other judges of the supreme court appointed on the commission are Justices Ormond Summerville and Thomas C. McClellan.

The representatives from the court of appeals appointed on the commission are Judges Edward DeGraffenreid and Richard W. Walker. Judge John Pelham, the third member of the court of appeals, is also on the commission, his appointment, however, being as the president of the State Bar association.

The question of chief interest before the commission is the redistricting of the state. While this matter has long been contemplated, and the last two legislatures have had the subject under consideration, nothing definite has yet been accomplished.

The commission will also give serious consideration to other judicial reforms, including the revision of the code with reference to civil and criminal practice. Able lawyers all over the state believe that the law with reference to pleadings and charges should be amended, and this question will doubtless receive a large amount of attention.

Auburn. — Alabama's agricultural schools will fulfill in every respect the promise of their name henceforth. At Auburn there was recently completed a conference between Prof. J. A Duggar, professor of agriculture and station director, and a committee whose duty it was to look into the matter of revising the system of teaching agriculture in the nine district agricultural schools. The revision is made to go into force next year. It embodies a more practical system of teaching agriculture and also a more complete system. Practical rather than theoretical agriculture is the goal toward which the schools will work.

Huntsville. — Deputy Collector Campbell has returned from Blount and Cullman counties, where he has been hunting violators of the internal revenue laws. He captured and destroyed an illicit distilling outfit in Blount county and in Cullman county he found 75 gallons of moonshine liquor that had been hidden away by the manufacturers. No arrests were made.

Hartselle.—The City Commissioners have accepted the bid of Birmingham, for some $11,000 or $12,000 worth of paving, the work to begin immediately. This action on the part of the Commissioners followed a petition from the citizens on certain streets asking that the city do the paving and charge the amount to property owners benefited.

Huntsville.—Hiram Jones, an aged citizen of Keys Mill, in the northern part of Madison county, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor. He had been despondent several weeks because of bad health, which confined him to his bed.

Birmingham.—Claiming that he was hurt in an elevator that fell several stories on May 8 last, Will Davis filed suit in the Circuit Court against the First National Bank of Birmingham, asking for $5,000 damages.

Troy.—The Annual Commencement of the State Normal College was the greatest in its history. The twenty-fifth anniversary was celebrated, bringing together the alumni.

Tuscaloosa.—Probate Judge W. W. Brandon has finished the work of checking the petition which was filed some time ago asking for an election on the liquor question in this county and the result was that a sufficient number of voters had signed the petition. The list contained between 900 and 1,000 names of qualified electors and the necessary number to call an election was 847. It is understood that Judge Brandon will call the election [illegible]

URGES GROWING OF CLOVER

Demonstration Agent Jones Makes Recommendation to Farmers of Pickens County.

Carrollton.—Jesse M. Jones, district agent of farm demonstration work for the central district of Alabama, visited Pickens county. Mr. Jones was favorably impressed with the farm lands found in Pickens county and does not believe the farmers realize the possibilities of the same.

He urged the growing of clover to build up the land, thereby reducing the fertilizer bills, and also to locate patches of white or Carolina clover from which to get soil with which to innoculate for red and crimson clover.

In this county about 300 farm demonstrators and co-operators have been secured with 80 boys as boy demonstrators in charge of Prof. Duncan.

Florence.—Some time ago one of the large stores in Florence was burned, and in excavating the earth to rebuild the walls of an adjoining building became weak, last week the back of a store collapsed. Fortunately the walls careened toward the outside and fell on a back lot without injury to any one.

Montgomery.—Failure on the part of citizens of the town of Phil Campbell, in Franklin county, to incorporate in their petition, calling for an election to determine whether or not the town should take out a charter of incorporation, a plat showing the exact boundaries of the town, has resulted in the dissolution of the town's charter by the supreme court of Alabama, in a recent decision.

Roanoke.—Memorial day will be observed in Roanoke June 1. The ladies have secured W. B. Bowling, of Dadeville, as orator of the day. They will serve a basket dinner to the veterans and their friends at Handley Springs, after which the exercises will be held in College hall.

Birmingham.—Fire insurance rates on all dwellings in Birmingham, and other cities over which the Southeastern Association has jurisdiction, will be raised materially, beginning June 1. The raise was ordered some time ago, but a postponement was obtained, and now the agents in this and other cities are making a fight to have it stopped altogether if possible.

Huntsville.—A new school board was elected and organized with J. H. Corsbie, chairman, A. P. Howell, secretary, M. Patillo, J. F. Stewart and T. E. Critenden, completing the board.

Montgomery.—Assignment of dates for troops at the Anniston maneuver camp has been announced by J. B. Soully, adjutant general, Alabama National Guard. The first period will be from July 6 to 15; second, July 16 to 25; third, July 26 to August 4. There will be 12,836 troops at the camp during the three periods, coming from the Alabama National Guard, the United States army and the national guards of Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Huntsville.—The wind and sunshine of the past few days have enabled the farmers to get busy with their planting. Leading farmers and planters say, however, that on account of the late season the acreage will be considerably less in cotton.

Montgomery.—Proper reorganization and the abolishment of useless state positions will save Alabama $200,000 a year, declares the president of the state railroad commission.

Fort Payne.—Many out-of-town visitors attended the ocmmencement exercises of the DeKalb County High school last week. The commencement sermon was preached by Dr. E. D. McDougal, of Anniston.

Florence.—Ground was broken for the girls' dormitory at the State Normal College. The building will stand across Wesleyan avenue from the college buildings, and just west of President James K. Powers' home. The site for the building is most attractive. The building will cost $57,000, and will be one of the handsomest in Florence.

Columbus, Ga.—Breaking 148 out of 150 targets in singles and tieing with two professionals, Gentry Hillman, of Birmingham, Ala., an amateur, featured the third day of the Southern handicap tournament here. The professionals were W. Henderson, Lexington, Ky., and H. D. Freeman, Atlanta.

Huntsville.—"Closed from 10 to 11 o'clock on account of the revival meetings in the First Methodist church" was a sign that attracted attention on the dispensary door. It is believed to be the first time that a liquor establishment ever closed to allow its employes to attend religious services.

Gadsden.—The Echols Realty company awarded a contract for a $30,000 store and office building, to be located on the corner of Broad and Court streets. The building to be completed by October 1.

Gadsden.—The contract was let for the new Gadsden building. The building will be two stories, of reinforced concrete and brick, with [illegible]

HEALTH FOR THE CHILD.

The careful mother, watching closely the physical peculiarities of her children, soon learns that health is in a great measure dependent upon normal, healthy, regular bowel action. When the bowels are inactive, loss of appetite, restlessness during sleep, irritability and a dozen and one similar evidences of physical disorder are soon apparent.

Keep the bowels free and clear and good health is assured. At the first sign of constipation give the child a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at bed-time and repeat the dose the following night, if necessary. You will find the child will quickly recover its accustomed good spirits, and eat and sleep normally.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is far preferable to salts, cathartics and purgative waters which are harsh in their action. Syrup Pepsin acts on the bowels easily and naturally, yet positively, and causes no griping or discomfort. Its tonic properties build up the stomach, liver and bowels, restoring their normal condition.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this remedy, send for a sample to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. He will gladly send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

The Difference.

"Pop, will you tell me one thing?"

"Yes, son."

"Is a mobile countenance the same thing as the auto face?"

Garfield Tea helps clear a muddy complexion, dispel foul breath and sweeten the temper.

The Exception.

"In one respect, a man is unlike a conflagration."

"What is that?"

"When they put him out he is full of fire."

Decorations of the Daughters.

The aggregate value of the jewels worn by the Daughters of the American Revolution at a recent reception in Washington is said to have exceeded $500,000. Estimates of jewels are always liable to large deductions, but it may be said that if the fathers of the revolution could at certain periods of the struggle have had $50,000 worth of ammunition at their command they could have shortened the war by two years or more.—Boston Transcript.

His Veracity.

Jim Slocum of Montgomery county, avers the Kansas City Journal, was called as a witness to impeach the testimony of a man in that county. Jim was asked if he was acquainted with the reputation of the witness for truth and veracity. Jim said that he guessed maybe he was.

"Is it good or bad?"

"Well," said Jim, "I don't want to do the man no injustice, but I will say that if his neighbors were to see him looking as if he was dead they would want some corroboratin' evidence before they would be willing to bury him."

Looking to the Inevitable.

Seventy-nine years old, but with no thought of dying for years, a South Brooklyn retired windmill dealer spent his recent birthday in Cleveland, O., looking for a bargain in coffins. He said he never had cared much for show and thought he would care less when dead, so he wanted something that would be durable, not fancy. "The undertakers wanted more than $100 for good coffins," he told a friend, "none of which looked to be worth more than $50. For $25 I found I could get one that looked as if it might have cost $2.50 to make. You don't suppose I could get a good second-hand one anywhere, do you?" The man did not invest, but decided he would wait awhile and see if the high cost of dying might not be reduced.

RICHESON PAYS DEATH PENALTY

THE SLAYER OF AVIS LINNELL MEETS DEATH CALMLY WITH HIS EYES CLOSED.

"I AM WILLING TO DIE"

"I Am Willing to Die,"—The Current Applied Was 1,900 Volts—One Application Was Sufficient.

Bulletin.—Clarence V. T. Richeson was electrocuted at 12:17. The current was turned on at 12:10-02 and the prisoner was declared dead at 12:17.

The former Baptist clergyman who confessed to poisoning Avis Linnell, of Hyannis, his sweetheart, was outwardly calm when he entered the death chamber and he maintained his composure while the straps and electrodes were being adjusted as he sat in the electric chair.

Richeson walked to the chair erect, eyes straight ahead until he sat down. Then he closed his eyes and kept them shut until the end.

Seated in the chair, he was asked a series of questions by the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, his spiritual adviser.

During his answers he said:

"God will take care of my soul and I pray for all." I forgive everybody."

The last of the questions was:

"Are you willing to die for Jesus' sake?"

The reply, in an even, well modulated tone, was simply:

"I am willing to die."

The current applied was of 1,900 volts, eight amperes. One application was sufficient.

It is expected the wishes of the dead man will be carried out and that he will be buried beside his mother in the family lot in Virginia.

The crime for which Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson, at the time of his arrest pastor of the Immanuel church of Cambridge, was sentenced to die in the electric chair, was the confessed murder of his former sweetheart, 19 years old Avis Linnell of Hyannis, a pupil in the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston.

The girl stood in the way of the minister's marriage to Miss Violet Edmands, a society girl and heiress of Brookline, both through an engagement which still existed between the two and because of a condition in which Miss Linnell found herself. The girl was deceived into taking a poison given her by Richeson, which he believed would remedy that condition and died in rooms at the Young Woman's Christian association, on the evening of October 14, 1911. On that day invitations had been issued for the wedding ceremony which was to unite Rev. Mr. Richeson and Miss Edmands.

LORIMER EXONERATED.

Committee Submits Majority Report on His Election.

Washington.—Senator William P. Dillingham, chairman of the committee which conducted the second investigation into the Lorimer case, filed in the senate the report of that committee. The verdict of the committee is in favor of Senator Lorimer and holds that his election was not procured by illegal and improper means.

This report is concurred in by five of the eight members of the investigating committee—Senator Dillingham, Senator Gamble and Senator Sutherland, republicans, and Senator Fletcher and Senator Johnston, of Alabama, democrats.

The minority members of the committee, Senator Kenyon, republican, and Senator Kern and Senator Lea, democrats, will submit the minority views and a resolution declaring that Lorimer was not legally elected; that his election was procured by fraud and corruption, and that he is not entitled to his seat.

The committee upholds the plea of res adjudicata, which is, in effect, that the case having once been decided by the senate, cannot again be brought to issue upon the same evidence.

It is strongly pointed out that the claim of newly discovered evidence was not sustained.

CASTLE OF ST. ANGELO NOTED

Known as Tomb of Hadrian—Scene of Torture of Beatrice Cenci.

Rome.—Nearly everyone is familiar with the famous head called "Beatrice Cenci," said to be by Guido Reni, and with the story of that ill-fated family as it is presented in Shelley's play. The beauty and virtue of Beatrice have become a popular tradition; but we are now told by certain iconoclasts that the famous painting is not of her, that it is not by Guido Reni, and that the lady was neither beautiful nor virtuous. The poor tradition has not a leg left to stand on, but the fact does not spoil the pleasure of readers in Shelley's drama, nor of sightseers in viewing the room in which the unfortunate Beatrice is said to have been tortured. That room is in the Castle of St. Angelo, otherwise known as the tomb of Hadrian, in Rome. This famous mausoleum, one of the oldest landmarks of the Eternal City, has been greatly changed since its erection more than seventeen centuries ago. The original structure is almost hidden by fortifications that have been built around it; the cone of earth which once crowned the top, planted with evergreens, has given place to a gilt angel sheathing a sword; and the interior has been stripped not only of works of art that adorned it, but of much of the very material used in its construction, that material having been utilized for other buildings.

Castle of St. Angelo.

In 1500 the tomb was connected with the Vatican by a subterranean passage. A photogravure of the castle of St. Angelo, as it is now called, showing also the Tiber, the bridge that gives approach to the tomb, and the dome of St. Peter's in the background, illustrates this article. St. Peter's the largest Christian place of worship in the world, and the Mecca of pious pilgrims from all over the globe, has also undergone various transformations since the early days when it succeeded an old basilica located on the same spot. It was built at first on the plan of a Greek cross, which was changed later to a Latin cross and shifted between these two forms twice more before being left in its present form. It is not seen to full advantage at close range, on account of its great dimensions; but the picture accompanying this article gives an excellent effect of the stately and impressive dome.

SEEK NEW LIGHT ON PIGMIES

Curious People Found to Be Industrious and Intelligent—Expedition to Visit Them.

London.—Fresh and interesting information regarding the habits and conditions of life of a curious pigmy race will be sought by the new expedition to Dutch New Guinea, which is now being planned in London. This strange race of people were first seen by white men when the recent expedition under Capt. C. G. Rawling penetrated into the heart of the island.

Rawling's expedition comprised six Englishmen and was sent out by the British Ornithologists' union. Their objective was a long range of snowy mountains, called the Nassau range, but between them and it lay 60 miles of absolutely unexplored country and of the most difficult kind to negotiate. Dense forest covered most of it, intersected with rivers which for one half of the year were torrents and the other half nearly dried up river beds.

The pigmies were first discovered near the Kapare river, one of the immense streams which, rising in the Nassau mountains, make their way down to the sea. The Japanese soldiers who accompanied Rawling as bearers spied a couple of the little pigmies one day in the hills. The pigmies bolted at once, and an exciting chase took place, which ended in their being captured, and two days later more were surprised and surrounded. They proved to be sturdy men, averaging about four feet, eight inches high, and much better developed than the tribes encountered in the plains. They were also industrious, and decidedly more intelligent. They had neatly constructed huts, and after some time it was discovered that they had words in their language to denote numerals up to ten, words entirely lacking from the language of the plainsmen. Although the most strenuous search was made, only solitary huts could be found. Strangely enough, no children and only one woman, who was being presented to her new home from her wedding, were seen.

CAMPAIGN IS HAVING EFFECT

Already the Death Rate Fro mTuberculosis Is Showing a Gratifying Decrease.

In certain cities, such as New York, Boston, Cleveland and Chicago, and in states like Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, the decline in the death rate from tuberculosis is more marked than in the country at large, which declined 18.7 per cent. in the ten years from 1901 to 1910. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis says that there are many factors working together to cause the decline in the tuberculosis death rate, such factors as the change in the character of our urban population, increased sanitation, and better housing, but probably as potent a factor as any has been the nation wide anti-tuberculosis campaign. "It may be foretold with considerable certainty," the association says, "that when the effects of the present rapidly increasing provision for the care of tuberculosis patients shall have become evident, the decline in the death rate from consumption in the coming decade will be even more marked than in the last one."

PHYSICIAN ADVISES CUTICURA REMEDIES

"Four years ago I had places break out on my wrist and on my shin which would itch and burn by spells, and scratching them would not seem to give any relief. When the trouble first began, my wrist and shin itched like poison. I would scratch those places until they would bleed before I could get any relief. Afterwards the places would scale over, and the flesh underneath would look red and feverish. Sometimes it would begin to itch until it would waken me from my sleep, and I would have to go through the scratching ordeal again.

Our physician pronounced it "dry eczema." I used an ointment which the doctor gave me, but it did no good. Then he advised me to try the Cuticura Remedies. As this trouble has been in our family for years, and is considered hereditary, I felt anxious to try to head it off. I got the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, and they seemed to be just what I needed.

"The disease was making great headway on my system until I got the Cuticura Remedies which have cleared my skin of the great pest. From the time the eczema healed four years ago, until now, I have never felt any of its pest, and I am thankful to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment which certainly cured me. I always use the Cuticura Soap for toilet, and I hope other sufferers from skin diseases will use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Irven Hutchison, Three Rivers, Mich., Mar. 16, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Unappreciative.

"Ha!" mused Noah, as he looked upon the flood from one of the windows of the Ark, "the folks who jeered at me for building this vessel, laughed at me when I told them it was the original water wagon, but they would have fared better had they appreciated in time the dry wit of my little joke."

"War" Bank Notes.

The Swiss National bank, with headquarters at Zurich, has just completed printing at Geneva "war" bank notes of 20 francs each for a sum of $6,000,000, but they will not be put into circulation unless war breaks out in Europe. While the notes were being printed special police guarded the printing offices and the bank night and day. The notes are now stocked in the cellars of the bank of Zurich.

The Child, Father of the Man.

The late Thomas B. Reed, when a lad, was requested to bail out a small boat that had been leaking badly, and was almost full of water.

"I can't do it," replied Tom. "It's unconstitutional."

"What do you mean?" inquired the owner of the boat.

"The constitution of the United States says," replied the future statesman, "that 'excessive bail shall not be required' of any man."—Youth's Companion.

Looking Forward.

The husband and wife were making a call on friends one evening. The wife was talking.

"I think we shall have Marian take a domestic science course along with her music and regular studies when at college.

"Ah," said a man present, who had been a stranger until that evening, "you look rather young to have a daughter ready for college."

"O!" said the mother, naively, "she isn't old enough now; she is just eight months old, but I do so like to look forward!"—Indianapolis News.

Jewels in the Flower Bed.

The recovery of a quantity of stolen jewelry from a flower bed was described at Kingston-on-Thames police court the other day, when a general servant was charged with theft from her mistress, a resident of Ivydene, Southborough road, Surbiton, London. The lady had missed a pearl pin and a pearl and diamond ring. Thinking she might have lost the jewels in the street, she issued printed notices offering a reward for their recovery. When she lost a number of other things she placed the matter in the hands of the police. The detective said that from what the prisoner told him he searched the garden, and in one of the flower beds found some of the jewelry. The rest he found in the prisoner's bedroom.

Dont forget your children June third—vote! and vote right.

Some mighty funny politics going on in this district. But we needn't say anything. Politics—of the right sort—talk. Just wait, "the hens 'er settin"

With Roosevelt carrying everything he goes after, Marse William Howard Taft, whom the Alabama convention endorsed, and for whom it instructed its delegates, including Mr. Mason, to vote, it begins to look as if the National Republican convention will find itself in a hopeless muddle. And, too, no one need be surprised to see Teddy carry off the plum, even if he has to form a rump convention to do so. However, all this simply means Underwood's election.

In this issue of the Press appears an article from the pen of Mr. L. B. Pounds, on the matter of taxation for school purposes. We are glad that Mr. Pounds has written his article and given it to both papers for publication, in order that all our people may be aroused to the necessity of providing for the education of the children of the county. For weeks the notice of the election has appeared in the columns of our paper and several times we have made editorial mention of the matter. We were beginning to fear that others might think it strictly a democratic issue and therefore refuse to vote for the levy provided for in the election call.

Under no circumstances should it be looked upon as a party issue, and under no circumstances should any white man in the county cast his ballot against the tax levy. We cannot afford to allow our schools to suffer; we must, if we be men, provide an education for our children, and we will, if we be men, unite in this movement, regardless of political affiliations, to give to the children of the county even better school facilities than we now have.

The Press indulges the sincere hope that several democrats will urge the movement and have their communications published in the Union; we also hope that some of our republican friends will write upon the subject for publication in the Press, to the end that ALL may know there is no politics in the measure, and that all are expected to join hands in this effort to provide educational advantages for our children.

There is one more issue of each paper before the election. Who will be the first to take up the battle for the children of Chilton county.?

CLOSING EXERCISES.

CLANTON ACADEMY CLOSES FOR TERM.—DR. MARTIN'S ABLE ADDRESS.

Last Wednesday and Thursday nights witnessed the closing of Clanton Academy for the term, and to say that the entertainment afforded both nights was highly enjoyable, but lightly expresses it. Wednesday night Miss Margaret Watson's music class gave an exhibition of this accomplished young lady's training ability and each pupil reflected great credit not only upon the pupil and the class, but upon the teacher as well.

After the musical program had been rendered Dr. Martin, President of the Woman's College of Montgomery, made a most magnificent address upon the subject of "Education." Tho' the address was delivered from manuscript, it was none the less enjoyable, filled as it was, with wholesome advice and well rounded sentences

The exercises Thursday night were equally enjoyable. The program consisted of songs and recitations by various pupils of the school.

On both occasions the auditorium was well filled with patrons and friends of the school.

IT SHOULD BE RUSHED

A LATE START BETTER THAN NONE, BUT A LATE ENDING DANGEROUS.

Some weeks ago the PRESS called attention to the old "Lake" between Sixth and Seventh streets north, and suggested that it should be drained or at least disinfected; others called attention to the fact that one or more cellars in the city needed attention; we also stated in a recent issue that Dr. Hopkins would soon begin on the work of exterminating these mosquito dens. The fact is the good doctor has begun the work, but so has old Sol, and if things don't move along swimmingly for the next few days it may cause considerable sickness. Dr. Hopkins is doing the very best he can under the circumstances. but why cannot the council appropriate a part of the $199.37 toward the work and have it completed before the hot summer is upon us? It will be $199.37 well invested.

A CLEAN-UP CLUB NEEDED

IF WE CAN'T LEAD WE CAN FOLLOW

In most towns and cities there exists what is known as a "City Beautiful" organization or a clean-up club or some such association for the purpose of assisting in keeping the streets and yards of the city in presentable appearance. Clanton needs one, and needs it badly.

True, most of the premises in Clanton are well kept, but some are in dreadful shape. Wednesday night a full grown "diamond back ground rattler" was killed on one of the principal streets of the city. Just where he came from is not known, but that he was "hatched" or "laid" in the city cannot be disputed, and others will doubtless be found where this one originated. As a rule, snakes are not hermits; they believe in colonization, and they usually colonize where they feel free from injury—in weedy, marshy filthy places. Aside from the snake proposition Clanton needs a "clean up" club, and should have one without delay.

Mr. F. A. Gulledge of Verbena was circulating among his many friends here Wednesday.

Finds Cure for Epilepsy After Years of Suffering

"My daughter was afflicted with epileptic fits for three years, the attacks coming every few weeks. We employed several doctors but they did her no good. About a year ago we heard of Dr. Miles' Nervine, and it certainly has proved a blessing to our little girl. She is now apparently cured and is enjoying the best of health. It is over a year since she has had a fit. We cannot speak too highly of Dr. Miles' Nervine."

MRS. FRANK ANDERSON.
Comfrey, Minn.

Thousands of children in the United States who are suffering from attacks of epilepsy are a burden and sorrow to their parents, who would give anything to restore health to the sufferers.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

is one of the best remedies known for this affliction. It has proven beneficial in thousands of cases and those who have used it have the greatest faith in it. It is not a "cure-all," but a reliable remedy for nervous diseases. You need not hesitate to give it a trial.

Some Baseball From Maplesville.

Editor Clanton Press:—

Just four weeks ago today the Maplesville boys entertained the Dallas County High School Base Ball Team on home grounds for initiatory game. Defeat was easy—the locals having their opponents outclassed in almost every department. This helped—filling each member with enthusiasm and confidence in his team. Two games have been pulled off with same club, the result being two victories for Maplesville boys. Feeling that we have a team worth pulling for, one that will win seventy-five per cent of their games, despite the fact that there are less fans than players.

With three victories to our credit and no defeats we appeal to our live citizens to come out and display some of their true love and enthusiasm for America's popular sport.

We also invite you knockers and beefers—come out and make yourselves at home—perhaps you will learn how to appreciate a first-class game of ball.

All the boys have go in their bones and determination in their efforts, which will cause them to give their patronage the best article of ball.

Hoping that you will allow this space in your paper, we are,

Yours very truly,

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

Fire broke out in the upper Main street business district of Houston, Texas, and caused a loss approximating $1,000,000. It originated in the Stowers building, a large six-story building owned by T. Masternson and occupied by the Stowers Furniture company and the A. Lipper Millinery company. Firemen are of the opinion that the cause was due to defective wiring, aided by overheated wires, and that it started in the upper floor of the Lipper establishment.

When Rev. C. O. Bennett was killed at Millwood, Ga., by Carey Bennett, divorce proceedings filed by the former's wife were abruptly terminated. The trouble between the Bennetts named had been of long standing, due to allegations regarding Carey Bennett's relation with C. O. Bennett's wife. Eyewitnesses state that C. O. Bennett fired first. The victim of the fight was 38 and was a minister of the Baptist faith.

The town of Melville, La., threatened by the floods since the present high water started, was inundated when the levee on the west bank of the Atchafalaya river, sixteen miles to the north, broke. Captain Logan, in charge of the United States rescue corps, dispatched the steamship Minnetonka with a barge to Melville to bring away those inhabitants who desired to leave, together with their live stocks and household goods.

Floyd Allen, first of the Hillsville mountaineers tried for the Carroll county court house murders, was adjudged guilty at Wytheville, Va. He will pay the penalty in the electric chair at Richmond. Floyd Allen was charged specifically at this time with the murder of Commonwealth's Attorney William M. Foster, prosecutor in the Caror lcounty court, at Hillsville, last March, when trial of Allen culminated in the killing of five persons.

Two masked bandits boarded the New Orleans Limited on the New Orleans and Northeastern, eight miles south of Hattiesburg, Miss., dynamited the safe in the express car and escaped. The robbers did not molest the passengers. One trainman received severe injuries as he lay bound near the safe when the dynamite blew it to pieces. Officials of the Wells-Fargo Express company admitted that the train robbers secured at least $35,000.

In a state convention marked by bitter attacks upon President Taft, North Carolina's four delegates-at-and four alternates to the Chicago Republican convention were instructed to vote for Theodore Roosevelt, "first, last and all the time," so long as his name is before the convention. There was no test of strength upon the subject of presidential endorsement, the Taft forces yielding to the Roosevelt leaders at the start.

After voting to send the state's 18 delegates to the Baltimore convention uninstructed, the South Carolina Democratic state convention adopted a resolution endorsing Woodrow Wilson for president. It was remarkable for its brevity: "Resolved, That this convention endorse Woodrow Wilson."

Accused of being engaged in a cafeer of burgalry, which eventually led to murder at the same time that he was conducting a series of open-air evangelistic meetings, Francis Westley Muehlfeld is under indictment in New York City for murder. "King of the New York Auto Bandits," is the characterization of the prisoner by Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, in alleging the remarkable case of dual personality. Muehlfeld is charged with the murder of Patrick Burns, a saloon keeper.

Declarations that Sir Cosmo and Lady Duff-Gordon, who were two of the five passengers in a partly filled lifeboat, ha dprotested against returning to the scene of the Titanic wreck to attempt the rescue of unfortunate passengers strugling in the water, were reviewed by the British inquiry board. An audience of fashionably dressed women heard the proceedings, and the Gordons, with their legal advisers, paid close attention to the testimony.

Ray Wheeler, amateur aviator, was killed and Peter Glassor, a companion, probably was fatally injured when their machine struck a telegraph pole at St. Louis. Wheeler and Glasser were thrown 30 feet.

Aviator Ralph McMillen was seriously injured during an exhibition flight at Perry, Iowa.

Victor Louis Mason, an American, at one time private secretary to the American secretary of war, Gen. R. A. Alger, was killed while making a flight at Brooklands, England, with the English aviator, H. V. Fisher. Fisher also was killed.

Congress gossip now centers very largely upon adjournment. The Progressive Republican senators insist that after so many months of discussion at this session there should be important legislative achievements on th etariff and other things. Regular Republican senators are bringing the tariff bills out of the finance committee, but are considering absenting themselves upon the tariff bill votes so that the president may have the advantage of vetoing straight Democratic measures.

The public playgrounds, in the opinion of Miss Jane Addams, is the greatest agency so far brought forth for the improvement of the city boy. She says: "One of the most noticeable results has been the decided decrease in the number of defendants brought before the juvenile courts. Boys now spend their leisure time in healthful exercise at the playgrounds instead of getting into mischief in the streets."

The women of California have no right to serve on trial juries, according to the opinion of Attorney General Webb. The attorney general holds the amendment to the state constitution granting the elective franchise to women dealth with their political rights and duties alone. The ruling was given in answer to a request from the board of supervisors, who wanted to place a woman on the panel of trial jurors recently drawn.

Dogs have become as necessary to the comulete afternoon toilet of the women of Paris as pannier drapery or the upright decorating of hats. The most chic conception is to have a dog to match each color of costume worn. The most extravagant deveolpment of the new style is to be seen at Ciro's, the ne wrestaurant which has become the center of fashion. In lunching at the new restaurant nine out of ten women carry dogs to the tables. The Pekingese variety seem to be the favorites.

The Michigan state Democratic convention voted to send an uninstructed delegation of thirty members to the national convention at Baltimore.

Clarence S. Darrow, chief counsel for the McNamara brothers in the dynamiting case and a widely known criminal lawyer, was placed on trial under an indictment charging him with having attempted to bribe a juror in the "dynamiting trial" at Los Angeles, Cal. Darrow said he was innocent of any wrongdoing. Prosecutor Fredericks said: "The evidence against Darrow is as strong as it was against the McNamaras."

Christian X was proclaimed king of Denmark from the balcony of the palace oin Copenhagen before a huge concourse of people who had gathered in the square in front of the royal residence. In his brief speech he paid a tribute to his father and pointed out the difficulties of succeeding such a ruler, concluding: "May God give me strength rightly to rule my dear old country and may it live forever."

Dr. Ben Reitman, known as the "king of tramps," who has traveled for some years with Emma Goldman, the Anarchist, was kidnaped from the U. S. Grant Hotel at San Diego, Cal., taken to LaPesquimitas ranch twenty miles north, forced to kiss the American flag and then tarred and feathered. After he had been tarred and feathered Reitman was driven northward.

King Frederick VIII of Denmark died at the Hamburger Hof Hotel in Hamburg, Germany. Christian Frederick was proclaimed king.

Washington.

With the launching at Newport News, Va., of the superdreadnought Texas, the American navy counted as its proud possession the biggest and most powerful battleship the world has ever seen. Other nations are trying desperately for the honor of owning the greater warship, but it will be months after the Texas and her sister ship, the New York, which will be launched at the New York navy yard in July, have taken the water before the monster ships planned to outsize them and now under construction in European ship yards will be water-borne.

Attorney General Wickersham moved against the so-called coffee trust of Brazilian valorization scheme. In a petition in equity filed in the United States court in New York, the valorization plan is declared to be a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. The court is asked to decree the scheme unlawful, to enjoin the valorization committee from withholding coffee from the market, and to appoint a receiver to sell the 950,000 bags, valued at $10,000,000, now alleged to be stored in warehouses of the New York Dock company.

Charles D. Hilles, President Taft's secretary, gave out a statement at the white house in Washingon concerning the delay of the prosecution of the International Harvester company during Roosevelt's administration in 1907. The statement says "that President Roosevelt compelled his attorney general to discontinue the Harvester prosecution in the fall of 1907, eighteen months prior to the colonel's retirement from office."

Judge Robert W. Archbald's defense, in part at least, to the charges against him in the house, which will decide if impeachment proceedings shall be brought, was indicted. What appeared to have been a deliberate trap set to catch the jurist in an embarrassing transaction was revealed. It was alleged that W. R. Boland of Scranton, Pa., purposely had Edward J. Williams, the principal witness against the judge, solicit Archbald to enter the Katydid calm bank option transaction with the Erie railroad, while the cases were pending in the court.

Wild Dash for the Hills.

Kirkby, who had been lazily a saddle the greater part of ning, had eaten his dinner, his pipe and was now stretchon the grass in the warm sun a nap. Mrs. Maitland was over a book in the shadow of the big pines, when Pete, wrangler, who had been g rather far down the canon up the ever straying stock, came bursting into the camp. God Almighty!" he cried, licking the prostrate fron- as he almost stumbled over Wake up, old man, an'——" time Kirkby was on his storm had stolen upon him had unaware. The configurcanon had completely hid its approach. At best the three in the camp could not have discovered it until it was high in the heavens. Now the clouds were already approaching the noonday sun. Kirkby was alive to the situation at once. He had the rare ability of men of action of awakening with all his faculties at instant command. He did not have to rub his eyes and wonder where he was, and speculate as to what was to be done. The moment that his eyes, following Pete's outstretched arm, discovered the black mass of clouds he ran toward Mrs. Maitland and standing on no ceremony he shook her vigorously by the shoulder.

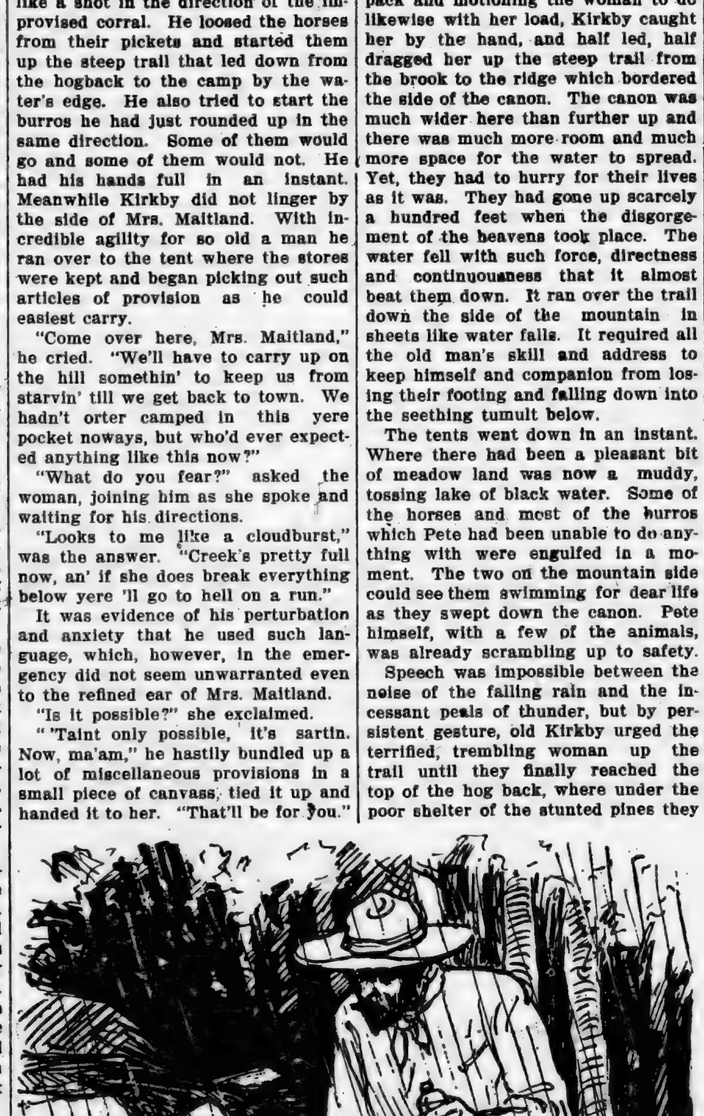
"We'll have to run for our lives, ma'am," he said briefly. "Pete, drive the stock up on the hills, fur as you kin, the hosses pertikler, they'll be more to us an' them burros must take keer of themselves."

Pete needed no urging. He was off like a shot in the direction of the improvised corral. He loosed the horses from their pickets and started them up the steep trail that led down from the hogback to the camp by the water's edge. He also tried to start the burros he had just rounded up in the same direction. Some of them would go and some of them would not. He had his hands full in an instant. Meanwhile Kirkby did not linger by the side of Mrs. Maitland. With incredible agility for so old a man he ran over to the tent where the stores were kept and began picking out such articles of provision as he could easiest carry.

"Come over here, Mrs. Maitland," he cried. "We'll have to carry up on the hill somethin' to keep us from starvin' till we get back to town. We hadn't orter camped in this yere pocket noways, but who'd ever expected anything like this now?"



"What do you fear?" asked the woman, joining him as she spoke and waiting for his directions.

"Looks to me like a cloudburst," was the answer. "Creek's pretty full now, an' if she does break everything below yere 'll go to hell on a run."

It was evidence of his perturbation and anxiety that he used such language, which, however, in the emergency did not seem unwarranted even to the refined ear of Mrs. Maitland.

"Is it possible?" she exclaimed.

"'Taint only possible, it's sartin. Now, ma'am," he hastily bundled up a lot of miscellaneous provisions in a small piece of canvass, tied it up and handed it to her. "That'll be for you."

Presently She Opened Her Eyes.

Immediately after he made up a much larger bundle in another tent fly, adding, "An' this is mine."

"Oh, let us hurry," cried Mrs. Maitland, as a peal of thunder, low, muttered, menacing, burst forth from the flying clouds, now obscuring the sun, and rolled over the camp.

"We've got time enough yit," answered Kirkby, coolly calculating their chances. "Best git yer slicker on, you'll need it in a few minutes."

Mrs. Maitland ran to her own tent and soon came out with sou'wester and yellow oilskins completely covering her. Kirkby meantime had donned his own old battered, soiled rain clothes and had grabbed up Pete's.

"I brought the children's coats along," said Mrs. Maitland, extending three others.

"Good," said Kirkby. "Now we'll take our packs an'——"

"Do you think there is any danger to Robert?"

"He'll git nothin' worse 'n a wettin'," returned the old man confidently. "If we'd pitched the tents up on the hog back, that's all we'd a been in for."

"I have to leave the tents and all the things," said Mrs. Maitland.

"You can stay with them," answered Kirkby, dryly, "but if what I think 's goin' to happen comes off, you won't have no need of nothin' no more—Great God, here she comes."

As he spoke there was a sudden, swift downpour of rain, not in drops, but in a torrent. Catching up his own pack and motioning the woman to do likewise with her load, Kirkby caught her by the hand, and half led, half dragged her up the steep trail from the brook to the ridge which bordered the side of the canon. The canon was much wider here than further up and there was much more room and much more space for the water to spread. Yet, they had to hurry for their lives as it was. They had gone up scarcely a hundred feet when the disgorgement of the heavens took place. The water fell with such force, directness and continuousness that it almost beat them down. It ran over the trail down the side of the mountain in sheets like water falls. It required all the old man's skill and address to keep himself and companion from losing their footing and falling down into the seething tumult below.

The tents went down in an instant. Where there had been a pleasant bit of meadow land was now a muddy, tossing lake of black water. Some of the horses and most of the burros which Pete had been unable to do anything with were engulfed in a moment. The two on the mountain side could see them swimming for dear life as they swept down the canon. Pete himself, with a few of the animals, was already scrambling up to safety.

Speech was impossible between the noise of the falling rain and the incessant peals of thunder, but by persistent gesture, old Kirkby urged the terrified, trembling woman up the trail until they finally reached the top of the hog back, where under the poor shelter of the stunted pines they

"Great God!" He Cried. "Where Is Enid?"

to the merciless fury of the storm, a thought came suddenly to Mrs. Maitland. She leaned over and caught the frontiersman by his wet sleeve. Seeing that she wished to speak to him, he bent his head toward her lips.

"Enid," she cried, pointing down the canon. She had not thought before of the position of the girl.

Kirkby, who had not forgotten her, but who had instantly realized that he could do nothing for her, shook his head, lifted his eyes and solemnly pointed his finger up to the gray skies. He had said nothing to Mrs. Maitland before. What was the use of troubling her.

"God only kin help her," he cried. "She's beyond the help of man."

Ah, indeed, old trapper, whence came the confident assurance of that dogmatic statement? For as it chanced, at that very moment the woman for whose peril your heart was wrung was being lifted out of the torrent by a man's hand! And, yet, who shall say that the old hunter was not right, and that the man himself, as men of old have been, was sent from God?

"It can't be," began Mrs. Maitland in great anguish for the girl she had grown to love.

"Ef she seed the storm an' realized what it was, an' had sense enough to climb up the canon wall," answered the other, "she won't be no worse off'n we are; ef not——"

Mrs. Maitland had only to look down into the seething cauldron to understand the possibility of that "if."

"Oh," she cried, "let us pray for her that she sought the hills."

"I've been a doin' it," said the old man gruffly.

He had a deep vein of piety in him, but, like other rich ores, it had to be mined for in the depths before it was apparent.

By slow degrees the water subsided, and after a long while the rain ceased, a heavy mist lay on the mountains and the night approached without any further appearance of the veiled sun. Toward evening Robert Maitland, with the three men and the three children, joined the wretched trio above the camp. Maitland, wild with excitement and apprehension, had pressed on ahead of the rest. It was a glad-faced man indeed who ran the last few steps of the rough way and clasped his wife in his arms, but as he did so he noticed that one was missing.

"Great God," he cried, releasing his wife, "where is Enid?"

"She went down the canon early this mornin' intendin' to stay all day," slowly and reluctantly answered old Kirkby, "an'——"

He paused there. It wasn't necessary for him to say anything more.

Maitland walked to the edge of the trail and looked down into the valley. It had been swept clean of the camp. Nought had been saved save the meadow land, trunks of trees torn up by the roots had lodged against them. It was a scene of desolate and miserable confusion and disaster.

"Oh, Robert, don't you think she may be safe?" asked Mrs. Maitland.

"There's just a chance, I think, that she may have suspicioned the storm an' got out of the canon," suggested the old frontiersman.

"A slim chance," answered Maitland gloomily. "God, I wouldn't have had this happen for anything on earth."

"Nor me. I'd a heap ruther it had got me than her," said Kirkby simply.

"I didn't see it coming," continued Maitland, nodding as if Kirkby's statement were to be accepted as a matter of course, as indeed it was. "We were on the other slope of the mountain until it was almost overhead."

"Nuther did I. To tell the truth I was lyin' down nappin' w'en Pete, yere, who'd been down the canon rounding up some of the critters, came bustin' in on us."

"I ain't saved but four hosses," said Pete mournfully, "and there's only one burro on the hog back."

"We came back as fast as we could," said Maitland. "I pushed on ahead, George, Bradshaw and Phillips are bringing Bob and the girls. We must search the canon."

"It can't be done tonight, old man," said Kirkby.

"I tell you we can't wait, Jack!"

"We've got to, I'm as willin' to lay down my life for that young gal as anybody on earth, but in this yere mist an' as black a night as it's goin' to be, we couldn't go ten rod without killin' ourselves an' we couldn't see nothin' noways."

"But she may be in the canon."

"If she's in the canon 'twon't make no difference to her w'ether we finds her tomorrer or next day or next year, Bob."

Maitland groaned in anguish.

"I can't stay here inactive," he persisted stubbornly.

"It's a hard thing, but we got to wait till mornin'. Ef she got out of the canon and climbed up on the hog back she'll be all right, she'll soon find out she can't make no progress in this mist and darkness. No, old friend, we're up agin it hard. We jest got to stay the night w'ere we are an' as long as we got to wait we might as well make ourselves as comfortable as possible. For the wimmen an' children, anyway. I fetched up some ham and some canned goods and oth-er eatin's in these yere canvas packs. We might kindle a fire——"

"It's hardly possible," said Maitland. "We shall have to eat it cold."

"Oh, Robert," pleaded his wife, "isn't it possible that she may have escaped?"

"We won't give up hope, ma'am," said Kirkby, "until tomorrer w'en we 've had a look at the canon."

By this time the others joined the party. Phillips and Bradshaw showed the stuff that was in them. They immediately volunteered to go down the canon at once, knowing little or nothing of its dangers and indifferent to what they did know, but as Kirkby had pointed out, the attempt was clearly impossible. Maitland bitterly reproached himself for having allowed the girl to go alone, and in those self-reproaches old Kirkby joined.

They were too wet and cold to sleep. There was no shelter and it was not until early in the morning they succeeded in kindling a fire. Meanwhile the men talked the situation over very carefully. They were two days' journey from the wagons. It was necessary that the women and children should be taken back at once. Kirkby hadn't been able to save much more than enough to eat to get them back to a ranch or settlement, and on very short rations at best. It was finally decided that George and Pete and Mrs. Maitland, the two girls and the youngster, should go back to the wagon, drive to the nearest settlement, leave the women and then return on horseback with all speed to meet Maitland and Kirkby, who would meanwhile search the canon.

The two men from the east had to go back with the others, although they pleaded gallantly to be allowed man to man and then Robert Maitland, standing in the midst of the group, bowed his head in the sunny morning, for the sky again was clear, and poured out a brief prayer that God would prosper them, that they would find the child and that they would all be together again in health and happiness. And without another word, he and Kirkby plunged down to the side of the canon, the others taking up their weary march homeward with sad hearts and in great dismay.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Telegram and a Caller.

"You say," asked Maitland, as they surveyed the canon, "that she went down the stream?"

"She said she was goin' down. I showed her how to cut across the mountains an' avoid the big bend. I've got no reason to suspicion that she didn't go w'ere she said."

"Nevertheless," said Maitland, "it is barely possible that she may have changed her mind and gone up the canon."

"Yep, the feemale mind does often change unexpected like," returned the other, "but w'ether she went up or down, the only place for us to look, I take it, is down, for if she's alive, if she got out of the canon and is above us, nacherly she'd follow it down yere an' we'd a seed her by this time. If she didn't git out of the canon, why, to remain with the two who were to take up the hunt for Enid. Maitland might have kept them with him, but that meant retaining a larger portion of the scanty supplies that had been saved and he was compelled against his will to refuse their requests. Leaving barely enough to subsist Maitland and Kirkby for three or four days, or until the return of the relief party, the groups separated at daybreak.

"Oh, Robert," pleaded his wife, as he kissed her good bye, "take care of yourself, but find Enid."

"Yes," answered her husband, "I shall, never fear, but I must find the dear girl or discover what has become of her."

There was not time for further leave taking. A few handclasps from all that's left of her is bound to be down stream."

Maitland nodded. He understood.

"We'd better go down, then," continued Kirkby, whose reasoning was flawless except that he made no allowance for the human-divine interposition that had been Enid Maitland's salvation, "an' if we don't find no trace of her down stream, we kin come back here an' go up."

It was a hard, desperate journey the two men took. One of them followed the stream at its level, the other tramped along in the mountains high above the high water mark of the day before. If they had needed any evidence of the power of that cloudburst and storm, they found it in the canon. In some places where it was narrow and rocky the pass had been fairly scoured; at other places the whole aspect of it was changed, the place was a welter of uprooted trees, logs jammed together in fantastic shapes; it was as if some wanton besom of destruction had swept the narrow rift.

Money Concealed in Petticoat.

Mrs. Herman Nicolay of Norwich heard a rustling in one of her petticoats. She ripped it open and found seven certificates of deposit on different banks amounting to $3,700. The petticoat had been the property of the woman's mother-in-law.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM MR. ARMSTRONG

TELLS OF THE GREAT FLOODED DISTRICTS; STRANGE SIGHTS AND SCENES.

Hot Springs, Ark., May 20, 1912

Dear Editor:

A party of three, consisting of Dr. P. L. Hopkins, J. E. Robinson Jr., and myself left Clanton on last Wednesday afternoon for Hot Springs, where Mr. Robinson is to try the curative properties of the famous waters in hope of ridding himself of muscular rheumatism.

We arrived at Memphis Thursday morning just in time to catch the Rock Island train for Hot Springs, our train being more than an hour late into Memphis. The trip west of Memphis carried us through the flooded districts caused by the tremendous rise in the Mississippi. One who has not looked upon the scene can scarcely imagine the wreck and ruin wrought, nor can one form any adequate conception of the extent of the flood.

Crossing the river seemed almost like being at sea; as our train crept slowly along, the water standing up to the rails and in many places entirely over-lapping them, it was our fortune, or misfortune, to behold the most desolate expanse of country any of us had ever seen. As far as we could see, on either side, this vast expanse of angry, muddy-looking water covered the earth, submerging thousands upon thousands of acres, of what I am informed, are the most productive farm lands, to a depth of from ten to twenty feet. For three hours our train glided along over this great inland sea without a foot of land in sight. Fifty miles west of Memphis, near Forest City, Ark., we sighted a little patch of land (perhaps two acres) upon which a number of cattle were marooned. We saw no other living thing in all these miles except those who remained in homes which have not been swept away by the anger of the waters. In many of these houses the family lived in the second story, the lower floors being flooded to a depth of ten to twelve feet. All seemed to be contented, however, and busy with their domestic affairs, eating cooking, housedrying, etc. as if it were but a trifling incident in life. I noticed one party of young people dancing on an up-stairs veranda, the water in the lower floor coming very nearly up to the floor of the second story—It must have been more than ten feet deep there, and I am sure it was twenty miles in any direction to where they could have put a foot upon Terra Firma.

We saw a number of small towns completely surrounded, the water on a level with the second floor of the two-story buildings and reaching up to the eaves of the single story houses.

There are many families living upon clumsy looking rafts, some with no covering whatever, others covered with boughs of trees and others with canvas. One such raft in a town of what seemed to have been a thousand inhabitants or more was equipped for church services, having a pulpit and seats for the congregation. Churches in this place and I could see three of them from the train—were filled with water to a depth of ten to twelve feet. I am informed that a considerable majority of the people in this flooded district are white people; many of the homes are small and inexpensive but there quite a number of really handsome dwellings.

From Forrest City to Little Rock, a distance of about eighty miles, we passed through a section of very fine farm lands, but there [illegible] very little ploughing done [illegible] anything is growing here except weeds and grass, only an [illegible] attempted to crop or [illegible]

We reached our destination safely without any accident, but [illegible] hours [illegible] schedule, because trains have to move slowly over flooded districts. Surely ours must have been the original "Slow train through Arkansas."

Yours,

W. J. ARMSTRONG.

Richmond, Va., May 16.—One hundred and eighty negroes and seventy white men held an insurgent republican convention here today and elected four delegates at large to the national convention, with instructions to support Theodore Roosevelt. The action of the state convention, held in Roanoke in March, was condemned. The new organization will endeavor to have its delegation recognized and seated in Chicago.

SMALL MEETING OF CITIZENS.

PROBABLY NO MANUFACTURING PLANT FOR CLANTON.

The call for a citizens meeting last Friday night had about the same effect such calls usually have—in Clanton. About sixteen gentlemen, eleven in fact, to be strictly accurate, met at the Clanton Bank and discussed the matter with the promoters of the plant. The President, Vice- President, Secretary and Treasurer of the proposed institution were on hand—almost as many as were at the meeting from Clanton—to give such information as was desired, A committee consisting of Messrs. Guy Higgins, C. R. Mullins, Barney Roberts, F. M. Wood and Dr. J. E. Gowan, was appointed to look into the matter further, and to report to a future meeting of the citizens of Clanton, but the committee, after discussing the matter decided as our citizens did not seem to care about manufacturing plants enough to attend meeting it would be unnecessary to make a report, hence, the whole affair dies "aborning."

DEATH OF MRS. W. H. KILLINGSWORTH

Mrs. Eliza Killingsworth died on May 9, 1912, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. K. J. Johnson, at Jemison. She leaves a devoted husband and four sons and one daughter to mourn her loss.

She first married Mr. Isaac Gentry. This union was blessed by nine children, five of whom survive her. After the death of Mr. Gentry she married Mr. W. H. Killingsworth, with whom she lived happily for about twenty-two years.

In early life she joined the Baptist church; although a few months before her death the pastor of the Mount Moriah Methodist church was sent for to receive her into that church. Rev. R. J. Mills performed that sacred duty. From the time she first united with the church of God she lived a cherry, helpful Christian life. Sympathetic words, bright smiles, and helpful deeds were her chief characteristics. Those who knew her best feel certain that she is reaping the reward of perfect peace in that land of endless day where no storm clouds rise.

MAUDE KILLINGSWORTH.

NOTICE.

The Executive Committee of the Chilton County Sunday School Association will meet in Clanton Tuesday, May 28th, 1912, at the Court house at 10:00 a.m. All members are requested to be present.

VICTORIOUS CHRIST HEADS PROCESSION

Leads Multitude of Captives From Death's Prison.

At Boston Pastor Russell Pictures the Release of Death's Prisoners and Shows From Scripture That In the Triumphal Procession Four Grades Will Participate.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Boston, Mass., May 19.—Pastor Russell spoke here today in the Boston Theatre. In one of his two discourses he used the following text: "When He ascended up on high, He led a multitude of captives." — Ephesians iv, 8.

This grand expression respecting the glorious outcome of the Savior's work is quoted by the Apostle Paul from the Psalms (lxviii, 18). The figure thus thrust before our mental eye is that of a great Conqueror whose victory is being heralded. With the Romans we know that it was a custom that generals returning from wars were granted what were termed "Triumphs"—or triumphal processions.

Let us permit our mental eye to feast upon the scene of our text. Jesus, in fulfilment of the Divine Program, had left the heavenly condition and descended to earth, taking a boudman's form or nature in order "that He, by the grace of God, might taste death for every man;" that He might rescue Adam and his race from the death condition —under Divine sentence and under the power of Satan.

Therefore, the Redeemer counted not His life precious to Him, but freely delivered Himself up, and died, "the Just for the unjust," that He might bring mankind back into harmony with God. His humiliation ended in death, but His triumph began when God raised Him from the dead by His own power, and set Him at the right hand of His own Majesty—"far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named."

Leading Forth the Captives.

With most conquerors, in olden times, the captives were made slaves. Not so, however, will be the result of Jesus' victory. First of all in the procession are the saints—"the Church of the First-born." Then will come a company, more numerous, but less heroic—"a great multitude," uncrowned, but with "palm branches," not antitypical Priests, but antitypical Levites, associates and servants of the Royal Priesthood, the Bride.

Then will follow (Hebrews xi, 38-40) other faithful ones of the past, the Ancient Worthies. The Prophet speaks also of the "rebellious house." The classes previously specified were not rebellious, but gladly and willingly forsook all to do the will of the Father and to attain the liberty of sons of God, as the first-fruits of the triumph of the Lamb.

But during the thousand years of Christ's reign He will lead forth the "rebellious house"—the world of mankind—not all of them, we may be sure, for some, the Scriptures positively declare, will die the Second Death, because, after realizing their deliverance, they will love sin and will therefore be destroyed as enemies of God.

"He Gave Gifts Unto Men."

In this prophetic reference to our Lord's ascension it is declared, not only that He would lead forth a multitude of captives, granting them freedom, liberty, blessings, but also that He would confer gifts.

The Apostle proceeds to explain the matter and tells us what gifts are meant. He says, "And He gave some Apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers." It behooves us to notice that the Apostle does not intimate that Jesus gave to some Methodism, to others Presbyterianism, and to others Roman Catholicism, etc. No, when we held such thoughts it was because we failed to see, first, that there is but the "one Church of the Living God, whose names are written in heaven," and second, that that one Church is not any of the various sects and parties, but includes the saintly in all of these. "For the Lord knoweth them that are His."

Noting carefully the Apostle's argument we perceive that the Master did not give these gifts for the conversion of the world. He does specify, however, what they were for, namely, "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ"—the Church, the Bride. Is it supposable that the Apostle erred in this statement and that the fact is the reverse—that these gifts were provided for the conversion of the world, and that the Apostle thoroughly misunderstand the matter? No! We are to be taught by the Apostles, and may be sure that there is no mistake.

The Lord from time to time has raised up evangelists, pastors and teachers for this glorious service of preparing the "chaste virgin," the Church, to be the Bride in glory, but the Apostolic office, as represented in The Twelve, specially provided by the Master, has continued and needs no supplement. We still have their instructions as truly as the early Church, "that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work."

OVER MILLION IN ROOSEVELT FIGHT SAYS N. Y. WORLD

HEADQUARTERS IN WASHINTON ESTIMATED TO SPEND ABOUT $5,000 A DAY.

New York, May 23

More than $1,000,000 has been expended in the campaign to secure the republican presidential nomination for Theodore Roosevelt, and the daily expenses are increasing as the time for the assembling of the Chicago convention approaches, says a special to the New York World. It continues:

The headquarters in Washington is costing about $5,000 a day. There remain thirty days before convention will meet.

Each Roosevelt delegate has cost about $3,000. If the Colonel should obtain 540, the number needed to nominate, and the average cost should remain the same, the total would be $1,620.000.

SPECIAL TRAINS AND OTHER ITEMS.

The items of expense include everything from a postage stamp to a special train, and from an office boy to a general office manager.

It cost $78,000 for stamps to distribute circulars in eight states.

The telegraph tolls have been about $15,000 and the telephone bills as much.

Roosevelt speakers have cost an average of $100 a speech.

The weekly "plate" service to newspapers runs up an expense account of $78,000 or $100,000 for the campaign.

Printing and lithographing will cost $200,000 before the last delegate is elected.

It is estimated that about 1,200 workers were in the field in the Illinois, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Maryland, Nebraska and Missouri campaigns. At St. Joseph, Missouri, workers were paid $25 a day. For several days 1,200 Roosevelt men were at work in two of the Maryland districts. There were 147 in the Seventeenth ward of Baltimore. The Maryland men, it is estimated, were paid at least $5 each a day.

There have been no signs of poverty about the headquarters of the national Roosevelt committee in Mr. Munsey's building since the night that George W. Perkins made the trip to Oyster Bay to carry a message from Senator Dixon, manager of the Roosevelt campaign, to Colonel Roosevelt, who had just thrown his hat in the ring. Before that time the open space on the fourth floor of Mr. Munsey's ouilding looked like a deserted dance hall, but within two hours after Mr. Dixon's return to the city from New York the song of the saw and the ring of the hammer were heard, and soon partitions, doors and private rooms were erected for the great army of Roosevelt boosters.

The Roosevelt committee offices have been alive day and night for three months. Tons of literature have been sent out in every direction. The express bills for incoming and outgoing matter have run up to nearly $25,000.

ELABORATE HEADQUARTERS.

The Roosevelt committee headquarters in Washington is elaborate and up-to-date. The office system is as full of red tape as the White House. The caller is met at the outer door by a negro usher and is given a seat to await his turn. At times the vestibule to the offices has been literally alive with colored republicans eager to make trouble by starting contests. One day eleven negro preachers swooped down on the committee from West Virginia.

The first room after entering the door is occupied by Senator Dixon, who sees but few callers, but is busy with the ones that count. Mr. Dixon works behind closed doors, and the strip of red him between him and the average caller is miles long.

O. K. Davis, managing director, comes next to Mr. Dixon. He has clerks and stenographers at his beck and call. There are expert contest men, typewriters, copyists and dozens of helping girls. Everybody labors behind doors. The only persons within sight of the ordinary caller are the negro doormen.

Colonel Roosevelt announced his candidacy February 24. Immediately his supporters began to organize. Ormsby McHarg, Gifford Pinchot and hundreds of leaders who had been advocating Senator La Follette began to work for Roosevelt. Thousands of copies of the Columbus speech—"A Charter of Democracy"—were circulated. The Carnegie hall speech was sent broadcast throughout the country. The newspaper syndicates were given large contracts to print advertising matter.

Three headquarters, in Washington, New York and Chicago, were set in motion.

The first great fight came in Illinois, where more than $250,000 was spent in vote getting. The Flinn scrip, something new in political methods, was issued in a $100,000 lot. More than $50,000 was spent in New York, $50,000 in Massachusetts and many thousands in Maryland for advertising space in Newspapers and other publications.

Mr. J. A. Brown of Randolph, was here Monday on business. While in the city he left his name and address with the request that the Press be sent to him regularly.

MR. C. C. DEADWILDER PASSES AWAY

A PATIENT SUFFERER FOR YEARS

Last Tuesday morning at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. Joseph Gore, occurred the death of Mr. C. C. Deadwilder, one of Chilton's oldest citizens. For some time past Mr. Deadwilder has been suffering from a stomach affection and about ten days since he was carried to Montgomery for an operation in the hope that his suffering might be rendered less painful and his life prolonged; but after his arrival in Montgomery it was found that he was too weak to undergo the necessary operation, so after a slight operation he returned to Clanton to patiently await the end; all that loving hands and tender hearts could do was cheerfully done for him, and while his departure was not unexpected it is nevertheless a severe blow to his loved ones.

The funeral took place Wednesday at Mulberry, the old family burying ground. Mr. Deadwilder leaves to mourn his loss a wife and two daughters, Mrs. H. H. Smith and Mrs. Jos. Gore.

YOU BETTER CLEAN UP!

IF YOU DON'T THE MARSHAL WILL GET YOU.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found a notice by the Mayor in which he says that on June first the Town Marshal will begin a tour of inspection to ascertain who keep clean premises and who do not; who provides breeding dens for flies and mosquitoes and who do not. He also says that warrants of arrest will be issued for those who do not keep their premises in a cleanly condition and that a fine will be imposed upon all who are found neglectful. Another warning is also given to those who are accustomed to hitching their teams so as obstruct the sidewalks of the town. It frequently happens that horses or mules are tied so close to the sidewalks that passage is completely blocked; hereafter this will not be tolerated by the city officials.

Last week the Press suggested the organization of a "Clean Up Club" and so well did the idea take with the Mayor that he immediately organized one of his own and put Town Marshal Hayes in active command thereof; now if you want to avoid the toils of the law, get busy with broom, hoe, rake and shovel.

Messrs M. C. Broadhead, H. M. Simpson and Samuel A. Hamilton spent last Sunday in Montgomery.

NEWS OF FLOPPING REACHES TAFT MEN

PRESIDENT'S SUPPORTERS IN CONGRESS SORRIEST BUNCH OF POLITICIANS EVER SEEN THERE

Republican supporters of Taft in congress have elongated faces. They are the saddest lot of statesmen ever gathered together in the national capitol.

The news from the Ohio primary has caused bitter disappointment, but not until late yesterday would the average republican give up hope that the president might, by later returns, manage to squeeze out a majority of the Buckeye delegation.

Director McKinley of the Taft bureau could give no encouragement about Ohio, and his claims of delegates in other states they know to a certainty are over-estimated.

To add to their gloom reports reach Washington that flopping to Roosevelt is going on in all sections. News of that nature from New York is alarming. They now admit that Roosevelt will sweep every state in which primaries are yet to be held. There is general fear also that the Southern delegates in large numbers will climb on the Roosevelt band wagon—Birmingham News.

THAT SCHOOL TAX

A MATTER OF MUCH IMPORTANCE VOTE SHOULD BE UNANIMOUS.

On next Monday the people of Chilton county will be called upon to express themselves upon a matter of vital importance to the children of the county. Perhaps no election in recent years has been of as much moment as will the one of Monday prove to be. Not one father in the county but is interested in the material welfare of his children and no equipment which a father can secure for his children compares with a well trained mind. Six years ago the people of the county voted upon the same proposition which will be decided again Monday and so well satisfied have they been with the operation of the law that they will doubtless vote to continue the assessment.

It should be remembered that the assessment asked for is not an increase of taxation; it is merely a continuance of an assessment which for the past six years has been levied and is strictly and wholly for the benefit of the school children of the county.

There should be no politics mixed up in this election; democrat and republican alike should march up to the polls and register their votes as being in favor of the school children.

Notwithstanding this is a very busy season with the farmers, every one should take time to vote. Don't put it off or neglect it because you think the other fellow will vote for the assessment and that your vote will not be necessary. If you haven't any children of your own, then go the polls and vote that your neighbor's children may be benefitted.

This election, unlike others, requires sixty per cent of the votes cast to make it operative; whereas all other elections require but fifty per cent, or a bare majority.

A letter from State Superintendent of Education states that he is anxious to see Chilton register herself as favoring the children of the county and expresses the hope that our county may be the first in the State to set its seal of approval upon taxation for education.

Sheriff Jones and his deputies have been busy all the week sending out election boxes and supplies and it is sincerely hoped that a full vote will be polled at each election box.

Be sure to go yourself and then urge all your neighbors to go to the end that the children of Chilton may have better school facilities and longer terms.

Again we repeat that this is not a political issue, nor is it a new issue; for years this tax has been levied, but under the law the people of the county must, every six years by ballot, authorize the Commissioners Court to levy this assessment; without this authorization the tax cannot be levied and the children will, as a consequence, be the sufferers.

SMITHS NOT GUILTY

JURY REFUSES TO CONVICT

The last few days of the Spring term of the Circuit Court were intensely interesting. The court room was crowded from early morning till late at night with interested spectators, among whom were many ladies.

Perhaps the most interesting case tried was that of Pate and Holley Smith, charged with the murder of Joe Howard. Quite a number of witnesses were examined both for the state and for the defendants. Four speeches were made, two for the prosecution and two for the defendants. Judge Pearson delivered an able charge to the Jury and turned the case over to them for decision. The case was given to the jury Friday night and on Saturday about noon a verdict of not guilty was returned.

Other cases were entered into as follows:—

Joe Culp, C. C. W., jury and verdict of not guilty.

Rolifee Bates, A. I. O. L., nol prossed.

Ben Childress, C. C. W., jury and verdict of guilty; fined $50.00.

Town of Thorsby vs Ben Price, violating prohibition law, jury and verdict of not guilty.

Geo Goodson, S. L., Jury and verdict of guilty; fined $50.00.

Ed Graham, S. L., jury and verdict of guilty; fined $50.00.

Town of Thorsby vs Homer Bruce—appeal—jury and verdict of not guilty.

Dallas Mims, appeal, defendant pleads guilty and is fined $10 by jury.

Arthur Nettles, appeal, defendant pleads guilty and is fined $10 by jury.

D. N. Riggins, appeal; continued.

Chilton County vs Mose Taylor, J. B. Downs and J. H. Middleton, forfeiture, dismissed as to Mose Taylor; judgment against defendants in the sum of $200, but execution suspended till next term of court.

John Perry, burgalry, jury and verdict of guilty.

Ed Stafford and Lottie Moore, Grand Larceny, jury and verdict of guilty.

Albert Kaver, Arson, 2nd degree, jury and verdict of guilty.

Sam Avery, forfeiture, set aside upon payment of costs.

T. R. CAN'T GET IT, BIRMINGHAM REPUBLICANS SAY

BUT THEY ALSO PROPHESY TWO CONVENTIONS AS RESULT OF PARTY SPLIT

(By Dovid Holt)

The heavens are hung with blue about the federal building since the returns came in from Ohio. The only bright lights illumine the few "original Roosevelt men" about the sombre structure.

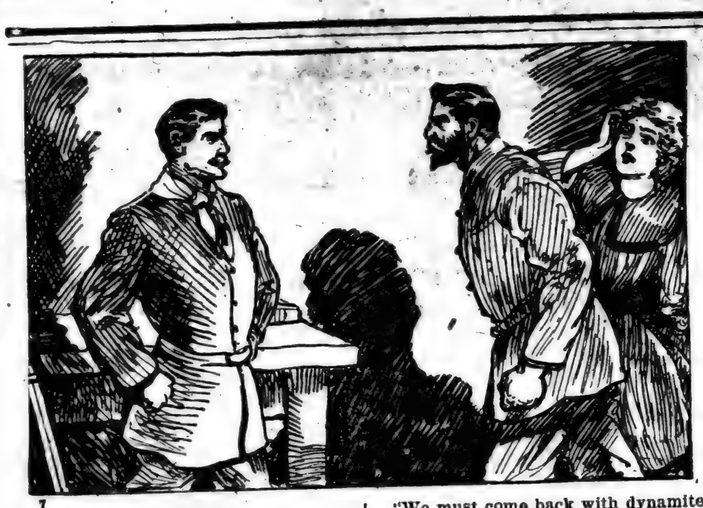
One ray of hope is all that is left to the Taft Supporters, who were so gay but a few weeks ago. That is expressed in the language of one of them, who said Wednesday, "Well, it's a sure thing, Roosevelt can't get it," meaning the nomination of course.

Pope M. Long is at Cordova. Postmaster Aldrich will not talk for publication, but there are those among the Taft men who do not refuse to read the signs as presented to them by the political horoscope.

At the last counting of noses, Taft is said to have had 38 out of the 53 members of the republican national committee "hog tied." It is argued from this that the President will control the temporary organization, and the appointment of the committees on credentials.

At this point the fireworks are expected. It will certainly come with the report of the credentials committee. If Roosevelt sees the cards are stacked against him he will bolt. It was rumored Wednesday that Taft has decided on the same course, if the same job is put up on him.

That there will be two conventions is practically a certainty, according to Birmingham prophets. The uninstructed delegates with those of Lafollette will have the balance of power in the hall where the main show will be held.



Four years ago the contesting delegates from Alabama were "lumped." Their contest ended in a compromise. The same thing cannot reasonably occur again this time. Judge Hundley and Dr. Lewis, as delegates from the Ninth district, certainly have a fighting chance, even before a hostile committee, though it is not probable that the other contestants would be seated, except by a friendly or partisan national committee. Judge Hundley will therefore, be in no position to advise hasty compromise measures. He has a bunch of the most uncompromising Roosevelt men behind him.

Assistant Attorney General William H. Lewis, the negro appointed to that office from Massachusetts by President Taft, was in Birmingham Tuesday, and called upon a number of Birmingham officials of the Taft order. Whether he was on a legal or political commission a casual inquiry could not discover.—Birmingham News.

SCHOOL TAX OF 10 CENTS ON $100

I want to endorse the proposition to levy a special tax of 10 cents on the $100.00 for schools. For several reasons we should favor and vote for this. We have had the levy for the past six years and no one so far as I know has has been hurt by it. We have made progress in the way of good schools, from the three months school of twenty years ago to the five and seven months public school of to day. These schools are telling for good. They are making for us men and women who are capable of filling responsible positions and of whom we are proud. Let us at least hold our grounds.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transform brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl.

CHAPTER VIII. (Continued.)

Ever as they went they called and called. The broken obstructions of the way made their progress slow. What they would have passed over ordinarily in half a day, they had not traversed by nightfull and they had seen nothing. They camped that night far down the canon and in the morning, with hearts growing heavier every hour, they resumed their search.

About noon of the second day they came to an immense log jam where the stream now broadened and made a sudden turn before it plunged over a fall of perhaps two hundred feet into the lake. It was the end of their quest. If they did not find her there, they would never do so. With still hearts and bated breath they climbed out over the log jam and scrutinized it. A brownish gray patch concealed beneath the great pines caught their eyes. They made their way to it.

"It's a b'ar, a big Grizzly," exclaimed Kirkby.

The huge brute was battered out of all semblance of life, but that it was a Grizzly Bear was clearly evident. Further on the two men caught sight suddenly of a dash of blue. Kirkby stepped over to it, lifted it in his hand and silently extended it to Maitland. It was a sweater, a woman's sweater. They recognized it at once. The old man shook his head. Maitland groaned aloud.

"See yere," said Kirkby, pointing to the ragged and torn garment where evidences of discoloration still remained, "looks like there'd bin blood on it."

It Was a Woman's Sweater.

"Great God!" cried Maitland, "not that bear; I'd rather anything than that."

"W'atever it is, she's gone," said the old man with solemn finality.

"Her body may be in those logs there——"

"Or in the lake," answered Kirkby, gloomily, "but, w'ere ever she is we can't git to her now."

"We must come back with dynamite to break up this jam and——"

"Yep," nodded the old man, "we'll do all that, of course, but now, after we search this jam o' logs I guess there's nothin' to do but go back, an' the quicker we git back to the settlement, the quicker we can git back here. I think we can strike acrost the mountains an' save a day an' a half; there's no need of us goin' back up the canon now, I take it."

"No," answered the other, "the quicker the better, as you say, and we can head off George and the others that way."

They searched the pile eagerly, prying under it, peering into it, upsetting it, so far as they could with their naked hands, but with little result, for they found nothing else. They had to camp another day, and next morning they hurried straight over the mountains, reaching the settlement almost as soon as the others. Maitland with furious energy at once organized a relief party. They hurried back to the logs, tore the jam to pieces, searched it carefully and found nothing. To drag the lake was impossible. It was hundreds of feet deep and while they worked it froze. The weather had changed some days before, heavy snows had already fallen; they had to get out of the mountains without further delay or else be frozen up to die. Then and not till then did Maitland give up hope. He had refrained from wiring to Philadelphia, but when he reached a telegraph line some ten days after the cloudburst, he sent a long message east, breaking to his brother the awful tidings.

And in all that they did he and Kirkby, two of the shrewdest and most experienced of men, showed with singular exactitude how easy it is for the wisest and most capable of men to make mistakes, to leave the plain trail, to fail to deduce the truth from the facts presented. Yet it is difficult to point to a fault in their reasoning, or to find anything left undone in the search!

Enid had started down the canon; near the end of it they had discovered one of her garments which they could not conceive any reason for her taking off. It was near the battered body of one of the biggest Grizzlies that either man had ever seen, it had evidence of blood stains upon it; still, they had found no body, but they were as profoundly sure that the mangled remains of the poor girl lay within the depths of that mountain lake as if they had actually seen her there. The logic was all flawless.

It so happened that on that November morning, when the telegram was approaching him, Mr. Stephen Maitland had a caller. He came at an unusually early hour. Mr. Stephen Maitland, who was no longer an early riser, had indeed just finished his breakfast when the card of Mr. James Armstrong of Colorado was handed to him.

"This, I suppose," he thought testily, "is one of the results of Enid's wanderings into that God-forsaken land. Did you ask the man his business, James?" he said aloud to the footman.

"Yes, sir. He said he wanted to see you on important business, and when I made bold to ask him what business, he said it was none of mine, and for me to take the message to you, sir."

"Impudent," growled Mr. Maitland.

"Yes, sir, but he is the kind of a gentleman you don't talk back to, sir."

"Well, you go back and tell him that you have given me his card, and I should like to know what he wishes to see me about, that I am very busy this morning and unless it is a matter of importance—you understand?"

"Yes, sir."

"I suppose now I shall have the whole west unloaded upon me; every vagabond friend of Robert's and people who meet Enid," he thought, but his reveries were shortly interrupted by the return of the man.

"If you please, sir," began James hesitatingly, as he re-entered the room, "he says his business is about the young lady, sir."

"Confound his impudence!" exclaimed Mr. Maitland, more and more annoyed at what he was pleased to characterize mentally as western assurance. "Where is he?"

"In the hall, sir."

"Show him into the library and say I shall be down in a moment."

"Very good, sir."

It was a decidedly wrathful individual who confronted Stephen Maitland a few moments afterward in the library, for Armstrong was not accustomed to such cavalier treatment, and had Maitland been other than Enid's father he would have given more outward expression at his indignation over the discourtesy in his reception.

"Mr. James Armstrong, I believe," began Mr. Maitland, looking at the card in his hand.

"Yes, sir."

"Er—from Colorado?"

"And proud of it."

"Ah, I dare say. I believe you wished to see me about—"

"Your daughter, sir."

"And in what way are you concerned about her, sir?"

"I wish to make her my wife."

"Great God!" exclaimed the older man in a voice equally divided between horror and astonishment. "How dare you, sir? You amaze me beyond measure with your infernal impudence."

"Excuse me, Mr. Maitland," interposed Armstrong quickly and with great spirit and determination, "but where I come from we don't allow anybody to talk to us in this way. You are Enid's father and a much older man than I, but I can't permit you to——"

"Sir," said astounded Maitland, drawing himself up at this bold flouting, "you may be a very worthy young man, I have no doubt of it, but it is out of the question. My daughter—"

Again a less excited hearer might have noticed the emphasis in the pronoun—

"Why, she is half-way engaged to me now," interrupted the younger man with a certain contemptuous amusement in his voice. "Look here, Mr. Maitland, I've knocked around this world a good deal. I know what's what. I know all about you eastern people and I don't fancy you any more than you fancy us. Miss Enid is quite unspoiled yet and that is why I want her. I'm well able to take care of her, too; I don't know what you've got or how you got it, but I can come near laying down dollar for dollar with you, and mine's all clean money—mines, cattle, lumber—and it's all good money. I made it myself. I left her two weeks ago with her promise that she would think very seriously of my suit. After I came back to Denver—I was called east—I made up my mind that I'd come here when I'd finished my business and have it out with you. Now you can treat me like a dog if you want to, but if you expect to keep peace in the family you'd better not, for I tell you plainly, whether you give your consent or not, I mean to win her. All I want is her consent, and I've pretty nearly got that."

Mr. Stephen Maitland was black with anger at this clear, unequivocal, determined statement of the case from Armstrong's point of view.

"I would rather see her dead," he exclaimed with angry stubbornness, "than married to a man like you. How dare you force yourself into my house and insult me in this way? Were I not an old man I would show you, I would give you a taste of your own manner."

The old man's white mustache fairly quivered with what he believed to be righteous indignation. He stamped over to the door and looked back at him. His dog, sensing, his master's anger, had indeed just finished his cheeks redder than ever. The two men confronted each other unflinchingly for a moment, then Mr. Maitland touched a bell button in the wall by his side. Instantly the footman made his appearance.

"James," said the old man, his voice shaking and his knees trembling with passion, which he did not quite succeed in controlling, despite a desperate effort. "Show this—er—gentleman the door. Good morning, sir; our first and last interview is over."

He bowed with ceremonious politeness as he spoke, becoming more and more composed as he felt himself mastering the situation. And Armstrong, to do him justice, knew a gentleman when he saw him, and secretly admired the older man and began to feel a touch of shame at his own rude way of putting things.

"Beg pardon, sir," said the footman, breaking the awkward silence, "but here is a telegram that has just come, sir."

There was nothing for Armstrong to do or say. Indeed, having expressed himself so unrestrainedly to his rapidly-increasing regret, as the old man took the telegram he turned away in considerable discomfiture. James bowing before him at the door opening into the hall and following him as he slowly passed out. Mr. Stephen Maitland mechanically and with great deliberation and with no premonition of evil tidings, tore open the yellow envelope and glanced at the dispatch. Neither the visitor nor the footman had got out of sight or hearing when they heard the old man groan and fall back helplessly into a chair. Both men turned and ran back to the door, for there was that in the exclamation which gave rise to instant apprehension. Stephen Maitland now, as white as death, sat collapsed in the chair gasping for breath, his hand on his heart; the telegram lay open on the floor. Armstrong recognized the seriousness of the situation, and in three steps was by the other's side.

"What is it?" he asked eagerly, his hatred and resentment vanishing at the sight of the old man's ghastly, stricken countenance.

"Enid!" gasped her father. "I said I would rather see her—dead, but—it is not true—I—

James Armstrong was a man of prompt decision, without a moment's hesitation he picked up the telegram; it was full of explicity, thus it read:

"We were encamped last week in the mountains. Enid went down the canon for a day's fishing alone. A sudden cloudburst filled the canon, washed away the camp. Enid undoubtedly got caught in the torrent and was drowned. We have found some of her clothing, but not her body. Have searched every foot of the canon. Think body has got into the lake, now frozen, snow falling, mountains impassable; will search for her in the spring when the winter breaks. I am following this telegram in person by the first train. Would rather have died a thousand deaths than had this happen. God help us.

"ROBERT MAITLAND."

Armstrong read it, stared at it a moment, frowning heavily, passed it over to the footman and turned to the stricken father.

"Old man, I loved her," he said, simply. "I love her still; I believe that she loves me. They haven't found her body, clothes mean nothing. I'll find her, I'll search the mountains until I do. Don't give way; something tells me that she's alive, and I'll find her."

"If you do," said the broken old man, crushed by the swift and awful response to his thoughtless exclamation, "and she loves you, you shall have her for your wife."

"It doesn't need that to make me find her," answered Armstrong grimly, "she is a woman, lost in the mountains in the winter, alone. They shouldn't have given up the search. I'll find her as there is a God above me whether she's for me or not."

A good deal of a man, this James Armstrong of Colorado, in spite of many things in his past of which he thought so little that he lacked the grace to be ashamed of them. Stephen Maitland looked at him with a certain respect and a growing hope, as he stood there in the library, stern, resolute, strong.

Perhaps——

CHAPTER IX.

"Over the Hills and Far Away."

Recognition—or some other more potent instantaneous force—brought the woman to a sitting position. The man drew back to give her freedom of action, as she lifted herself on her hands. It was moments before complete consciousness of her situation came to her. The surprise was yet too great. She saw things dimly through a whirl of driving rain, of a rushing, misty wind, of a seething like of water, but presently it was all made clear to her again. She had caught the bear as he splashed through the creek and tramped across the rocks and trees down the canon, at least she had not seen him full face, but she recognized him immediately. The thought tinged with color for a moment her pallid cheek.

"I fell into the torrent," she said feebly, putting her hand to her head and striving by speech to put aside that awful remembrance.

"You didn't fall in," was the answer, "it was a cloudburst, you were caught in it."

"I didn't know."

"Of course not, how should you?"

"And how came I here?"

"What Is It?" He Asked Eagerly.

"I was lucky enough to pull you out."

"Did you jump into the flood for me?"

The man nodded.

"That's twice you have saved my life this day," said the girl, forcing herself, womanlike, to the topic that she hated.

"It's nothing," deprecated the other."

"It may be nothing to you, but it is a great deal to me," was the answer. "And now what is to be done?"

"We must get out of here at once," said the man. "You need shelter, food, a fire. Can you walk?"

"I don't know."

"Let me help you." He rose to his feet, reached down to her, took her hands in the strong grasp of his own and raised her lightly to her feet in an effortless way which showed his great strength. She did not more than put the weight of her body slightly on her left foot when a spasm of pain shot through her, she swerved and would have fallen had he not caught her. He sat her gently on the rock.

"My foot," she said piteously. "I don't know what's the matter with it."

Her high boots were tightly laced, of course, but he could see that her left foot had been badly mauled or sprained; already the slender ankle was swelling visibly. He examined it swiftly a moment. It might be a sprain, it might be the result of some violent thrust against the rocks, some whirling tree trunks might have caught and crushed her foot, but there was no good in speculating as to causes, the present patent fact was that she could not walk; all the rest was at that moment unimportant. This unfortunate accident made him the more anxious to get her to a place of shelter without delay. It would be necessary to take off her boot and give the wounded member proper treatment. For the present the tight shoe acted as a bandage, which was well.

When the man had withdrawn himself from the world, he had inwardly resolved that no human being should ever invade his domain or share his solitude, and during his long sojourn in the wilderness his determination had not weakened. Now his desire was to get this woman fortune—good or ill!—had upon his hands to his house delay. There was nothing be do for her out there in the Every drop of whiskey was gone were just two half-drowned, bits of humanity cast up on rocky shore, and one was a woman.

"Do you know where your is?" he asked at last.

He did not wish to take her own camp, he had a strange of possession in her. In some felt he had obtained a right with her as he would, he had her life twice, once by chance other as the result of deliberate heroic endeavor, and yet his and his manhood obliged him to to take her to her own people could. Hence the question, the swer to which he waited so eager

"It's down the canon. I am Mr. Robert Maitland's party."

The man nodded, he didn't Robert Maitland from Adam, and cared nothing about him.

"How far down?" he asked.

"I don't know, how far is it here to where you—where—w we——"

"About a mile," he replied, fully understanding her reason faltering.

"Then I think I must have co least five miles from the camp morning."

"It will be four miles away," said the man.

The girl nodded.

"I couldn't carry you that far," murmured half to himself; "I qu if there is any camp left there way. Where was it, down by the ter's edge?"

"Yes."

"Every vestige will have swept away by that, look at it," pointed over to the lake.

"What must we do?" she ask stantly, depending upon his strength, his larger experience masculine force.

"I shall have to take you camp."

"Is it far?"

"About a mile or a mile and from here."

"I can't walk that far."

"No, I suppose not. You w be willing to stay here while I down and hunted for your camp?"

The girl clutched at him.

"I couldn't be left here for ment alone," she said in sudden of alarm. "I never was afraid fore, but now——"

"All right," he said, gently her as he would a child. "Put up to my camp and then I will find your people and——"

"But I tell you I can't walk."

"You don't have to walk," said man.

DOCTORS ADVISED THE HOSPITAL

Mrs. Herberger, Who Would Not Consent to Go There, Finally Relieved At Home.

St. Louis, Mo.—Mrs. Mary Herberger of this city, says: "I was sick in bed for ten weeks, with womanly troubles, and had four of the best doctors waiting on me.

Every one of them said I would have to go to the hospital and have an operation, but I would not consent to that.

I thought I would give Cardui a trial. When I began to take the first bottle, I could not turn over in bed, and had to be lifted.

Before I finished the first bottle, my pains were leaving me, slowly, and soon I was out of bed and walking around.

My pains have not come back, and I weigh 150 lbs. and feel fine. Cardui saved me from an operation. I am going to keep it in the house, and I would not be without it."

Cardui's strengthening effects quickly show themselves in many different ways. This is because the ingredients, from which it is made, go to the source of the trouble, and by acting specifically on the cause, relieve pain, cure and help bring back health and strength.

In the past 50 years, more than a million women have been benefited by Cardui. Just try it.

Ghost Talk.

Aunt Caroline came running into the dining room, her kinky hair on end.

"Misses," she gasped, "I done met a ghost out dar by de well."

"You must have been mistaken Caroline," said the lady of the house. "There aren't any such things as ghosts."

Aunt Caroline drew herself up haughtily.

"Dey ain't, ain't dey? Well, what would you say if I told you this 'un dat spoke to me? Yessum, I heered him."

"Why, what did he say?"

"Say," sniffed the dusky mistress of the meals, "how you specs I know? I ain't learned dese here daid languages."

A "Cuss" Word.

"And why," asks the minister of his caddie, with whom he is playing golf, "do you exclaim 'Gatun!' every time you make a poor drive or miss the ball?"

"Well, you're along," explains the caddie, "and 'Gatun' is about the biggest dam I know of."

There is no reason why you shouldn't try again, even though at times you do succeed.

Beware of Spring's sudden changes; keep Garfield Tea at hand. Drink hot on retiring.

WOMEN SHOULD BE PROTECTED

Against So Many Surgical Operations. How Mrs. Bethune and Mrs. Moore Escaped.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, have my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Murrayville, Ill.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a very bad case of female trouble and it made me a well woman. My health was all broken down, the doctors said I must have an operation, and I was ready to go to the hospital, but dreaded it so that I began taking your Compound. It got along so well that I gave up the doctors and was saved from the operation."—Mrs. CHARLES MOORE, R. R. No. 8, Murrayville, Ill.

SENATOR LORIMER HAS LOST FIGHT

FRIENDS BELIEVE HE IS CERTAIN TO BE OUSTED FROM SENATE.

HE MAY DECIDE TO RESIGN

Vice-President Sherman Goes to Chicago to Notify Senator That All Hope is Gone.

Washington.—Senator Lorimer will receive direct word from his friends in the senate that they cannot hope to save him in his fight for the retention of his seat. While it is not admitted that Lorimer will be urged to resign, it was stated he may decide upon that course.

Vice-President Sherman left here and it was said he would scrutinize a poll just concluded. This poll discloses certain for Lorimer, 40; certain to oppose, 39. It shows 16 as doubtful. There is a vacancy. The attitude of the senators whose votes are classed as doubtful have given the friends of Senator Lorimer much concern. Although nearly a week has gone by since the poll was made the Lorimer supporters have not been able to add a single name to their list.

Lorimer men were forced to the conclusion that the list of doubtful votes was too large to give them any chance to win. This was especially true if the case were brought to a vote. It was decided to submit the exact situation to Senator Lorimer himself. It was decided he should be content to rest on his former victory and the fact that a majority of the committee which investigated the charges the second time had reported in his favor.

One severe blow to the Lorimer forces was the knowledge that Senator Curtis, who voted for him last session, would be against him if the case again came to a vote. Senator Curtis justified his change by his friendship for Clarence S. Funk, of Chicago, general manager of the International Harvester company. The Kansas man said the testimony given in the last case raises a question of veracity between funk and Edward Hines, charged with having said that he helped elect Lorimer.

Mr. Curtis said he believed Funk.

Chicago. — Vice-President James Sherman left Chicago after having spent a day here on an errand, the nature of which he refused to make known. He would neither affirm nor deny that his mission was to communicate to Senator Lorimer the result of the recent poll of the senate on the Lorimer case.

WANTS NO INTERVENTION.

Gomez Cables Taft It Alarms People Who Are Jealous of Independence.

Havana.—President Gomez sent a cablegram to President Taft in which he protests in friendly but firm terms against intervention by the United States.

"It is my duty to say that so serious a resolution alarms and hurts the feelings of a people who love and are jealous of their independence," he says, after reciting that he had received from United States Minister Beaupre a note informing him that the Washington government had ordered a gunboat to Nipe Bay and a strong naval concentration at Key West in anticipation of possible eventualities; and also in event that the Cban government was unable to protect American property, it was the intention to land forces for that purpose.

President Gomez says the government is doing its utmost, having within four days sent 3,000 troops by land and sea to crush the rebels in Oriente and in that short time having restored order in all parts of the island with that exception. He also says that 9,000 rifles with ammunition have been distributed to loyal citizens and that the government is preparing to flood the comparatively small disturbed section with regulars and volunteers.

Guadalajara, Mex., via Mexico City.—This city was again violently shaken by an earthquake. The shock was the heaviest recorded during the present period of seismic disturbances. Cornices of buildings were broken in several instances and many walls were cracked.

Washington.—Two girls apparently between 18 and 20 years old, who were unknown to five men with whom they were making a trip in a steam launch on the Potomac river, were drowned when the craft was run down by a negro excursion boat.

WHITE PLAGUE LESS DEADLY

Decrease in Death Rate From Tuberculosis Means Saving of 27,000 Lives in Ten Years.

In the decade from 1901 to 1910, the death rate from tuberculosis in the United States declined from 196.9 for each 100,00 persons living to 160.3, a decrease of 18.7 per cent, while the general death rate, including all causes of death, declined only one-half as fast, or at the rate of 9.7 per cent, from 1655.0 to 1495.8, according to figures given out by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The figures are based on data abstracted from the reports of the United States Bureau of the census, and cover the registration area in this country. According to the statement, the tuberculosis death rate has declined steadily since 1904, when it was 201.6. On the other hand, the general death rate shows a fluctuation downward in general trend, but not as steady as the tuberculosis rate. The decline in the tuberculosis death rate in the last ten years means a saving of 27,000 lives at the present time.

In Pompeii.

"Look at all this smashed earthenware!" exclaimed the tourist.

"Things were pretty generally shattered," replied the guide.

"I should say so! A volcanic eruption is worse than a hired girl."

BABY'S ECZEMA AND BOILS

"My son was about three weeks old when I noticed a breaking-out on his cheeks, from which a watery substance oozed. A short time after, his arms, shoulders and breast broke out also, and in a few days became a solid scab. I became alarmed, and called our family physician who at once pronounced the disease eczema. The little fellow was under treatment for about three months. By the end of that time, he seemed no better. I became discouraged. I dropped the doctor's treatment, and commenced the use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in a few days noticed a marked change. The eruption on his cheeks was almost healed, and his shoulders, arms and breast were decidedly better. When he was about seven months old, all trace of the eczema was gone.

"During his teething period, his head and face were broken out in boils which I cured with Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Surely he must have been a great sufferer. During the time of teething and from the time I dropped the doctor's treatment, I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, nothing else, and when two years old he was the picture of health. His complexion was soft and beautiful, and his head a mass of silky curls. I had been afraid that he would never be well, and I feel that I owe a great deal to the Cuticura Remedies." (Signed) Mrs. Mary W. Ramsey, 224 E. Jackson St., Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 24, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Simplest Way of All.

The following story the Saturday Evening Post says is told of Col. George W. Goethals, who at the time it took place was an instructor in engineering at West Point.

One day, in a recitation he gave out this question to a class of cadets:

"The post flagpole, sixty feet high, has fallen down. You are ordered by your commanding officer to put it up again. You have under your command a sergeant and ten privates of the engineer corps. How would you get the pole back into place?"

Each cadet, after long consideration and much figuring over the derricks, blocks, tackle and so on, evolved a different method.

"No," said Goethals, "you are all wrong. You would simply say: 'Sergeant, put up that flagpole!'"

VENICE A CITY OF DREAMS

Many Charms for the Tourist In This Picturesque City of Italy.

To the wanderer in Italy, Venice has a peculiar attraction. Arrive there at sunset, or better still by moonlight, and you will fancy yourself transplanted to some city of dreams. With daylight this feeling may wear off to some extent, although there is never, at any time, as much bustle and stir in Venice as in other towns. Morning, noon or night, Venice has a fascination all her own. This is partly due to the fact that she is a city built on the water.

To explore Venice and to become intimately acquainted with her, a gondola is not a necessity, rather it is a luxury for sunset evenings and moonlight nights. It is a delightful experience, and not a difficult one, to find one's way about Venice on foot; quaint, old world corners are discovered, bits of ancient architecture, carved doorways and little bridges, with a feast of color here, there and everywhere. Apart from all the beauty of scenery, there is the enthralling interest evoked by her history and traditions.

Among the traditions we read that St. Theodore was the first patron saint of Venice, to be superseded later on by St. Mark. The wanderer in Venice becomes familiar with the Lion of St. Mark. More prominently than anywhere it is to be seen on one of the columns on the Piazetta, whilst on the other is St. Theodore. These columns of beautiful red and gray granite are supposed to have come originally from Syria. They were erected by a Lombard engineer.—Christian Science Monitor.

WHAT DID SHE MEAN?

Antidrudgery Club.

Six women in Chicago have organized a club to lessen household cares. The club is the possessor of an electric vacuum cleaner, one electric washing machine, two electric irons and a fan for drying the washing.

The only dues are those required for the upkeep of these labor savers, and this amount has been estimated to be about three cents a week. The initiation fee consists of the price of the apparatus divided into six equal parts.

The members arrange their work so that a small boy may take the apparatus around to each in turn. They live in one neighborhood, so the affair is easily arranged. How practical; how easily the idea could be expanded to take in any number of housekeepers. What a help it would be in solving the servant problem.—American Club Woman.

The Negative.

The Questioner—But really, Mr. Smith, if, as you say, you knew I didn't love you, I don't see why you expected me to marry you?

The Rejected—Well, I know you're frightfuly modern and cosmopolitan and all that sort of thing, don't you know; and so, of course, I thought I should come in on the "marriage de convenance" ramp.—The Sketch.

Since our article about the Ohio situation was put in type, news comes that Teddy has captured New Jew Jersey. Well, he ought to have done so; he carried enough mud and money into that state to have captured almost anything.

While the other candidates are making bold claims Underwood—Alabama's Oscar Underwood—is staying on his job and is securing the admiration of all by the dignity of his action; he will also secure sufficient votes to nominate and elect him as president.

There is scheduled a little convention to be held somewhere in this district today that will open the eyes of some folks. Just whether it will be pulled off or not is to be seen, but whether it is or not, word has been "saunt" and our political prophets, prognosticators and students may find some valuable food for thought in a study of the situation.

The unsightly spectacle of a president and ex-president galvanting about the country slinging mud at each other, calling each other a lie and other pet names, will now be spared the country till the republican convention in Chicago.

When men who have been honored as have these two—Taft and Roosevelt—thus barter dignity and manliness for political office, neither is worthy of the place, and the people will so decide in November.

Some days since the General Education Board made a donation of $25,000.00 to Peabody Normal College, Nashville, in memory of Dr. Knapp and for the purpose of furthering the study of rural life. Thif was an act of beautiful recognition of a faithful servant of the people, especially the people of the South, and at the same time the opening of a field of study and research which has long been more or less neglected.

So well does the Advertiser comment upoh the the matter that we copy its editorial in full.

HONORING DR. KNAPP.

The General Education Board honored one of the best friends the South ever had, when it voted to establish at the Peabody College, a school, or department of rural life in honor of Dr. Seaman A. Knapp. The school or department will of necessity confer benefits upon agriculture in the South; it begins conferring advantage, in its very name, for by its name the exceptional work of Dr. Knapp is recognized.

In the beginning of his work for Southern Agriculture, Dr. Knapp went unnoted and unpraised. But he went about that work hopefully and energetically, in time it brought its full measure of results. In time the South freely gave to Dr. Knapp the enthusiastic appreciation to which he was entitled. It was but just that he should live long enough to know that his labors had been crowned with success and that the South held him to be its true and helpful friend.

The Education Board has met aside a fund for the maintenance of this special rural school. It is a fitting monument to Dr. Knapp, for in its way it will carry forward a part of the work he did so well in life.

MOUNT NEBO

Dear Editor:—Please allow me a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words about this place.

The Epworth League met again last Sunday, after having been discontinued for a few Sundays on account of measles and bad weather, and rendered quite an interesting program. Prof. Willie Culp conducted the singing.

Prof. Rufus L. Popwell gave us an interesting talk on the subject of Debt.

Pros. Joseph F. Bone gave us an inspiring talk on Christian Education. Also Prof. Howard Roper made a splendid talk on the same subject. We are glad to have the young teachers in our midst again.

Miss Pearl Durbin read an excellent paper on Cheerfulness.

We are glad to say that we had old Bro. Bone, one of the oldest and most conscientious Baptist ministers of Chilton county, with us in the League service.

The League meets again at regular time, next second Sunday.

Sunshine.

FAIRVIEW.

There will be a debate at this place Saturday, June 1, beginning at 8 p.m. The subject is "Resolved," that teachers should be paid uniformly, according to their grade." Representative for affirmative, Howard Roper. Negative, Rufus L. Popwell. Everybody is invited.

The Epworth League had an interesting meeting Sunday afternoon. Among the distinguished visitors were Prof. J. F. Bone, who addressed the League on Christian Education, and Prof. W. G. Culp, who had charge of the music. We are always glad to have visitors.

There is not much doing along the political line here now. Everybody seems to be taking a rest for the final race.

Let everybody remember the coming election in which the continuation of the special school tax shall be decided. Let each voter consider the vast importance of this tax to the public schools and then vote as his thought directs and there will be no cause for complaint of backward progress. It seems to be a mere question between ignorance and enlightenment. We repeat with the great Scottish statesman, who desired to upbuild his country, "Let the people be taught."

It is over a year since she has had a fit. We cannot speak too highly of Dr. Miles' Nervine."

SEEN THAT SMILE?

IT'S THE KIND THAT WONT COME OFF AND THERE'S A REASON

Have you noticed the happy, proud glow upon the face of Jno. VanDerveer; the elastic step, the breast swelled with manly pride, his face wreathed with smiles and the stately bow which he gives to all his friends these days?

Well, John always was polite but he's amazingly so just now—and there's a reason; yes, reason enough to make any fellow happy and proud. Around at his home is a bright, cherry little fellow who will soon learn to say "papa" to John's call—now isn't that enough to make a man smile? John says the cooing of that particular little fellow is the sweetest music he ever heard and that even his crying is to him, equal to the best of Grand Opera.

Southern.

Nearly $1,000,000 was contributed to the cause of education by the general education board founded by John D. Rockefeller. Of this sum $700,000 was appropriated for distribution among five colleges, the largest contribution, of $250,000, going to the George Peabody college for teachers of Nashville, Tenn., for the establishment of the Seaman A. Knapp school of country life. The sum of $210,000 was set aside for demonstration work in agriculture in the Southern states, for professors of secondary education in state universities of the South, and to aid the work of Negro education in the South. The demonstration work appropriation is $133,000.

At a meeting of the Tennesee alumni of the University of the South, it was stated that two memorials would probably perpetuate the memory at Sewanee of the hero of the Titanic disaster, Maj. Archie Butt. An endowed scholarship or professor ship will be established by the alumni, while the Delta Tau Delta fraternity, of which Major Butt was a member, is planning to erect a new gymnasium in his memory.

With the Mississippi river and its tributaries steadily falling and. no further disastrous crevasses in the levees anticipated, interest in the devastating flood that swept millions of acres of Louisiana's lowlands and stretches of fertil acres in Mississippi and southeastern Arkansas, now centers in the gigantic task of caring for the tens of thousands of people who have been made homeless. More than $1,000 in cash and a still larger amount in clothing and supplies have been devoted to the refugees and there is almost $500,000 in sight for their urgent needs.

General.

Reports received from Oriente province in Cuba and emanating from other than governmental sources leave no room for doubt that the insurrectionary movement in the eastern end of the island, the main theater of the insurgents, is growing at alarming rapidity. Those reports apparently receive confirmation in the extraordinary reticence of the government in its increase of the severity of the telegraph censorship, its activity in enrolling volunteers and the determination to dispatch Maj. Gen. Monteagudo to take supreme command of the troops operating in Oriente.

Prospects of a thrilling race, a wide latitude in betting, and promise of the best "field" that has been entered in a "presidential handicap" for many years, have finally awakened New York's betting spirit, and it is reported that money is being freely offered in wages as to whether Taft or Roosevelt or a dark horse will gain the Republican nomination. Another betting chance is the contest on the Democratic side, with the finals between the two parties as a climax.

According to returns in hand, Col. Theodore Roosevelt's delegates to the national Republican convention carried in the Ohio primary by a plurality of about 25,000 votes. It is scarcely possible that final results from the primary poll will change the number of district delegates from either side by more than one or two. The best figures show that Roosevelt has 32 of the 42 district delegates selected and that President Taft has 10. Governor Harmon, however, is assured a complete delegation of 48 delegates to the Baltimore convention. His lead gives him control of the state Democratic convention, which will select six delegates-at-large.

son's brain was normal.

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, who was Clarence Richeson's spiritual adviser, has issued a statement explaining that certain questions were asked the condemned man as he was being strapped in the chair for the purpose of taking Richeson's mind off his ordeal and to meet Richeson's wish to leave some religious testimony for the witnesses.

The African Methodist Episcopal conference of bishops in session in Kansas City, Mo., voted down an attempt to have the words, "He descended into hell," left out of the Apostles' Creed.

A French dirigible balloon beat the world's dirigible balloon record for altitude. It ascended 9,514 feet.

The interstate commerce commission decided the case of the New Orleans board of trade against several railroads, that the present freight rate of $3 a ton on pig iron from Birmingham to New Orleans was not unreasonable.

Charles W. Morse and Mrs. Morse, who sailed for Europe February 14, shortly after Morse's sentence in the Atlanta pentitentiarfy was commuted by President Taft, returned to this country. Morse talked freely with the newspaper men. As to whether he intended to return to the business world, he said that would depend on how his health keeps up. The former banker declared he gained a great deal by his rest in Europe, and his looks confirmed his statement.

The final session of the German reichstag prior to adjournment to November 29 was a stormy one. The Social Democratic leader, George Ledebour, in referring to the emperor's recent threat at a banquet that he would incorporate Alsace-Lorraine into Prussia, declared: "A people like the English would in a parallel case either have smashed the throne to fragments or have confined a monarch making such remarks in some castle in the same way as had been done to the mad king of Bavaria."

Speeches seconding the nomination of Theodoore Roosevelt for president will be made in the Chicago convention by Judge Hiram Johnson of California; Henry Allen of Kansas, a delegate at large from that state, and Senator Clapp of Minnesota, according to information given out in Washington by close friends of Colonel Roosevelt. It is understood that several speakers from the Middle and Eastern states are also being considered for speeches to second the nomination.

Miss Belle Squire, president of the "No Vote, No Tax League," of Chicago, refused to fill out a personal property tax schedule. Instead, she wrote this letter in a blank space and mailed it to the assessors: "Gentlemen: "Just so long as the county of Cook hands me a tax schedule on the ground that I am a citizen of Illinois and must pay my share of the common expenses, and then refuses me a ballot on the ground that I am a woman, just so long will I refuse to be voluntarily on your lists."

The body of Clarence V. Richeson, who was executed for the murder of Avis Linnell, lay at the North Grove street morgue in Boston. Doctor McGrath, medical examiner of Suffolk county, performed the autopsy required by law, and declared that Riche-

Senator W. Murray Crane of Massachusetts voluntarily announced that he would not again seek re-election to the senate. Thus passes another of the men who were lieutenants of former Senator Aldrich. The latter voluntarily left the senate. Senator Hale of Maine resigned when defeat became apparent and Senator Cullom of Illinois has just been refeated for re-election. Senator Burrows of Michigan lost at the polls, and Senator Depew of New York has retired to private life.

Heroism displayed in the fight against the Mississippi floods has brought to Harry Mill, a Mississippi convict, a pardon from Gov. Brewer, Mills was convicted of murder in Vicksburg six years ago and was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment.

Washington.

An effort to organize cotton growers in the South to remedy the present wasteful conditions and marketing of cotton has been begun by the bureau of manufacturers, according to a report issued in Washington. Commercial Agent J. M. Carson has been assigned to visit the principal points for the concentration of cotton in the South and confer with the men engaged in authority with a view to ascertaining whether a plan for the market could be devised.

The house is holding to its program for adjournment about June 15, although no understanding has been reached with the senate leaders, who are not optimistic. Representative Underwood announced that the program for adjournment on June 15 must be carried out so far as the house is concerned, and said he would insist on sidetracking all legislation there in favor of the approriation bills and a few measures of importance.

Orders issued by the interstate commerce commission suspending advances in class freight rates from New Orleans to Mobile, Selma and Prattville, Ala., and Pensacola, Fla., were vacated by the commission. This action is taken not because the commission doubts that it had authority to enter the orders, but because it wishes to avoid complicating the questions involved in the case of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company against the commission.

In one of the most remarkable speeches of the present session of congress, Representative Dies of Texas, Democrat, assailed former President Roosevelt in bitter terms and referred in almost as bitter fashion to the leaders of his own party, including Speaker Clark and Governor Wilson. Mr. Dies foresaw the crumbying of the republic, the eventual rule of the mob and assigned as the causes the growth of demagogery and influx of ignorant immigrants from southern Europe.

The resolution to make the length of service of the chief executive six years and give to a president but one term, which recently was introduced in the house by Representative Clayton of Alabama, was suggested, the author explained, by a declaration made by President Taft in a recent speech when he said that a president ought not to be permitted to succeed himself. The resolution is now pending in committee. It probably will be taken up for consideration when the resolution to change the date of inauguration from March 4 to the last Thursday in April, is considered.

STATE NEWS OF INTEREST

MINOR HAPPENINGS IN ALABAMA CITIES, TOWNS AND VILLAGES.

40,000 ACRES FILED UPON

More Than Half of That Originally Opened Is Asked For—Applications Received Daily.

Montgomery.—More than 40,000 acres of land in Alabama, recently opened up by the United States government, have been filed upon according to the reports from the land office in Montgomery. The original amount was only 70,000 acres, and already more than half of the whole has been filed upon. Applications are being entered daily at the land office, and the best homestead lands of the state have been taken up.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the proposed bill now pending in the Senate, providing for reducing of the period of residence of entrymen on homesteads from five to three years. It is now considered quite probable that the bill will be favorably acted upon.

Under the provisions of the proposed bill, the entrymen must have one sixteenth of the homestead under cultivation by the end of the second year and one eighth at the end of the third year and until final proof is made. The entrymen may be absent five months of each year. It will be possible under the new bill to reside on the land only twenty-one months, before final proof is made and a title secured from the government.

N. H. Alenxader, of the United States land office, stated that with the interest being manifested in the government lands, and the many entries that are being received at the local office, there will be only a small amount of government land remaining in Alabama, after the passage of the bill.

Tuscaloosa.—Governor O'Neal came here to deliver an address before the graduating class of the University of Alabama.

Aliceville.—Rumor has it that the long talked of Aberdeen and Pensacola railroad when built will pass through Pickensville, Aliceville and south Pickens on the east side of the Tombigbee river.

Tuscaloosa.—Before an audience of over 1,000 people, the Rev. J. T. Plunket, pastor of the South Highland Presbyterian church of Birmingham, delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the University of Alabama.

Girard.—At a call meeting of the city board of education, Prof. R. A. Gamble, who has been principal of the high school for the past year, was elected as superintendent to succeed Prof. W. C. Hughes, who has resigned to enter other employment.

Florence.—After falling 100 feet to the bottom of a well, and a second fall of forty-five feet as he was being brought up by his father, George Courtney, the 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Courtney, of this place, was finally rescued with no worse injuries than a broken arm and a gaping scalp wound.

Marion.—The initial organization of a Boys' Scout club was formed by the election of Rev. Paul V. Bomar, president; H. O. Murfee, first vice president; J. Marvin Moore, second vice president; Charles C. Johnson, secretary; D. K. Mason, treasurer; J. T. Barclay, scout master, and M. S. Corr, commissioner.

Pensacola, Fla.—The British steamer Ludgate sailed for Rio de Janerio with a cargo of 6,000 tons of steel rails, spikes and bolts, the shipment being for a railroad which is being extended for nearly a thousand miles. The cargo is the second to go from the Birmingham mills, and others will follow as 25,000 tons, it is understood, are to be delivered.

Eufaula.—The crop outlook is much more encouraging since the dry season has set in and farmers have been working diligently. Cotton is still being chopped in some sections while in others the stage of the crop is more advanced still.

Birmingham.—The board of directors of the Alabama State Fair and Exhibit association are making the preliminary arrangements for the fair, and fully expect to exceed the splendid fair of last year.

PRESS ASSOCIATION REVIVED

Association Reorganized at Well Attended Meeting Held in Birmingham.

Birmingham.—The Alabama Press Association was revived at a meeting held here and promises to live to a riper, old age.

The forty-first annual session of that organization, which is one of the oldest of its kind in America, was well attended, and plans for a vigorous campaign for further growth were formulated.

The meeting was held at the Chamber of Commerce. McLane Tilton presided and Jacob Pepperman was secretary.

The next meeting will be held in Birmingham Saturday, June 22, at 10 o'clock, when committees on program and procedure, Baltimore outing, and membership, appointed at this meeting will be required to report.

The committees are:

Resolutions—Tucker, Brown and Ward.

Membership—Rosson, Fennell and Wilkinson.

Program and Procedure—Doster Rutherford and Nunally.

A foreign advertising committee was appointed, composed of Tucker, Nunally and Rosson, to which Cleve Up-church, of the Birmingham News, was added in an advisory capacity.

After a luncheon at the Morris Hotel, as guests of McLane Tilton, president the association reconvened to hear an address by Robert Ewing of Birmingham, and for the election of officers.

New officers—President S. H. Nunnellee, Centerville; Vice-President A. B. Tucker, Thomasville; Sec'y. T. R. Rosson, Cullman; Treas. H. S. Doster, Prattville.

Opelika.—The city grammar schools closed after the most successful session in the history of the schools. Prof. F. Hall has been re-elected principal of the city schools. The Lee county high school closes May 31 when an entertainment, "David Copperfield," will be given at Palmer hall. On Sunday, June 2d, Rev. Mr. Grogan, pastor of Court Street Methodist church, Montgomery, will preach the commencement sermon. On Monday night June 3rd, A. P. Montague, president of Howard college, East Lake, will deliver the commencement address, and the graduating exercises will be held.

Gadsden.—Sand Mountain potatoes are later this year than usual. Growers are already being offered $2.25 a bushel for them, and it is not believed the market can be supplied. A few Irish potatoes are already coming into the market, but they were raised on the lowlands, the mountain product invariably being later.

Greenville.—Butler County farmers are making much progress with their crops. Some have finished planting, and many of them have gotten their crops rid of grass. The indications are now that the crops will be late and also short, but it is not thought to be as bad as first anticipated. Some farmers claim they are needing rain.

Sheffield.—Work begun in Sheffield assembling the machinery for the erection of a button factory. The plant will be operated under the name of the Sheffield Button Company, and for the present, twelve saws will be used at the factory, to be increased as the business grows. Mussel shells, from the Tennessee river, will be used for making the buttons.

Mobile.—The fire in the British steamer Alexandrian, was extinguished with but a small loss. The burned cotton and damaged cotton seed and other perishable cargo is being removed from the ship. The stevedores took out of the rull 204 bales of cotton. Of this amount 20 bales were badly damaged. Practically all of the cotton seed suffered water damage.

Montgomery.—The commencement program of the Woman's College of Alabama, May 30 to June 3, has been announced by President W. E. Martin, and contains many very interesting features. Important among the events of the commencement season will be the baccalaureate sermon by Bishop W. B. Murrah, of Mississippi, and a literary address by Congressman Richmond P. Hobson, of Alabama.

Montgomery.—The Alabama Girls' Canning club held a three days' session here. The work of the organization is carried on in connection with the farm demonstration department at Auburn and is under direction of Miss Della Stroud. The canning club numbers a membership of 2,500 young girls of Alabama, and is the largest organization of its kind in the south with the exception of that in Texas, which has 3,000 members.

Montgomery.—Five times as many negro schol teachers as white teachers is furnished the State by Montgomery County through the April examinations. Twelve white persons received certificates to teach, while sixty negroes passed the examination set between them and certificates.

Gadsden.—The Marshall county jail at Guntersville, is without a prisoner. Deputy Sheriff Watson, while in Gadsden, said that the last prisoner has been given his liberty.

ARREST OF A PARIS TAXICAB BANDIT

GOUZY UNDER ARREST

THE photograph shows the arrest of the Paris taxicab bandit named Gouzy, after the murder of Assistant Superintendent of Detectives Jouin. Gouzy, in the disguise of an informer, led Jouin into the trap of the bandits. The latter was shot and killed by the leader of the bandits, Bonnot. The police arrested Gouzy, who was surrounded by an angry crowd and with difficulty was saved from being lynched. Gouzy was implicated in more than 22 murders.

WIFE IS LUMBERJACK

Mrs. Gregory Is Best Man in Maine Camp.

Mere Female Chops, Splits and Piles More Wood Than Most of Them, and as Much as Any of Them, According to Employer.

Manchester, N. H.—Woodbury Bachelder of this city, engaged in the lumber business at Damariscotta, Me., has in his employ a most remarkable woman as regards strength and endurance. She is Mary Gregory, wife of Frank Gregory.

Mrs. Gregory first entered the employ of Mr. Bachelder to provide meals for the 14 men in the camp. This she was able to do and have half a day left, and she asked permission of Mr. Bachelder to take her place with the choppers.

Mr. Bachelder gave his consent, and was astonished to see her perform. She wielded an ax as expertly as any man in the crew, and made a record one day of chopping, splitting and piling three cords of wood, a task that most men hardened to the service of the woods are incapable of equaling.

"She is the strongest woman I ever saw," Bachelder says. "No sooner does she fell a tree than she is on top of it limbing it out, and in every line of work she is the equal of the men in camp. She handles a crosscut saw with all the skill of a man, and not a laborer in the camp can surpass her in the amount of work accomplished."

Mrs. Gregory is 35 years old, weighs about 175, stands 5 feet 8 inches, and is as quick as a flash. She is fond of sport and expert as a wrestler. Mr. Bachelder says he has yet to see a man in camp who can match her at wrestling. She is not afraid to try conclusions with any of them. She has put every man who has been willing to wrestle her on his back and yet is modest in speech and manner, the mother of seven children, a native of Nova Scotia, and prior to making her home in the Maine woods lived in Massachusetts.

Her husband works in the woods with her, but is far from being her equal in strength.

PLAN HUGE OFFICE BUILDING

New York Skycraper In Park Row Rises 750 Feet in Air Will Cost $13,500,000.

New York. — The tallest habitable building in the world is going up on Broadway, between Barclay street and Park row. It will weigh 250,000,000 tons. It rests on sixty-nine pillars of cement, reaching down to solid rock from the street level.

This building, the tower light of which, 750 feet in the air, will be seen ninety-six miles out at sea, has in it 20,000 tons of structural steel.

Forty-five thousand dollars' worth of glass has already been ordered for windows and doors and skylights. In the walls and floors are to be more than 30,000 square feet of hollow tiling and terra cotta. The cement order will run into the tens of thousands of bags.

On the weekly pay roll is a regiment of men from mere lifting and carrying laborers to the circus performing iron workers who play around at 700 feet in the air on slender steel beams like orioles on an elm bough. Their wages run from $1.50 a day for the laborers to $4.50 and upward, and the pay roll is $5,000 a day. This has been going on for two years.

The 30,000 square feet of land on which the building stands cost about $4,500,000. It cost $1,000,000 to dig out the foundations and the basement and sub-basements. The cost of construction will be nearly $9,000,000, making the whole pile an investment of approximately $13,500,000. The mere knowledge that such a building was to be erected on the spot caused the tax assessments on the property to be raised from $2,250,000 to $3,200,000.

There will be a floor space of 23 acres and 2,000 offices, and it is figured that the daily population of the building will be 10,000 and the transient population about as many more

BOY SAVES CHILD'S LIFE

John Crumlish, Aged 14, Rescues Unconscious Four-Year-Old From Drowning.

Wilmington, Del. — John Crumlish, aged 14, of No. 510 West Fourteenth street, proved himself a hero by saving Clark Vernon, aged four, No. 1229 Tatnall street, from what seemed certain death by drowning in the south race in Brandywine Park. Vernon, with several small boys and girls, wandered from home and into the park, and while playing near the water Vernon fell from the retaining wall. The swift current was carrying him away when Crumlish was attracted by the cries of the drowning boy's companions.

Crumlish ran to the wall, saw the drowning boy and plunged into the watetr. He caught Vernon and had a hard struggle to get back to land. Vernon was unconscious, so Crumlish carried him home, where a physician revived him.

BABY WEIGHS 180 POUNDS

But It's an Elephant, Born in California—Mother Tries to Kill It.

Salinas, Cal.—The heaviest baby ever born in America saw the light here in a circus tent. He is a baby elephant, two feet tall, three feet long and weighs 180 pounds. His god-parents say that nothing like him was ever born in captivity on this continent. Alice, the mother, tried to kill her baby. Her trainer, in saving the calf, was hurled twenty feet and a panic was caused among the other animals. Unless Alice relents, her baby will have to be brought up on the demijohn. He is unhurt, pink and healthy.

WIRELESS FOR ARMY FLIERS

Instruments for Aeroplane Use Invented by Officer Weighs Only 25 Pounds.

Washington.—Probably the smallest wireless telegraph set ever made has just been perfected by the officers in the army signal corps laboratory here, and has been sent to New York for the aeronautical show which is to be held there. The receiving and transmitting apparatus weighs only 25½ pounds, and is confined within a box 15 inches square and 16 inches deep. The generator from which the apparatus derives its power adds an additional 26 pounds.

The machine is the reslut of the efforts of the army signal officers under the direction of Maj. Charles McK. Saltzman, to perfect the lightest machine possible for use in the "fifth military arm," or the aeronautical division.

Saws Off Arm, but Lives.

York, Pa.—Falling upon the sliding carriage of the circular saw he was operating near Gatchelville, this county, Elmer Pentz of Harrisburg had his right arm cleally severed at the elbow, and barely escaped a horrible death.

Pentz was hit by the log upon the carriage and his body in some manner became wedged in front of it. He noted his peril and in the short time given him he managed to shift his body out of the course of the revolving blade; but to do so he had to sacrifice the arm.

Other workmen saved him from bleeding to death by making a tourniquet from a handkerchief.

Girl Tries to Commit Suicide

Geisha Driven to It by Monotony of Life.

Girl Says She Doesn't Want to Die Now, but May Later If She Is Seized With Another Melancholy Fit.

Tokio.—A sensation was created in Tokio by the recent attempt at suicide of one of the most famous of the Shimbashi geisha, who are in their turn the most famous of all the thousands of geishas in Tokio.

The first reports stated that the unfortunate lady had been driven to her attempted death by mountains of debt contracted as the result of a passionate attachment to a certain popular actor. The Tokio Asahi, indeed, considered the matter of such importance that after the recovery of the would-be suicide the editor induced her to write the history of the incident and her own feelings during the attempt for the benefit of its readers. Here it is:

"The mere idea of a debt of 1,000 or 2,000 yen could never drive me to suicide. I am subject to fits of melancholy, and when in the grip of one of these I want to get out of the world. Why? Simply and solely because I am tired of life, its monotony and quietness. A geisha's life contains no excitement. It is always the same, day in and day out.

"Politicians call drink, eats, catch mice, dogs watch burglars and men have their constant varying, selfish pastimes and occupations. But the geisha has nothing to do but continue always in the same tiresome groove, dancing and singing, singing and dancing. I thought if I died that I might one day be reborn in the shape of one of those creatures, men, mice or dogs. Therefore, I resolved to die.

"I finished the bottle in one wild gulp. Then the pain began in my chest, and at once the utter stupidity and madness of my wish to die came upon me. All wish of dying vanished. I coughed and coughed, and here I am quite well again. If I get another fit of melancholy I may want to die again, and I may commit suicide at any time, but I don't want to at present; but, in case, I always carry my will about with me in my dress."

Not In Politics

But I am a candidate for your Life and Fire Insurance business. Many of you, both Democrats and Republicans have good homes, that you have, as well as myself, been half a lifetime accumulating. In case of a fire, it would be quite a hardship to rebuild without a little Insurance money to help you. I can insure you in a good Old Line Company for three or five years at a very low rate and you can add a Tornado Wind-Storm Policy for the same length of time at a very small additional cost, and, when it comes to a life Insurance Policy, I defy competition. I have a limited amount of the most attractive and cheapest Policies ever offered for sale by any reliable Old Line Company. These contracts have a disability clause, which means, if you become totally disabled from any cause, your payments cease and your Policy is paid up by the Company. See me now, to-day, or the first time you come to town; better stop your plow and attend to these important matters while you can; your house may burn down to-night, or you may die. If your house burns and you are still living you could rebuild with a little insurance money to help you. But, should you die, your wife and littlehelpless children could never replace you. So come on now and buy you one of these Special Life Policies before they are all gone. As above stated, I have only a limited amount of these and the first comes, the first served. You know it is a duty you owe to yourself, your family and your God, so why not do it now?

Some time you mean to mend your ways, why don't you do it now?
You hope to win the world's praise, why don't you do it now?
You've always read in prose or rhyme, "The present is the Golden Time."
If you are ever going to climb, why don't you do it now?

In short, no matter what you've planned, why don't you do it now?
If you have work right at your hand, why don't you do it now?
Successful men are never late; you'll fail if you procrastinate;
If you have vowed to conquer Fate, why don't you do it now?

This is an appeal to you and I hope you'll 'phone, write or call at my office and give me an opportunity to more fully explain these valuable contracts to you. You need the insurance and I need and will appreciate your patronage.

Respectfully,

SWAT THAT FLY

The Food, Drug and Health departments of a number of States are already busy in preparing for an energetic campaign against the fly nuisance In many states there are rigid regulations in regard to screens and fly poisons, on the ground that for every fly killed now, untold millions may be prevented in August. As the fly breeds once in two weeks and is practically ready for laying within ten days after hatching, and since every female lays 120 eggs—half of which are probably females—it is a simple problem in mathematics to figure how many individuals will result from ten broods. The figures, according to Dr. Lucius P. Brown of the Tennessee Food and Drug department, reach the astounding total of 5,598,720,000,000 allowing until September for incubation.

Here are the figures:

April 15—The overwintering female fly lays 120 eggs.

May 1—120 adults issue, of which 60 are females.

May 10—60 females lay 120 eggs each.

May 28—72000 adults issue, of which 3600 are females.

June 8—3600 females lay 120 eggs each.

June 20—432,000 adults issue, of which 216,000 are females.

June 30—216,000 females lay 120 eggs each.

July 10—25,920,000 adults issue, of which 12,960,000 are females.

July 19—12,960,000 females lay 120 eggs each.

July 29—1,555,200,000 adults issue of which 777,600,000 are females.

August 8—777,600,000 females lay 120 eggs each.

August 18—93,312,000,000 adults issue, of which 46,656,000,000 are females.

August 28—46,656.000,000, females lay 120 eggs each.

September 10—5,598,720,000-000 adults issue.

J. CLAUDE JONES--That's All

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

In view of the present condition of the flooded districts of the Mississippi Valley, the people of these districts are facing a grave problem relative to the crops that may be planted upon the land during ihe remainder of the season. Sweet potatoes constitute oee of the principle sources of food for these people but most of the seed and plants in the flooded districts have been destroyed. It will be decessary to depend upon the highlands for sweet potato plants and cuttings for planting in the low country after the waters have subsided. Many of the upland farmers throughout the South have planted beds for their own use and it is earnestly urged that these beds be preserved and a later crop of plants obtained for sending to their stricken fellowmen in the flooded territory. Any small sweet potatoes that are now on hand could be planted to make plants and vine cuttings. Any farmer having a supply of either seed sweet potatoes or plants will be doing a worthy act if he places these at the disposal of the farmers in the flooded district. The information should be given to the local agent of the Farmer's Cooperative Demonstration Work, who will inform the committee in charge of the work. After the flood has passed arrangements will be made for transportation and distributing the plants.

Very truly yours,
Bradford Knapp,

SCHOOL BOARD NOW COMPLETE

COUNCIL MAKES APPOINTMENTS TO FILL VACANCIES.

The question as to who will be Superintendent of Clanton Academy and who will constitute the corps of teachers will soon be settled.

Since the resignation of Prof. Henson the matter of selecting a superintendent and teachers has been held up because of the fact that there were two vacancies on the board of trustees, Dr. Gragg and Mr. Davis having resigned.

On last Monday the Council appointed Judge L. H. Reynolds and Mr. Jno. W. Stanfield to fill these vacancies, and with the board completed the task of selecting a faculty will doubtless be taken up at once.

The board now consists of Mr. C. Reese Mullins, Chairman; Dr. E. E. Upchurch, Messrs. H. T. Pipes, Jno. W. Stanfield and Judge L. H. Reynolds, a most excellent board.

In the selection of Judge Reynolds and Mr. Stanfield the Council has shown good judgment, for both gentlemen are staunch friends of educational institutions and will, without doubt, render valuable service in bringing Clanton's school up to a high standard.

VOL 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1912 NO. 11

Superintendent Elected

Prof. J. J. Pickens, Former Prof. of Mathematics Gadsden City Schools, Elected Superintendent Clanton Academy

The City council having filled the two vacancies on the Clanton School Board by the election of Judge L. H. Reynolds and Mr. Jno. W. Stanfield, mention of which appeared in the Press last week, the full board met last Monday night for the purpose of selecting a Superintendent for the ensuing term. A number of applications had been filed with the board, all of which they went over carefully. After giving each due consideration, the board unanimously elected Prof. J. J. Pickens of Gadsden as superintendent.

From all reports this seems to have been a most wise and happy selection.

It was the pleasure of the Press man to read some of the nice things said of Prof. Pickens by his former friends and associates, and if half of what they have to say is true the board has made no mistake in its selection. We have no doubt whatever that every word said of him is strictly true.

Prof. Pickens has been filling the chair of mathematics in the Gadsden city schools, and was elected for another term but preferred to make a change where the field for usefulness would be enlarged. He is a high toned, cultured, christian gentleman; he has his heart in educational work and is a capable disciplinarian. He will remove to Clanton within a short time and throw himself into the work of organizing his forces and making preparations for the coming session

Now let Clanton realize its opportunity; let its citizens lay aside all personal prejudices, animosities and any other selfish interests that may conflict with the rule of the greatest good to the greatest number," and let them unite with Prof Pickens in making Clanton school one of the best in the state. Should he not happen to be your personal choice, recognize the fact that the school board is in better position to judge of qualifications than you are; give him your hearty encouragement and your earnest support and he will make you a school of which every citizen may well be proud.

Do not let politics, religious faith or personal feelings enter into the matter of building the school—make it a success because it deserves to succeed; make it a success because upon its success depends the future welfare of your children and your neighbor's children.

As to what denomination Prof. Pickens belongs, with which political party he affiliates was not asked by any member of the board, and the information comes that not a member of the board knows where he stands with reference to either, the fact that he was a capable teacher, a christian gentleman and an educator was all they cared to know—that is enough.

BACK TO THE OLD SYSTEM.

WHETHER BACKWARD OR FORWARD, IT PLEASES.—THE WORLD PROGRESSES, BUT—!

The County Commissioners are in session, and have been since Monday, going over the assessment books of the county with a view to equalizing the taxes. This task will probably consume the entire week.

Up to the time this article is written Mr. Milling has not been present with the other members of the board, but it is likely that he will come in before the court adjourns.

Yesterday during a resting season the Court discussed, informally, the matter of going back to the old road system; it was decided that while the court was fully convinced of the virtues of the present road law, the clamor for the old system and the present condition of the roads demanded that steps be taken to satisfy the people generally.

This does not mean that they assume any responsibility for the floods in the early part of the year which put the roads in their present condition, or that they think a return to the old system will be entirely beneficial, but it does mean that if the people wish to return, they will not oppose it; if the people wish to use antiquated methods rather than methods which have proved successful elsewhere; if they prefer to spend their money upon impractical, visionary schemes, rather than upon propositions which have wrought well in other sections they will interpose no objection. Then, too, it means that if the old method is to be adopted that every section of the old road system will be vigorously enforced; that every person subject to road duty will be required to perform that duty; it means a strict enforcement of the road law without regard to persons or things. The season is now upon us when the roads can be worked; let's see what the old law will do for them without giving the new law a fair chance to show what it will do.

POLITICAL PROSPECTS LOOK GLOOMY TO REPUBLICANS

THEY CAN SEE NOTHING BUT TROUBLE WHICHEVER WAY THEY TURN.

STORM TIMES AHEAD.

Washington, June 8

What is usually called a "high old time" in political circles is looked for at Chicago when the National Republican Committee gets to work on the 222 contests that have been filed by the rival factions contending for supremacy in the "grand old party."

The average Republican Congressman who had been heard to express an opinion regarding the outlook takes a gloomy view of the situation. He cannot see anything but trouble for his party no matter which side engaged in the struggle comes out ahead.

There is lots of talk about a bolt if the Roosevelt people lose, and for a week or more the story has been going the rounds in Washington that unless there has been a lot of flopping on the part of members of the committee the administration people propose to run the "steam roller" over the Roosevelt fellows in rough fashion.

The contests filed by the Taft supporters are chiefly in the states of Missouri, Texas and Washington, with a few scattering ones in other states where only district delegates are being fought for. The contests on behalf of Roosevelt embrace more districts in the South than in any other section.

CONTESTS IN THE SOUTH.

They include Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. In the Western States the backers of Roosevelt are contesting the seats of the delegates at large from Michigan and Indiana, and three districts in the latter state

According to the best information that now seems obtainable the members of the National Committee are going to handle the contests from the Western States with caution. They are known to realize that if unfair methods are resorted to in those states for the benefit of either Taft or Roosevelt, it will result in a split among the Republicans that cannot possibly be healed between now and the November election.

But when it comes to the South it will be different. One can hear constantly in political and legislative circles that the committee need no fear about what they do with the contests from the land of Dixie, inasmuch as the Republican party cannot reasonably hope for a single electoral vote in the states ordinarily grouped as Southern.

Besides those chaps down in the land of Dixie are used to contests, for they have been involved in them for many years. They have had the "steam roller" to contend with before, notably at the Chicago Convention four years ago when the Roosevelt administration worked it to perfection in order to crush out out the "allies" and nominate William Howard Taft as the successor of Theodore Roosevelt.

STIRRING STRUGGLE PREDICTED.

Republican members of Congress who claim to be in close with the party politicians in their states seem generally inclined to admit that on account of the ferocity with which Roosevelt has conducted his campaign that the preliminary struggle at Chicago will be the most stirring one imaginable.

It should be borne in mind that the large majority of Republican Senators and Representatives are Taft supporters. The President is not their choice because they want him but because they prefer him over Roosevelt.

Many admit privately that it would be better for their party to lose with Taft than to win with Roosevelt. They take this position on the theory that even if the President is beaten at the polls there would be some hope of reorganizing the party, but with Roosevelt nominated they feel that the Republican organization will be wrecked.

Of course such talk as that makes the ardent supporters of Roosevelt hot around the collar. They stoutly contend that the Colonel is the only man at this juncture of affairs who can prevent the "grand old party" from going to pieces.

SEVERAL BIG BLUFFS.

The general impression in Washington, based on information which comes to public men from the various states, is that the managers of both the Taft and the Roosevelt campaigns have been putting up big bluffs as to the actual number of delegates each candidate can safely count upon at Chicago in advance of the settling of the great number of contests before the National Committee. And when it comes sifting things down it looks as if the question of the nomination will depend this time on which candidate gets the greater portion of the delegates from the South in the general roundup.

It remains to be seen how the Southern delegates will vote after the contests are decided should the committee in a considerable majority of these cases give the Taft people the advantage. "Will they stick to Taft of flop to Roosevelt?" is a question that is being freely asked.

It is well to bear in mind that of the 222 delegates whose seats are to be contested at Chicago, 156 are from Southern States, as follows: Alabama, 14; Arkansas, 16; Florida, 12; Georgia, 28; Kentucky 4; Louisiana, 20; Mississippi, 18; North Carolina, 2; South Carolina, 2; Tennessee, 4; Texas, 28; Virginia, 18.—Advertiser.

A TRIUMPH IN MEDICINE

BEARLAX

Substitute For Calomel

Thousands of commercial travelers now constantly carry with them a bottle of BEARLAX (liquid laxative.) BEARLAX is a safeguard against torpid, inactive liver and attendant ills which are the results of irregular hours, change of water and sometimes poorly cooked food.

A torpid or inactive liver means bad health, and may bring on a train of ills—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Flatulence, Foul Breath, Constipation, Biliousness, Jaundice, Chills and Fever, Sour Stomach, Piles, Loss of Appetite, Loss of Flesh, Sleeplessness, Low Spirits, Heartburn, Dizziness, Bilious Colic, Nervousness, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Blood Impurities—all these, if not actually caused by the torpid liver, are each and every one made worse by it.

BEARLAX (liquid laxative) does not simply move the bowels—it acts upon the function of the liver itself, tending to put it into healthy condition, produce alterative effect and restore healthy action to the bowels and helps to purify the blood. Mild and safe. 50c at dealers or by express, prepaid. Money back if not satisfactory.

BEARLAX GLYCERINE SUPPOSITORY

FREE! For IMMEDIATE RELIEF, in cases where suffering is intense, and where even the short time required to permit BEARLAX to act cannot be spared, we send FREE with each bottle of BEARLAX one Glycerine Suppository. This Suppository when inserted into the rectum, at once softens the accumulated matter and promptly results in a pleasant and thorough evacuation of lower bowels within 5 to 8 minutes. BEARLAX, Liquid, Laxative, is then taken, for the tonic, to act upon the liver, stomach and intestines, as the Suppository does not affect them—hence but to relieve immediate distress.

Tabulated Statement

People Voted Almost Unanimously; Some Queer Voting; Schools not to Retrograde But Progress.

We give below, a tabulated statement of the vote cast in last Monday's election, at which time it was sought to be decided whether or not the Court of County Commissioners should be empowered to levy a tax of ten cents on each one hundred dollars of taxable property for the benefit of the schools of the county. Under the law, as has been before stated, it was necessary for the people of the county to authorize the Court, by their votes, before such a levy could legally be made. It will be observed that while a full vote was not cast in any precinct in the county, yet the vote that was cast was sufficiently large to indicate the willingness of the people to be taxed for the sake of educating their children. This speaks well for our people; it is a silent, yet emphatic warning to the people who are opposed to education that they need not look for recognition among the people of Chilton. Strange to say, in several precincts the vote against the proposition was abnormally large—so to speak; just why any person, big or little, high or low, rich or poor, great or small, fat or lean, blonde or brunette, young or old, married or bachelor, should wish to keep the children of the county in ignorance, when it costs but ten cents of each one hundred dollars of taxable property owned, is a mystery which the PRESS does not pretend to penetrate. Perhaps some were acting upon the theory that "where ignorance is bliss, tis folly to be wise"; others doubtless voted against the measure because they thought it an actual increase in taxation—but why they should have thought so is another mystery, for both papers, republican and democratic, have tried to hammer it into the minds of the people that it was not an increase, was not a new measure and was not a party scheme; surely there is no voter in the county who does not read one or the other of the papers; if so he should get busy and subscribe. It is just such persons who sometimes wreck the best propositions for civic advancement and improvement. Then there may have been others who, feeling that the government should be "paternal" in all things, should tax the other fellow to educate his children. and therefore, voted against the measure with the idea that if he did not send his children to school with his own funds and the funds of his neighbors, the state or the nation would tax some outsider, and give his children an education. This theory is Utopian, but this is not Utopia, and till the dawn of millennium, will probably not come to pass. There is yet another class who, owning no property, are always "agin the guvernment," and oppose everything that tends to advancement; it costs them nothing—they pay no taxes, just merely vote "agin" everything and anything. We suspect that a large per cent of the negative votes come from this direction.

Nevertheless, the proposition carried almost unanimously; the children are safe for another six years; the educational facilities of the county will not be crippled for another half a dozen years—the people of the county, by their votes have said so.

The following is a tabulated list of the votes cast:

Precinct	Box	For	Against
Mullins Sch. H.	1	21	3
Jemison	1	40	0
Mars Hill	2	30	2
Benson	1	25	5
Clanton	1	162	12
Verbena	1	24	15
Mt. Creek	2	15	8
Kincheon	1	29	0
Enterprise	2	30	0
Maplesville	1	18	2
Shoultz	2	9	0
Stanton	1	--	-
Riderville	2	--	-
Thorsby	1	55	1
Cooper	1	42	2
Evergreen	2	12	0
Cane Creek	1	23	0
Mineral Springs	1	28	2
Cofer's Gin	2	30	0
Ocampo	1	20	0
Concord	2	--	-
Macedonia	1	19	0
Pletcher	1	25	7
Culp's School H.	2	27	0
Providence	1	25	0
Total		709	59

From the above it will be seen that the proposition carried by a vote of more than 13 to 1; there being but 59 votes in opposition to the proposition while there are 709 in favor of it. The surprise of the election turns out to be Verbena and Mountain Creek, in both of which places the vote was less than two to one in favor of the tax.

Besides this there are three precincts which have not reported—Riderville, Stanton, and Concord, which, if they have kept up the ratio maintained over the county, will make the total vote something over eight hundred and in the neighborhood of fifteen to one.

KNIGHTS OF THE MACCABEES

LODGE ORGANIZED HERE LAST FRIDAY NIGHT.

Clanton can doubtless lay claim to more lodges than any other town in the world her size—and strange to say, all are in flourishing condition. There are, perhaps more Shriners in Clanton than in any other city of like population; the Masonic order is most popular of course, since that is the mother of all secret orders; then the Odd Fellows have a magnificent chapter here; the Red Men claim the largest membership, and they are jolly good feilows too; then there's the Woodmen of the World, and the Columbian Woodmen, each with an enthusiastic membership; and now comes the Knights of the Modern Maccabees which was organized last Friday night with eighteen charter members, and with several more to be initiated at the next meeting.

For the present the Maccabees are quartered in the Odd Fellows' Hall till arrangements can be made for a permanent home.

The following officers were elected for the new order and were installed Friday night:

Past Commander, J. M. Robinson; Commander, W. A. Edwards; Lieut. Commander, J. W. Franklin; Record Keeper, J. Claude Jones; Finance Keeper, W. J. Armstrong; Chaplain, Harris Kanjutzky; Physician, Dr. H. F. Downs; Seargent, B. F. Massey; Master at Arms, W. F. Culpepper; First M. of G., N. W. Deloach; Second M. of G., J. S. Parrish; Sentinel, G. O. McKee; Picket, W. J. Watson.

Mr. Thos. McCumber of Birmingham, who organized the lodge, worked faithfully to train his officers, and is much pleased with the results of his labors. He left Monday for Maplesville, where he hopes to organize another chapter.

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

An appeal from Plaucheville, La., flood relief committee, asking for the immediate dispatch of food supplies, field and garden seed for 60 families in that section, has been received in New Orleans by the local relief committee. The Plaucheville committee request that conditions be investigated without delay.

At a general meeting of the members of the Savannah (Ga.) cotton exchange, the special committee appointed to look into penalizations of cotton at Bremen on appeals recommended that a special committee be appointed to investigate conditions at Bremen. The committee stressed the fact that it was yet to be determined whether, or not, any unfair or unjust penalization had been exacted. The Bremen cotton exchange urged that a committee be sent over to investigate for the local exchange.

Seven persons were killed, three were probably fatally injured and a score or more were less seriously hurt when a tonado swept through the village of Skiatook, Oklahoma, 18 miles northwest of Tulsa, and the neighboring farming lands and oil fields. The property loss is estimated at $75,000. The storm, which aproached from the northwest, swept down the valley for five miles and through a heavily wooded forest before it struck the town of Skiatook.

General.

Friends of Senator Lorimer of Illinois reiterate their statement that he positively will not resign. The senator, however, declines to discuss any phase of his case. It is stated that the senator's physical condition is still poor, but that he intends to fight out the battle with his opponents there is now no doubt.

The ice box of the steamer Panama which arrived from Colon, contained a discharged United States infantryman who went out of his head during the northward trip and tried to take charge of the trip. The ice box was converted into a temporary prison after Victor L. Kenney, who had just completed his service in the Tenth infantry, sauntered on deck in his underclothes, frightened the passengers below and then informed the captain he would navigate the ship, which was on its way to New York City. Kenney was overpowered after a fight.

In a wagon so ingenuously constructed that it may be converted into a "dinner," "sleeping' or "dressing-room," Dr. Oscar P. Blatchly, a retired physician of Kansas City, Kans., with his wife and daughter started on a 5,000-mile drive that will take the travelers from there to Vermont, thence down the Atlantic coast to Florida and then back home. It will require a year to make the journey as planned. Doctor Blatchly, who built the wagon himself, said the trip, besides being pleasure, was to give his 12-year-old daughter practical knowledge of botany, geography, geology and photography.

With a smile and a wave of his hand to thousands who watched him in his aeroplane, Philip O. Parmalee took the air in the teeth of a gusty wind. Three minutes later his broken and lifeless body was dragged from beneath the wreckage of his biplan in an apple orchard two miles from his starting point, North Yakima, Wash. The exact cause of his plunge to death probably never will be known. His body was dragged from the wreckage of the machine by farmers working in the orchard.

President Gomez of Cuba telegraphed General Monteagudo, the commander-in-chief of the Cuban army, who is at the scene of hostilities in the province of Oriente, stating that the general might permit American marines to land on Cuban soil to guard foreign property.

Three hundred operatives in the mills of the American Woolen Mills at Lawrence, Mass., joined the operatives of the carding and combing rooms of the wool mill, who went on strike because other operatives in those rooms refused to become members of the Industrial Workers of the World.

The right of the government to bring proceedings to cancel a certificate of citizenship on the ground that it was illegally or fraudulently procured was sustained by the United States Supreme court.

About 2,000 garment workers employed by a Chicago tailoring concern walked out on a strike.

Each member of the Irish-American team which contested at the annual games for the benefit of the Manhattan State Insane asylum in New York is the proud possessor of a check for one milion dollars signed by one of the inmates.

The new military airship, Zeppelin III., arrived in Hamburg, Germany, having covered the course from Friedrichshaven to Hamburg, approximately 450 miles, in 10 hours and 25 minutes. Count Zeppelin piloted the dirigible on its maiden voyage, which lay over Basel, Frankfort-on-the-Main, Goettingen and Bremen. Making an average speed of about 43 miles an hour, the airship easily exceeded the requirements of her specifications, which called for a speed of 38 miles an hour.

Plutano, the last of the famous pair of "wild men of Borneo," died at the home of Mrs. H. A. Warner, in Waltham, Mass. Plutano is believed to have been about 92 years old, and with his brother, Waino, who died in 1905, had traveled all over the world. Plutano and Waino were brought on a ship to New York in the early fifties, and were said to have been captured on the island of Borneo. Since 1857 the "wild men" had been in the care of Capt. Hansford A. Warner, or one of his descendants. It was found to be impossible to teach the little men to speak English.

Democratic voters of Rhode Island at the presidential preferential primary, favored Champ Clark by a large majority over Woodrow Wilson and Judson Harmon, the other two aspirants. The vote was light.

Returns from about twenty counties in Minnesota where conventions were held show that a large number of uninstructed delegations were elected to the state convention at Duluth. This was true, even where delegates selected at the caucuses had been instructed. The returns indicate, however, that a larger number of delegates were instructed for Wilson than for the other candidates. In several counties William J. Bryan was named as first choice and in others as second choice. Champ Clark will make a good showing in the convention.

With the pronouncing of the benediction by the venerable Bishop Henry W. Warren, the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church closed in Minneapolis, Minn. The conference approved the amendment to the constitution of the "bishop of races" clause. The clause was favored by the Episcopacy committee and, after a lengthy debate, participated in principally by the negro delegates of the South, was adopted 520 to 45.

Washington.

Appropriation bills will be pressed, the tariff revision fight continued, the Lorimer election case debated and other legislation discussed in congress this week. Every effort possible is being made to get the government supply measures through on a right of way understanding in both houses so that they may be secure regardless of a time for final adjournment, which is still speculative. The fight on the naval appropriations bill will be precipitated in the senate with indications favoring the administration's two battleship annual increase program to be determined by the senate committee on naval affairs. The next project to be taken up will be to provide for a store of coal of 160,000 tons at the Norfolk navy yard, which is to be made one of the most important coal depots on the Atlantic coast.

Attorney General Wickersham has authorized a Federal grand jury inquiry at San Diego, Cal., into the activities of the Industrial Workers of the World. This action is in response to the appeal from the city authorities, who charge that the industrial workers have offended Federal laws by seditious activity, and also by violation of American neutrality in connection with statements regarding Mexico. The United States attorney at Los Angeles has been given authority to lay the matter before the grand jury at San Diego.

The senate passed unanimously the bill appropriating $150,000 for the government's participation in the peace jubilee at Gettysburg in 1913 on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle. At a joint meeting of the Pennsylvania-Gettysburg celebration commission and the representatives of the states, it was decided to abandon for the present the movement for an appropriation of $500,000 or more for the erection upon the battlefield of a peace memorial.

Blame for the Titanic disaster is chargeable directly to the failure of the dead Captain Smith to heed repeated warning of icebergs ahead, but responsibility for unnecessary loss of life must be shared by Captain Lord, of the steamship Californian, through his disregard of distress signals. This is the finding of the senate committee which investigated the sinking of the Titanic, as prepared in a comprehensive speech delivered by William Alden Smith of Michigan, chairman of the committee. Senator Smith declared that responsibility also rests upon the British board of trade, "to whose laxity of regulation and hasty inspection the world is largely indebted for the awful fatality."

The addition of water to canned products will be considered adulteration in future, except in those cases where a certain amount of water is required for the proper proportion or for the sterilization of the product, according to a pure-food decision signed by Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture. "The can in canned food products serves not only as a container, but also as an index of the quantity of food there," the decision says. "It should be as full of food as is practicable for packing and processing without injuring the quality."

INTERESTING STATE ITEMS

NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF ALABAMA BOILED DOWN FOR HASTY PERSUAL.

O'NEAL GIVES OUT INTERVIEW

Charges Organized Effort of Favored Interests in Jefferson County to Evade Law.

Montgomery.—Declaring that there is an organized effort on the part of certain favored interests in Jefferson county to nullify the tax laws of the state, and to prevent the wealthy property owner from bearing his just burden of taxation; that many of those who are loudest in their protests are assessing their property at less than 30 per cent, and that no law-abiding citizen should undertake to soothe his conscience by the derelictions of his neighbors, Governor O'Neal issued a strong interview regarding the work of the state tax commission in Jefferson county. The governor declared that the movement to nullify the tax laws of the state was led by the repreaentatives of "big business." That the most tax dodgers are to be found in the ranks of those best able to contribute to the support of the government, and that such a movement, inaugurated by small property owners would be regarded as socialistic and anarchistic in its tendencies.

Montgomery.—The Woman's College of Alabama is to have a library building. The structure is to be erected at a cost of $50,000 and will be named the Massey building in honor of Dr. and Mrs. John Massey, who for more than a quarter of a century were connected with the Alabama Conference Female College, which later became the Woman's College. This was decided upon at a meeting of the alumni of the old school, when a permanent organization was effected and plans were laid looking to the commencement of a campaign to raise the funds necessary to carry out the project.

Gadsden.—The grand jury convened for a session of one week. The most interseting feature will be the final report, which has never been made, the jury having been taking a series of recesses ever since it was organized last January. On Monday of next week Judge Bilbro will convene a week's jury term of the criminal division of the City Court of Gadsden for the purpose of trying some of the more important cases on the docket.

Selma.—J. H. Wood, who has been conducting a blacksmith business at Benton, for some months past, was shot and instantly killed on the streets of the village by Herman Hrabowski. According to reports from Benton, Mr. Hrabowski had not been arrested although he was still at his home there. Particulars concerning the leading up to the tragedy on the streets of Benton received here are most meagre.

Gadsden.—There is a strong sentiment in favor of the commission form of government for Gadsden. A petition has been sent to Governor O'Neal asking him if he will appoint the commissioners if the people of the city name the men they want. If he will consent to do this it is believed that an election will be held at an early date and that the new form of government will be adopted.

Tuscaloosa.—The University summer school opened June 6 and the prospects are very bright for a record breaking attendance. The request for rooms in the dormitories is far in advance of anything in several years and the University authorities think that it will be necessary to ask the citizens of Tuscaloosa to accommodate some of the students before the session is over.

Montgomery.—Marked by ceremonies solemn and impressive, as befitted the occasion, the cornerstone of Julia Pratt hall, the handsome new dormitory of the Woman's College of Alabama was put in place. The ceremonies were witnessed by a goodly gathering of the friends of the institution. In the throng was Mrs. Pratt, after whom the hall takes its name.

Columbiana.—Fire here destroyed two frame store houses owned by J. L. Peters and Rev. S. R. Lester. It is believed that the loss will be covered by insurance.

Jacksonville.—The summer school of the Jacksonville State Normal school has opened with a large enrollment from all sections of the state, 43 counties being represented. The registrar reports that many others are booked to enroll. The school continues till the state examination in July.

Selma.—The closing exercises of the Dallas Academy, which were held at the Academy of Music were the most brilliant in the history of that institution.

HEAVY SHIPMENTS OF METAL

Approximately 15,000 Tons of Iron Will Be Shipped From the Birmingham District.

Birmingham.—Heavy shipments of pig iron and steel rails are going out of Birmingham. The first shipments of a large consignment of export pig iron to South America left here via New Orleans for South America. Approximately 15,000 tons of iron will go out of the district consigned by the Tennessee company to South America. In addition shipments of iron to Italy have also begun.

The steel rail market is active. It became known that the Ensley mill has been given a contract to make 13,727 tons of steel rails out of an order of 84,552 tons just placed by the Harriman lines with the leading rail mills of the country. The plants of the Colorado Fuel and Iron, Illinois Steel, and Pennsylvania Steel companies get the majority of the order. The Harriman lines have asked for 34,144 of 90 pound steel rails and 12,608 of 75 pound rails. The Illinois Central railroad is reported in the market for 25,000 tons of rails and the Frisco system is after a large tonnage.

A consignment of 5,000 tons of rails for the Texas Pacific and a similar amount for the International and Great Northern left the district to fill an order previously announced. The rail market in all setcions is unusually active caused by extensive improvements the railroads are to make.

Montgomery.—Governor O'Neal will speak before the Tammany Society of New York, July 4. Invitation to address this old and famous organization was received by the Governor. Acceptance was telegraphed to the Program Committee. The occasion of the meeting will be to celebrate the 136th anniversary of the independence of the United States.

Jasper.—Another well is being drilled in the vicinity by the Pennsylvania Oil and Gas Company. One well has already been dug here and no oil found. There was a large flow of gas, however, and the company's directors feel sure that they will strike oil in this vicinity. The new well has reached a depth of more than two thousand feet.

Tuskegee.—One hundred and eighty-four graduates representing 30 states of the union, Jamaica, Porto Rico, Cuba and Africa received diplomas and certificates from the various departments of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute at the thirty-first annual commencement, which closed here.

Ensley.—The closing exercises of the Ensley schools took place without formal ceremonies further than the delivering of diplomas and promotion certificates, which were given out by Dr. J. H. Phillips.

Greenville.—The members of the Father Ryan chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy gave a camp stew to the Confederate veterans of Greenville and surrounding country.

Tuscaloosa.—Hon. J. B. Wadsworth, prominent prohibitionist of Gadsden, addressed the people of Tuscaloosa June 1.

REBEL LEADER BURNS TOWN

LEADERS CONTINUE TO FORCE CONTRIBUTIONS FROM FOREIGN INVESTORS.

WHITE WOMEN ATTACKED

Report of the Capture Near Daquir of the Americans Wheeler and Collister Untrue.

Havana.—Estenoz, the real leader of the negro insurgents, has captured and burned the town of Lamaya, on the branch line of the Cuba railroad, 30 miles from Santiago. The government gave out this information.

A column of regulars, commanded by Major Sangully, has occupied Lamaya for the last two days, but sallied forth in search of insurgents. Hardly had the regulars left when Estenoz with 800 men attacked the handful of rurales. Citizens armed themselves and attempted to oppose the insurgents but were compelled to retreat, losing several wounded. Estenoz then entered the town, which he burned and sacked.

The flames were seen by Major Sanguily's command, which hastened back, but found the town destroyed. The insurgents retired into the hills. Lamaya was a small place, composed of about 70 houses, the inhabitants of which were mostly negroes.

Encounters between regulars and rebels are reported to have taken place near Daiquiri and at other places without decisive results. The general forward movement of the Cuban troops apparently is still deferred, pending completion of the disposition of the troops ordered by General Monteagudo.

Reports from the scene of hostilities say that the rebel leaders continue to exact contributions of arms and money from property owners who are mostly foreigners, under threat of applying the torch. The government is making strong efforts to supply plantation guards, but seemingly lacks sufficient men without depleting the ranks of the troops in active service.

General Monteagudo, in a statement to the government, says he has had no losses up to the present, which is due to the tactics of the rebels who decline combat, firing a few long range shots on the approach of the troops and then rapidly retiring to the hills. General Monteagudo says that within a short time he expects to deliver a crushing blow and adds that he does not need further reinforcements.

The government received a dispatch from San Luis stating that negroes entered a hamlet near that place, attacked three white women and looted the stores. This apparently is within the lines of the regular troops.

The judge of instruction of Guantanamo issued a formal proclamation of indictment on the charge of rebellion against Estenoz, Invonet and 40 followers whose names are given.

Rumors with a vague basis continue to be circulated of an uprising in Havana province. It is alleged that hardware dealers recently sold several sand knives, daggers and machetes to negroes. All the police and rurales in Havana are on reserve duty.

The report of the capture near Daquirl of the Americans, Wheeler and Collister, proves to have been untrue.

NEWS BREVITIES.

Liverpool.—A serious fire broke out on the Cunard steamer Carmania while lying at her dock. The damage is estimated at many thousands of dollars.

Heidelburg, Germany.—The body of Daniel H. Burnham, architect of the World's Fair of Chicago, in 1893, was cremated at Heidelberg cemetery. Mr. Burnham's death was due to acute intestinal catarrh, complicated by diabetes, from which he had suffered for 15 years.

Akron, Ohio.—Though disappointed that the big dirigible balloon Akron did not make a better showing on the trial at Atlantic City, Frank A. Seiberling, who is financing the prospective trip across the Atlantic, said that the enterprise will by no means be given over.

Constantinople.—At a farewell banquet, alluding to his appointment as ambassador at London, Baron Marschall von Bierstein, the retiring ambassador to Turkey, said: "My path is steep and stony, but, faithful to my imperial master's orders, I will devote my whole strength to it."

Owensboro, Ky.—Posses headed by officers from Kentucky and Indiana failed to locate George Blackburn, who it is alleged, shot to death Coleman Dawson, and seriously wounded James Bell, both Owensboro policemen.

Paris.—The "Aviette" competition for a prize of $2,000, to be awarded to the man who could make a successful flight of 33 feet without the aid of a motor was held, but was unproductive of results. Several of the competitors failed to leave the ground.

THE SAFE LAXATIVE FOR ELDERLY PEOPLE

Most elderly people are more or less troubled with a chronic, persistent constipation, due largely to lack of sufficient exercise. They experience difficulty in digesting even light food, with a consequent belching of stomach gases, drowsiness after eating, headache and a feeling of lassitude and general discomfort.

Doctors advise against cathartics and violent purgatives of every kind, recommending a mild, gentle laxative tonic, like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, to effect relief without disturbing the entire system.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the perfect laxative, easy in action, certain in effect and, withal, pleasant to the taste. It possesses tonic properties that strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels and is a remedy that has been for years the great standby in thousands of families, and should be in every family medicine chest. It is equally as valuable for children as for older people.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and he will be very glad to send a sample bottle for trial.

Consoling Thought.

"Do you believe, doctor," asked Mrs. Wumps, "that men become what they eat?"

"Yes, madam, I do," said the bishop.

"What a comfort that must have been to those early missionaries when they were eaten by the cannibals!" sighed Mrs. Wumps.—Harper's Weekly.

To Preserve Historic Building.

A movement has been started in Frankfort, Ky., to preserve the "little red brick" building on the old State House square on account of its historic interest. The building now standing is 98 years old, and Daniel Boone, on the occasion of visits to Frankfort after it was erected, visited the offices on business. In two years the building will be 100 years old, if left standing, and is the oldest state building in existence.

Proof of Precaution.

Mr. Lansbury's concern, as expressed in the house over the military drilling going on in the north of Ireland reminds one of a story of how Ireland was occasionally taught to shoot in the past. The war office once sent a famous officer over to inspect the militia regiments, and the officer, after inspecting, asked for a few words with the drill sergeant.

"These men of yours," he said, couldn't hit a target as big as the Tower of London. You can't have taken much pains to teach them."

"Tache thim to shoot," gasped the sergeant. "Of course I did not tache thim to shoot, her honor; for, bedad, if I did there wouldn't be a landlord left in Munster."—London Chronicle.

DIFFERENT NOW.
Since the Slugger, Coffee, Was Abandoned.

Coffee probably causes more biliousness and so-called malaria than any one other thing—even bad climate. (Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine, the drug in coffee).

A Ft. Worth man says:

"I have always been of a bilious temperament, subject to malaria and up to one year ago a perfect slave to coffee. At times I would be covered with boils and full of malarial poison, was very nervous and had swimming in the head.

"I don't know how it happened, but I finally became convinced that my sickness was due to the use of coffee, and a little less than a year ago, I stopped coffee and began drinking Postum.

"From that time I have not had a boil, not had malaria at all, have gained 15 pounds good solid weight and know beyond all doubt this is due to the use of Postum in place of coffee, as I have taken no medicine at all.

"Postum has certainly made healthy, red blood for me in place of the blood that coffee drinking impoverished and made unhealthy." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum makes red blood.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Mints been sprouting some time—where's the juleps?

Lots, yea many lots of subscriptions are long past due and here it is blackberry and plum time. Fetch us some.

Where's that water wagon? Where's that proposed pipe line down Main street? Echo answers:—"WHERE?"

Are you ready for the Chief when he comes? You ought to be ready whether he comes or not.

Watch how Underwood—Alabama's Underwood, is advancing while the other candidates are receding in the dim distance.

Soon will be the days of the pig pen odor. Welcome those hapoy, soulful days, the days which carry us back to last year.

There ought not to be one word of dissention spoken, not a syllable of criticism uttered. The school board has done well; back them up and you will reap a rich reward in the education of your children.

The average country youth who used to come to town with his trousers scarcely reaching his shoe tops, wonders now why he was laughed to scorn by the city dude who, these days buys long trousers and turns about sixteen inches up in order to show a pair of green socks.

The Editor has to apologize to his out of town friends for the lateness of last week's issue. For the first time in twenty years—since we were 15 years of age—we had to succumb to sickness and send for a physican. The papers were issued on time, but it was a physical impossibility for us to mail them.

That convention for the purpose of turning the Taft delegates out and electing Roosevelt delegates didn't materialize. Perhaps they thought it unnecessary; perhaps they decided it would be unwise. But in any event somebody's goose got cooked to a turn. Mark that!

Elsewhere appears a notice of warning to certain parties from the officers of Mount Nebo church. They request that we publish the warning for one month. This request will not be granted. We regret that we cannot comply with the request. Any young man, or old one, who makes a habit of going to church in a drunken condition does not need fifteen minutes warning as to what will, or should be done with him; he ought to have no warning whatever except that which comes from contemplation behind prison bars.

Through courtesy to the church we publish it one time; not so much as a warning as to impress upon the officers of the church their unmistakable duty in such matters. Do your duty and Judge Pearson will do his—of that you may rest assured.

OTHER SCHOOL NEWS

ASSISTANT TEACHERS TO BE ELECTED.

The question as to who will constitute the corps of assistant teachers under Prof. Pickens has not yet been determined by the school board.

They have given into his hands the selection of the teacher for the primary grade, he having stated that he had in view a lady of refinement and culture who is admirably equipped for teacher of the primary department—in fact has already made a signal success of that department at other places. He asked no more, but preferred to leave the selection of the other teachers entirely with the board. Quite a number of applications are on file from which to make selections. As is, doubtless, well known, Miss Williams of last year's faculty will return—she being the only one of the old teachers who will return. The board will meet the latter part of the week to select such other teachers as are desired.

Miss Elna Sartor of Clanton has filed her application as teacher of the music department and will probably be selected—she having received a promise from a majority of the patrons of the school who have music pupils to be instructed, to give them into her care should she be elected to this position.

COUNTY COURT

A LIGHT DOCKET—NOTHING DOING

Last Monday was County Court day as well as election day, yet the two did not attract enough attention to make either one or the other, or both, noticeable to the casual observer. The docket was extremely light as will be shown by the following, which were all the cases tried:—

R. H. Martin, false pretenses; fined $20.00 and costs.

Will Sterns, A. W.; continued to July term.

J. J. Hayes, selling mortgaged property; fined $5.00 and costs.

Jack Hayes, selling mortgaged property; fined $20.00 and costs.

Ed Stafford, S. L.; complaint withdrawn and filed; (Ed is now in penitentiary.)

Cleve Lockhart, A. W. W.; fined $20.00 and costs.

Ed Ellison, Walter Williams, Jno. A. Ellison, Adley Ellison and Grady Ellison, larceny; discharged;

Freeman Lockhart, A. W. W.; waived to Grand Jury, bond fixed at $150.00.

Zeb Lockhart, A. W. W.; waived to Grand Jury; bond fixed at $150.

Edgar Williams, assault; waived to Grand Jury; bond fixed at $150.

TIMELY WARNING

Any person or persons who shall hereafter molest the peace, dignity and sanctity of our church by their presence while intoxicated, or under the influence of liquor at any regular or other service of the church, or during any other services conducted within the church building, shall from this time on and to the end of time, be vigorously prosecuted without fear or favor. It is sincerely hoped that this unpleasant duty may not be forced upon us, and you and your friends are hereby notified.

Signed this June 2nd, 1912.

A Prominent New York Politician Near Death

Hon. R. N. Lansing, of Rensselaer, N. Y., Six Times a Member of the Assembly, Tells of Narrow Escape.

"About fifteen years ago I was taken with rheumatism, which affected my heart producing what was called valvular trouble. Three doctors told me I would never do another day's work. While I had many remedies recommended to me I got a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and it helped me inside of 48 hours. At the end of the week I called on my doctor and asked him to examine me. He said I was better than he ever expected to see me and asked if I was taking his medicine. When I told him I was not, but was taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, he said, 'Thank the Lord for Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy.' I continued to take it, and while I realized my heart was damaged so I could not expect a permanent cure, for fifteen years I worked every day, notwithstanding I had been told I would never work again. In July, 1911, I was taken with rheumatism again, and it went to my heart as before. I got so bad that one of the Albany papers wrote up my life and said I could not live but a few hours. I again took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy with very satisfactory results, and have not missed a day at business or in the legislature since January. I feel that Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has saved my life and cannot recommend it too highly."

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold and guaranteed by all druggists.

REVIVAL SERVICES CLOSED.

A SERIES OF SPLENDID SERMONS FAITHFULLY DELITERED.

The series of services which have been in progress at the Methodist church, came to a close Wednesday night. Rev. J. B. Tate of Wetumpka, who conducted the services, endeared himself to all whom he came in contact by his faithful service and his kindly bearing. Perhaps no series of services in Clanton for many months attracted more attention or has resulted in more permanent good.

Notwithstnding the fact that there were no accessions to the church, Rev. Mr. Tate's sermons were such as to greatly revive the church members and to cause the unconverted to stop and ponder.

Suuday afternoon while Messrs. Grady Reynolds, Tommie Woods and Joe VanDerveer were out riding in the former's car a screw was broken some miles from town; the young men, not wishing to tramp, tramp, tramp it back to town went in search of a screw at an old saw mill; they found one screw and they found something else—or at least Joe VanDerveer did; he found an old white flea-bitten, mangy dorg—or rather the dorg found him. That's why Joe's been limping around town. It was not a case of the houn dog being kicked aroun town; merely a case of a mangy dorg making Joe limp aroun town.

A Romance of Colorado

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transform brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp.

CHAPTER IX (Continued).

He did not make any apology for his next action, he just stooped down and, disregarding her faint protests and objections, picked her up in his arms. She was by no means a light burden, and he did not run away with her as the heroes of romances do. But he was a man far beyond the average in strength, and with a stout heart and a resolute courage that had always carried him successfully through whatever he attempted, and he had need of all his qualities, physical and mental, before he finished that awful journey.

The woman struggled a little at first, then finally resigned herself to the situation; indeed, she thought swiftly, there was nothing else to do, she had no choice, she could not have been left alone there in the rocks in that rain, she could not walk. He was doing the only thing possible. The compulsion of the inevitable was upon them both.

They went slowly, the man often stopped for rest, at which times he would seat her tenderly upon some prostrate tree, or some rounded boulder, until he was ready to resume his task. He did not bother her with explanation, discussion or other conversation, for which she was most thankful. Once or twice during the slow progress she tried to walk, but the slightest pressure on her wounded foot nearly caused her to faint. He made no complaint about his burden and she found it, after all, pleasant to be upheld by such powerful arms; she was so sick, so tired, so worn out, and there was such assurance of strength and safety in his firm hold of her.

By and by, in the last stage of their journey, her head dropped on his shoulder and she actually fell into an uneasy troubled sleep. He did not know whether she slumbered or whether she had fainted again. He did not dare to stop to find out, his strength was almost spent; in this last effort the strain upon his muscles was almost as great as it had been in the whirlpool. For the second time that day the sweat stood out on his forehead, his legs trembled under him. How he made the last five hundred feet up the steep wall to a certain broad shelf perhaps an acre in extent where he had built his hut among the mountains, he never knew; but the last remnant of his force was spent when he finally opened the unlatched door with his foot, carried her in the log hut and laid her upon the bed or bunk built against one wall of the cabin.

Yet the way he put her down was characteristic of the man. That last vestige of strength had served him well. He did not drop her as a less thoughtful and less determined man might have done, he laid her there as gently and as tenderly as if she weighed nothing, and as if he had carried her nowhere. So quiet and easy was his handling of her that she did not wake up at once.

So soon as she was out of his arms, he stood up and stared at her in great alarm, which soon gave way to reassurance. She had not fainted, there was a little tinge of color in her cheek that had rubbed up against his rough hunting coat; she was asleep, her regular breathing told him that. Sleep was of course the very best of medicines for her, and yet she should not be allowed to sleep until she had got rid of her wet clothing and until something had been done for her wounded foot. It was indeed an embarrassing situation.

He surveyed her for a few moments wondering how best to begin. Then realizing the necessity for immediate action, he bent over her and woke her up. Again she stared at him in bewilderment until he spoke.

"This is my house," he said, "we are home."

"Home!" sobbed the girl.

"Under shelter, then," said the man. "You are very tired and very sleepy, but there is something to be done; you must take off those wet clothes at once, you must have something to eat, and I must have a look at that foot, and then you can have your sleep out."

The girl stared at him, his program, if a radical one under the circumstances, was nevertheless a rational one, indeed the only one. How was it to be carried out? The man easily divined her thoughts.

"There is another room in this house, a store room. I cook in there," he said. "I am going in there now to get you something to eat; meanwhile you must undress yourself and go to bed."

He went to a rude set of box-like shelves draped with a curtain, apparently his own handiwork, against the wall, and brought from it a long and somewhat shapeless woolen gown.

"You can wear this to sleep in," he continued. "First of all, though, I am going to have a look at that foot."

He bent down to where her wounded foot lay extended on the bed.

"Wait," said the girl, lifting herself on her arm, and as she did so he lifted his head and answered her direct gaze with his own. "I am a woman, absolutely alone, entirely at your mercy; you are stronger than I, I have no choice but to do what you bid me. And in addition to the natural weakness of my sex I am the more helpless from this foot. What do you intend to do with me? How do you mean to treat me?"

It was a bold, a splendid question, and it evoked the answer it merited.

"As God is my judge," said the man quietly, "just as you ought to be treated, as I would want another to treat my mother, or my sister, or my wife"—she noticed how curiously his lips suddenly tightened at that word—"if I had one. I never harmed a woman in my life," he continued more earnestly, "only one, that is," he corrected himself, and once again she marked that peculiar contraction of the lips. "And I could not help that," he added.

"I trust you," said the girl at last, after gazing at him long and hard as if to search out the secrets of his very soul. "You have saved my life and things dearer will be safe with you. I have to trust you."

"I hope," came the quick comment, "that it is not only for that. I don't want to be trusted upon compulsion."

"You must have fought terribly for my life in the flood," was the answer. "I can remember what it was now, and you carried me over the rocks and the mountains without faltering. Only a man could do what you have done. I trust you anyway."

"Thank you," said the man briefly as he bent over the injured foot again.

The boot laced up the front, the short skirt left all plainly visible. With deft fingers he undid the sodden knot and unlaced it, then stood hesitatingly for a moment.

"I don't like to cut your only pair of shoes," he said as he made a slight motion to draw it off, and then observing the spasm of pain, stopped. "Needs must," he continued, taking out his knife and slitting the leather.

He did it very carefully so as not to ruin the boot beyond repair, and finally succeeded in getting it off without giving her too much pain. And she was not so tired or so miserable as to be unaware of his gentleness. His manner, matter of fact, business like, if he had been a doctor one would have called it professional, distinctly pleased her in this trying and unusual position. Her stocking was stained with blood. The man rose to his feet, took from a rude homemade chair a light Mexican blanket and laid it considerately across the girl.

"Now if you can manage to get off your stocking yourself, I will see what can be done," he said, turning away.

It was the work of a few seconds for her to comply with his request. Hanging the wet stocking carefully over a chair back, he drew back the blanket a little and carefully inspected the poor little foot. He saw at once that it was not an ordinary sprained ankle, but it seemed to him that her foot had been caught between two tossing logs, and had been badly bruised. It was very painful, but would not take so long to heal as a sprain. The little foot, normally so white, was now black and blue and the skin had been roughly torn and broken. He brought a basin of cold water and a towel and washed off the blood, the girl fighting down the pain and successfully stifling any outcry.

"Now," he said, "you must put on this gown and get into bed. By the time you are ready for it I will have some broth for you and then we will bandage that foot. I shall not come in here for some time, you will be quite alone and safe."

He turned and left the room, shutting the door after him as he went out. For a second time that day Enid Maitland undressed herself and this time nervously and in great haste. She was almost too excited and apprehensive to recall the painful circumstances attendant upon her first disrobing. She said she trusted the man absolutely, yet she would not have been human if she had not looked most anxiously toward that closed door. He made plenty of noise in the other room, bustling about as if to reassure her.

She could not rest the weight of her body on her left foot, and getting rid of her wet clothes was a somewhat slow process in spite of her hurry, made more so by her extreme nervousness. The gown he gave her was far too big for her, but soft and warm and exquisitely clean. It draped her slight figure completely. Leaving her sodden garments where they had fallen, for she was not equal to anything else, she wrapped herself in the folds of the big gown and managed to get into bed. For all its rude appearance it was a very comfortable sleeping place, there were springs and a good mattress. The pillowcases sheets were clean, although they had been roughly washed, there was a delicious aroma of comfort and neatness in her position. She had scarcely composed herself when he knocked loud upon her door.

"May I come in?" he asked.

When she bade him enter she saw he had in his hand a saucepan full of some steaming broth. She wondered how he had made it in such a hurry, but after he poured it into a graniteware cup and offered it to her, she took it without question. It was thick, warming and nourishing. He stood by her and insisted that she take more and more. Finally she rebelled.

"Well, perhaps that will do for tonight," he said; now let's have a look at your foot."

She observed that he had laid on the table a long roll of white cloth; she could not know that he had torn up one of his sheets to make bandages, but so it was. He took the little foot tenderly in his hands.

"I am going to hurt you," he said. "I am going to find out if there is anything more than a bruise, any bones broken."

There was no denying that he did pain her exquisitely.

"I can't help it," he said as she cried aloud, "I have got to see what's the matter. I am almost through now."

"Go on, I can bear it," she said faintly. "I feel so much better, anyway, now that I am dry and warm."

"So far as I can determine," said the man at last, "it is only a bad, ugly bruise; the skin is torn, it has been battered, but it is neither sprained nor broken, and I don't think it is going to be very serious. Now I am going to bathe it in the hottest water you can bear, and then I will bandage it and let you go to sleep."

He went out and came back with a kettle of boiling water, with which he laved again and again the poor, torn, battered little member. Never in her life had anything been so grateful as these repeated applications of hot water. After a while he applied a healing lotion of some kind, then he took his long roll of bandage and wound it dexterously around her foot, not drawing it too close to prevent circulation, but just tight enough for support, then as he finished she drew it back beneath the cover.

"Now," said he, "there is nothing more I can do for you tonight, is there?"

"Nothing."

"I want you to go to sleep now, you will be perfectly safe here. I am going down the canon to search——"

"No," said the girl apprehensively. "I dare not be left alone here; besides I know how dangerous it would be for you to try to descend the canon in this rain; you have risked enough for me, you must wait until the morning; I shall feel better then."

"But think of the anxiety of your friends."

"I can't help it," was the nervous reply. "I am afraid to be left alone here at night."

Her voice trembled; he was fearful she would have a nervous breakdown.

"Very well," he said soothingly, "I will not leave you till the morning."

"Where will you stay?"

"I'll make a shakedown for myself in the store room," he answered, "I shall be right within call at any time."

It had grown dark outside by this time and the two in the log hut could barely see each other.

"I think I shall light the fire," continued the man, "it will be sort of company for you and it gets cold up here nights at this season. I shouldn't wonder if this rain turned into snow. Besides, it will dry your clothes for you."

Then he went over to the fireplace, struck a match, touched it to the kindling under the huge logs already prepared, and in a moment a cheerful blaze was roaring up through the chimney. Then he picked up from the floor where she had cast them in a heap her bedraggled garments. He straightened them out as best he could, hung them over the backs of chairs and the table, which he drew as near to the fire as was safe. Having completed this unwonted task he turned to the woman who had watched him curiously and nervously the while.

"Is there anything more that I can do for you?"

"Nothing. You have been as kind and as gentle as you were strong and brave."

He threw his hand out with a deprecating gesture.

"Are you quite comfortable?"

"Yes."

"And your foot?"

"Seems very much better."

"Good night, then. I will call you in the morning."

"Good night," said the girl gratefully, "and God bless you for a true and noble man."

CHAPTER X.

On the Two Sides of the Door.

The cabin contained a large and a small room. In the small between these there was a doorway closed by an ordinary pattern door with a wooden latch and no lock. Closed it served to hide the occupant of one room from the view of the other, otherwise it was but a feeble protection. Even had it possessed a lock, a vigorous man could have burst it through in a moment.

These thoughts did not come very clearly to Enid Maitland. Few thoughts of any kind came to her. Where she lay she could see plainly the dancing light of the glorious fire. She was warm, the deftly wrapped bandage, the healing lotion upon her foot, had greatly relieved the pain in that wounded member. The bed was hard but comfortable, much more so than the sleeping bags to which of late she had been accustomed.

Few women had gone through such experiences, mental and physical, as had befallen her within the last few hours and lived to tell the story. Had it not been for the exhaustive strains of body and spirit to which she had been subjected, her mental faculties would have been on the alert and the strangeness of her unique position would have made her so nervous that she could not have slept.

For the time being, however, the physical demands upon her entity were paramount; she was dry, she was warm, she was fed, she was free from anxiety and she was absolutely unutterably weary. Her thoughts were vague, inchoate, unconcentrated. The fire wavered before her eyes, she closed them in a few moments and did not open them.

Without a thought, without a care, she fell asleep. Her repose was complete, not a dream even disturbed the profound slumber into which she sank. Pretty picture she made; her head thrown backward, her golden hair roughly dried and quickly plaited in long braids, one of which fell along the pillow while the other curled lovingly around her neck. Her face in the natural light would have looked pallid from what she had gone through, but the fire cast red glows upon it; the fitful light flickered across her countenance and sometimes deep shadows unrelieved accentuated the paleness born of her sufferings.

There is no light that plays so many tricks with the imagination, or that so stimulates the fancy as the light of an open fire. In its sudden outbursts it sometimes seems to add life touches to the sleeping and the dead. Had there been any eye to see this girl, she would have made a delightful picture in the warm glow from the stone hearth. There were no eyes to look, however, save those which belonged to the man on the other side of the door.

On the hither side of that door in the room where the fire burned on the hearth, there was rest in the heart of the occupant; on the farther side where the fire only burned in the heart, there was tumult. Not outward and visible, but inward and spiritual; and yet there was no lack of apparent manifestation of the turmoil in the man's soul.

Albeit the room was smaller than the other, it was still of a good size. He walked nervously up and down from one end to the other as restlessly as a wild animal impatient of captivity stalks the narrow limits of his contracted cage. The even tenor of his life had suddenly been diverted. The ordinary sequence of his days had been abruptly changed. The monotony of five years which he had chosen and dreamed might exist as long as he, had been rudely broken in upon. Humanity, which he had avoided, from which he had fled, which he had cast away forever, had found him out. Ablit, excessit, evasit, erupit! And yet his departures were all in vain! The world with all its grandeur and its significance, with all its powers and its weaknesses, with all its opportunities and its obligations, with all its joys and its sorrows, had knocked at his door; and that the knocking at his door was that of a woman, but added to his perplexity and to his dismay.

He had cherished a dream that he could live to himself alone with his memory to bear him company, and from that dream he had been cruelly awakened. Everything was changed. What had once been easy had now become impossible. He might send her away, but though he swore her to secrecy she would be sure to tell her story and something of it to the world would learn some of its readers seek him out with insatiable curiosity to know the rest.

Eyes as keen as his would presently search and scrutinize the mountains where he had roamed alone. They would see what he had sought to find what he had found. Many Joke on the Doctor.

The physicians in Mankato had agreed that during their Chautauqua assembly they would employ a call doctor, and each was to pay his share of the expense. This boy was to call the doctor who was wanted, without disturbing the speaker, as it was embarrassing to him and looked as if they were doing it to advertise with the expense. So it all went well until afternoon when Strickland W. Gillilan and spoke. As he was talking away certain doctor had a call from the platform, and he walked out rather ostentatiously. Some of the people who knew of the arrangement laughed, snickered, and the speaker got it said. "Don't laugh, folks. That is the way my brother got his start." And everybody roared.

"Everything right you don't beat me!" cried his assistant. "I owe you $1.90 in 12 weeks, is that much?" "Not so much, but I'm glad to get it," suggested the sweet-voiced Weber.

TRADE REPORTS IRREGULAR

Retailers So Far Have Had Disappointing Season.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Trade reports are irregular in tenor, but it is probable that the week's turnover in commercial circles has not been better than fair. Retail dealers have so far experienced a very disappointing spring season. It is evident that sales are marked by small lot purchases for immediate or holding up fall orders and by the fact that current trade is dominated by between seasons conditions. In the dry goods lines distribution for immediate needs is not above fair. Trade lacks desired animation, and it is likely that the needed zest will not be forthcoming until crop prospects crystalize and political conventions are out of the way. Iron and steel shipments continue heavy, with prices on a more profitable basis. Though demand for pig iron is quiet, furnace stocks the country over have been reduced in a good degree, but coke prices are so high as to presage, perhaps, some effect on outputs of iron and steel. Collections are not much above fair.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending May 30 were 231, against 218 last week, 168 in the like week of 1911, 160 in 1910, 181 in 1909 and 225 in 1908.

Business failures in Canada for the week number 17, which compares with 21 last week and 28 in the like week of 1911.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Four features of the business situation are so favorable for the time being at least as to overshadow those conditions which seem doubtful. These favoring features are:

The better outlook for the crops, particularly in the Northwest—this being already productive of an increase of confidence and activity in the leading trade centers of the great agricultural sections; the warmer weather, which is everywhere stimulating trade distribution; the very notable expansion which has taken place in the iron and steel trade, bringing production almost to the point of capacity and giving promise of a year of remarkable consumption; the greatly improved conditions which have prevailed this year in the textile markets, a fact due in part to the normal state of the market for raw cotton and in part to that condition which is the inevitable product of low stocks of merchandise and a growing population with expanding wants.

Activity still prevails in finished lines of iron and steel, and the larger plants continue to operate almost to capacity. In the Pittsburg district a shortage of crude steel is reported, and purchases of pig iron are being made in the open market. Heavy speculations continue to be made on plates and structural shapes and prices show a tendency to advance $1.25, Pittsburg now being the absolute minimum. Buying of equipment and finished steel products by the railroads is still a prominent feature.

The primary cotton goods markets are rather quiet, but generally firm. Fall orders for napping fabrics, cotton blankets, etc., are coming in steadily, and denims, cheviots and shirting chambrays are being bought by manufacturers for fall delivery. Export trade continues large and included in the week's shipments were 1,823 bales for China, 1,039 bales for Chile and 1,055 bales for Central American ports, while the manila markets are calling for prints in sizeable quantities. In woolens and worsteds men's wear and dress goods mills are well engaged on staples and novelties, and considerable confidence is now expressed regarding the future. Knit goods and hosiery are in distinctly better demand and some improvement appears in the inquiry for silks.

Improved weather conditions have materially stimulated the retail demand for summer footwear and stocks of seasonable shoes on the shelves of distributors have been substantially reduced. Trade in all kinds of leather continues moderate, but prices are firmly held.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES.

Washington.—After collecting more than $180,000 for the relief of the famine sufferers in Central China, the Red Cross announced that further donations were not required for that purpose by that society, being advised by the Shanghai sommittee that money contributions should not be forwarded after June 1.

London.—A news dispatch from Constantinople says that the minister of marine and the minister of the interior had a stand up and knock down fight at a cabinet meeting as a sequence of the severe strictures appearing in the newspapers.

Chicago.—A special federal grand jury was ordered for June 10 by United States District Judge Carpenter. Federal officials would neither affirm nor deny that the new jury would be asked to investigate the testimony of the witnesses in the recent meat packers' trial.

New York.—Lillian Graham, the show girl who, with Ethel Conrad, was acquitted of the charge of having attempted the life of W. E. D. Stokes, filed suit against Stokes, asking $100,000 damages for "false and malicious prosecution."

HEART NEEDS ESPECIAL CARE

Strain on the Vital Organ Must Be Avoided When Middle Life Has Been Passed.

"The death by heart failure of Gen. Frederick D. Grant," says the Medical Record, "emphasizes the repeated warnings of the medical profession that we should treat a senile heart with respect. As far as we know there is not the slightest disagreement on this one point—every human heart over fifty, and perhaps over forty-five, cannot stand much internal pressure without being ruined or at least damaged. A very slight man may go through severe muscular exertion with but little damage, but a heavy man, like the general, places on the heart and arteries a hydrostatic pressure beyond the safety point, and it never recovers.

"The pitiful feature of this deplorable deat is the fact that General Grant in his last annual report had called attention to the opinion of life insurance examiners that army officers were becoming poor risks on account of the increasing strain of their profession. It is safe to predict more deaths like General Grant's, unless we treat the heart of a man over forty-five with more gentleness."

CUTICURA OINTMENT HEALED BAD SORE ON LIMB

"Some time ago I was coming up some steps when the board crushed under me like an egg shell, and my right limb went through to the knee, and scraped he flesh off the bone just inside and below the knee. I neglected it for a day or two, then it began to hurt me pretty badly. I put balsam fir on to draw out the poison, but when I had used it a week, it hurt so badly that I changed to ——— ointment. That made it smart and burn so badly that I couldn't use it any more, and that was the fourth week after I was hurt.

"Then I began to use Cuticura Ointment for the sore. It stopped hurting immediately and began healing right away. It was a bad-looking sore before Cuticura Ointment healed it, and I suffered so I couldn't sleep from two days after I fell until I began using Cuticura Ointment.

"Cuticura Soap is the best soap I ever saw. I have used all kinds of soap for washing my face, and always it would leave my face smarting. I had to keep a lotion to stop the smart, no matter how expensive a soap I used. I find at last in Cuticura Soap a soap that will clean my face and leave no smarting, and I do not have to use any lotion or anything else to ease it. I believe Cuticura Soap is the best soap made." (Signed) Mrs. M. E. Fairchild, 805 Lafayette St., Wichita, Kan., May 8, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

The Bible Is Many Books.

There are few persons who understand the true origin and history of the Bible. As a matter of fact, the Bible it not one, but many books. The word is derived from the Greek Biblia, which means "books." In the same way we speak of the "Scriptures" or "writings," both in the plural.

In "The Scripture of Truth," a remarkably successful book by Sidney Collett, the author tells of the origin, history, symbols, alleged errors and contradictions in the Bible.

The Difference.

"There is such a vast difference between the ideal and the practical in stage art," sighed the intellectual young actor.

"The difference," replied the stolid stage manager, "as lies between the artistic role which leads to Arcady and the fat part which leads to the pork barrel."

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor. Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children. 50 cents.

Troubles of Educators.

Chancellor Day, who some months ago expelled a young woman from his university for complaining of the fare, can sympathize with M. Bournier, director of the Paris High School of Commerce, who has suspended a pupil who sent him, by way of protest, an artichoke with a worm in it, which had been served at luncheon.

FAR BETTER THAN QUININE.

Elixir Babek cures malaria where quinine fails, and it can be taken with impunity by old and young.

"Having suffered from Malarious Fever for several months, getting no relief from quinine and being completely broken down in health, 'Elixir Babek' effected a permanent cure."—William F. Marr.

In an Epigram.

Mrs. J. G. Phelps Stokes (Rose Pastor) stated epigrammatically at a dinner in New York the value of an education.

"Many poor people," she said, "are spending their second childhood in the almshouse because they spent their first in earning instead of learning."

Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

Not In Politics

But I am a candidate for your Life and Fire Insurance business. Many of you, both Democrats and Republicans have good homes, that you have, as well as myself, been half a lifetime accumulating. In case of a fire, it would be quite a hardship to rebuild without a little Insurance money to help you. I can insure you in a good Old Line Company for three or five years at a very low rate and you can add a Tornado Wind-Storm Policy for the same length of time at a very small additional cost, and, when it comes to a life Insurance Policy, I defy competition. I have a limited amount of the most attractive and cheapest Policies ever offered for sale by any reliable Old Line Company. These contracts have a disability clause, which means, if you become totally disabled from any cause, your payments cease and your Policy is paid up by the Company. See me now, to-day, or the first time you come to town; better stop your plow and attend to these important matters while you can; your house may burn down to-night, or you may die. If your house burns and you are still living you could rebuild with a little insurance money to help you. But, should you die, your wife and littlehelpless children could never replace you. So come on now and buy you one of these Special Life Policies before they are all gone. As above stated, I have only a limited amount of these and the first comes, the first served. You know it is a duty you owe to yourself, your family and your God, so why not do it now?

Some time you mean to mend your ways, why don't you do it now?
You hope to win the world's praise, why don't you do it now?
You've always read in prose or rhyme, "The present is the Golden Time."
If you are ever going to climb, why don't you do it now?

In short, no matter what you've planned, why don't you do it now?
If you have work right at your hand, why don't you do it now?
Successful men are never late; you'll fail if you procrastinate;
If you have vowed to conquer Fate, why don't you do it now?

This is an appeal to you and I hope you'll 'phone, write or call at my office and give me an opportunity to more fully explain these valuable contracts to you. You need the insurance and I need and will appreciate your patronage.

Respectfully,

C. REESE MULLINS, The Insurance Man

PLANTERSVILLE.

The closing exercises of the Dallas County High School were held last Wednesday night. Sunday, May 19, we had commencement sermon at school building, and from there the Principal entertained the five graduates, Misses Maude Letcher, Leola Porter, Perla Mae Porter, Messrs. Lester Pickering, Nicholas Harrison, at a reception given in their honor.

Tuesday night brought on the first exercises, which were mostly contests for medals and music. The boy, in the judges' minds, delivering the best declamation was Mr. Gordon Jones; the girl, Miss Lena Blount. The music showed the most talented teacher that could be found.

Wednesday morning the graduating exercises took place at ten o'clock. The essays and declamations were grand, and the address by Prof. Thigpen of Sylacauga was very instructive. The March at the beginning, played as a trio by Misses Maude Letcher, Stella Barnes and Leone Johnson made us all seem happy instead of sad over leaving our dear schoolmates.

Wednesday night, a time for fun, was what we had. The little bootblack (Furriss Morrow) attracted the attention of everyone. In fact, all did their parts well.

The school opens with the same faculty for another year, and I think no better could be.

FIDDLERS' CONVENTION

A LARGE CROWD OF ENTHUSIASTS GATHER; BARNES OF COOSA CAPTURES 1st. PRIZE

As was previously announced thro' the columns of the Press, a fiddlers' convention was held Saturday night at the court house to determine the champion fiddler of this section, and otherwise to have a good time,

Quite a large crowd gathered to hear the performance and to enjoy the occasion.

Eight old-time fiddlers entered the contest and competed for the honors to be bestowed.

Messrs Joe Foshee, John Gore and Ed Smitherman acted as judges and made the awards.

Those entering the contest were: Messrs Barnes and Davis, of Coosa County, Collins, Fulmer, Clakeley, Smith and Smotherman of Chilton.

Each contestant was required to play three pieces and from these the judges were to decide to whom the trophies were to be awarded; at the conclusion of the regular program the judges were as a "hung jury"—they could come to no conclusion, so a fourth rendition was required of each. The judges again retired for the purpose of making a decision and while they were out the audience requested Messrs Barnes and Davis to render a duet, which they did. At the conclusion of the duet the judges, in solemn procession, filed into the auditorium and announced the following prizes:

Mr. Barnes of Coosa, first prize, a handsome saddle; Mr. Clakeley of Chilton, second prize, a shot gun; Mr. Davis of Coosa, third prize, a sack of fancy patent flour.

Prizes of some kind were given to each of the contestants, and each one, contestants and audience, went away fully satisfied with the occasion and enthusiastic for the next annual fiddlers' convention.

ANSWER TO SLY OLD FOX

r Press,
Clanton, Ala.,
Sir:—
esire to offer for publication following in connection with rticle published in the "Union" pril 18th; which has just come y notice. The article was d "The Sly Old Fox" and mis-esented the facts regarding urchase by Chilton County carload of Corrugated Metal erts. I will thank you to y publish this letter.
old Chilton County a carload Corrugated Metal Culverts, con-ing 2960 lineal feet, for $3,585 NEVER offered the same car nother car containing the same ber of lineal feet to Autauga nty for $2,000.
hese Culverts are sold by the l feet, and the price per foot cording to the diameters used. if Autauga County contem-d buying, they (Autauga Co.) ld have received something than 1700 lineal feet instead of 0 lineal feet that Chilton Coun-eceived. The same process of culating would apply to the chase of a bale of cotton weigh-400 pounds at 10c would unt to $40, but if you were to a bale of cotton weighing 600 nds the same grade at 10c the d the cost would be $60. It ainly evident that the author the annonymous letter was informed.
n mentioning the purchase e of $3585 for a carload of verts, one not familiar with the mical analysis, the construc-n and manufacture of this metal ld hardly appreciate the high being as reasonable as it is. erefore, for the benefit of those so familiar, that this metal used the manufacture of Culverts a chemical rating of 99.975 cent purity to 99.90 per cent ity. There are many deterrent ments in the ordinary iron that conductive to corrossion and . These elements, namely, anese, Sulphur, Phosphorus d Silicon, have to be eliminated rder to give the metal a resist-e to corrossion and rust and to e the tensile strength necessary withstand the soil conditions h as Sulphuric Acids and salt ter and the elements of weath-, such as rains, floods, etc.
As to the advisability of Chilton nty having purchased the met-culverts to do away with the quated method of using wood es in the roads and small oden bridges, Terra cotta pipe steel bridges. The advantages lined above should be sufficient warrant the purchase. Haw-r, the fact that the U. S Gov-ment and nearly every railroad the U. S. have adopted the met-culverts for their system of nage is the best evidence of practicability, economy, and pediency of Chilton County hav-made the purchase, and if there any further doubt I can refer one to a great number of coun-s right here in Alabama who e adopted metal culverts, Jef-son County being the heaviest ers.

Yours very truly,
HARRY KUHR

ADAMS-WILLIAMS

On Wednesday evening, June 5, Jemison, a beautiful wedding as solemnized, uniting Mr. Chas. Adams and Miss Eva Williams. The reception hall, ing room were b ted for the occa d daisies. In t oom where the erformed an in ell of cape jessa ding its fragrance throughout the room.

During the half hour preceding the ceremony, while the guests were assembling, a musical program was rendered by Miss Ruby Downs, the strain of the final number blending into Lohengrin's bridal chorus as the bride and groom entered and approached the the altar. Rev. R. J. Mills announced the words that made this popular young couple man and wife.

The bride's gown was fashioned of white crepe meteor draped with real lace, most charming in its simplicity. She carried lillies of the valley.

In the dining room a delicious ice course was served.

The happy couple left on the north bound train for Washington and other points. On their return they will be at home to their friends at 2408 Seventh Avenue, Birmingham, Alabama, this being the headquarters of Mr. Adams, who holds a responsible position with the L. & N. railroad.

MOUNTAIN CREEK.

The birthday of Jefferson Davis President of the Confederate States, was celebrated at the Soldiers' Home on June 3rd, with due loyalty to the principles on which our people acted then, and which still animate them.

The music by Mrs. Geraldine B. Dow was really a treat to those who are, as a rule, compelled to content themselves with something vastly inferior. Miss Alice Miller was, we regret to say, detained at home on account of sickness. Little Miss Cameron Brame of Birmingham favored us with a really fine recitation. Her manner was particularly good.

Hon. F. Loyd Tate, the orator of the day, succeeded in holding the undivided attention of his audience during the time he occupied the stage. He handled the subject in an original manner and imparted his own earnestness and enthusiasm to his hearers. It was a fine address from every standpoint.

The only thing to regret was that there was not a larger audience. I supposc that the election kept some away, and then by some means, the impression had gotten abroad that this was strictly a camp affair, and that the U. D. C. and others were not needed. The result will, I hope, make us more humble in the future and able us to sympathize with Adam Eden without Eve. W. A.

MISS LOTOISE PLANT COMPLIMENTS VISITOR

Miss Alma Jones, of Clanton, the attractive guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huggins, was the honoree of a pretty progressive heart party given Monday evening by Miss Lotoise Plant at her home in Woodlawn. The games were played at four tables, score being kept on tally records that were daintily hand-painted in sketches of Summer girls in white and pink, the selected color note and the prizes, a hand-embroidered handkerchief and a copy of "Pigs is Pigs" going to Miss Helen Hay and Mr. Pike, respectively.

Miss Plant, who wore a fetching evening frock of pink crepe, garnished with shadow laces and black velvet, was assisted in her office as hostess by her mother, Mrs. C. W. Plant, in a black messaline trimmed in laces, and Mrs. C. Bently Hughes in a costume of lavendar silk with touches of white net. Miss Mattaleigh Plant and Miss Flora Jones presided over the punch bowl which supplemented a delicious ice refreshment. Among those present were:

Misses Pauline Johnson, Bessie Healey, Alma Jones. Bernice Conner, Helen Hay, Lula West Sudie Holmesl Messrs. Bennie Russell, I. F. Froker, W. J. Schuster, L. L. Robertson. L. W. Pike, R. L. Whitesides, S. Whitley, F. M. Morris Griffin Shurbet, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huggins.—B'ham News.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT AS HE IS.

He has not, in this campaign, said anything good of the Republican party which twice made him President; of the principles of the party which he has in past done as much as any one to uphold; of its President, whom he assisted to nominate and elect; of its leaders who elected him to every political office he has ever held. He has talked only of himself and for himself, and he has brought forth a platform which would revolutionize the government, remake the constitution and the laws, destroy the independence of the judiciary, and provide r despotism with Theodore Roosevelt as despot.

Such is William B. McKinley's picture of Theodore Roosevelt and of the campaign he has conducted for honors that a Washington nobly refused and that were denied to a Grant. And who, that has not made himself drunk with the poisons of Theodore Roosevelt's delirious disregard for the safety of liberty from tyranny and of property from a socialistic confiscation, can deny the accuracy of that picture?

When and where in the three months since he came out into the open and avowed himself a claimant for a third term has Theodore Roosevelt spoken otherwise than evil of the Republicans who presumed to disagree with him or refused to further his insensate ambition, grown by what it has fed upon to a delirium of self-praise—to a continuous shriek of "I," "I," "I!"

From Theodore Roosevelt's viewpoint, and to his mind, there are now just two kinds of Americans, and no more—those who are villains and traitors because they oppose him, and those who are high souled patriots because they are ready to fall down and worship him.

All who oppose him he describes as knaves or fools, as corrupters or corrupted. Men whom he called his dearest friends he now denounces as scoundrels or tools of scoundrels because their thoughts are not now his thoughts. Men whom in the past he denounced as "malefactors" he now takes to his bosom, because they have seen their profit in promoting his demented ambition.

Theodore Roosevelt claims to be the "choice of the people," and in proof points to the states where presidential primaries were held. Among these states was his own New York, by whose Republican his claims were overwhelmingly rejected. Those among whom a man lives are supposed to know him best, and to be best able to judge his character. All human experience warrants us in so believing.

In the states where he was successful in the primaries there is an ominous discrepancy in the ballot figures. Mr. Roosevelt may have received a majority of the votes cast at the primary, but it was a minority in most cases of what has been the normal Republican vote. By this fact we are forced upon these alternatives:

Either those states have ceased to be Republican or Mr. Roosevelt is merely the choice of that minority of chronic discontents and runners to the loudest noise which exists in every community. And in any case the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt would make Republican success impossible.

Even if he could be elected it would not be a Republican victory, for he has, in his campaign, repudiated every principle that distinguished the Republican party from others and condemned every Republican leader who declined to burn incense at the shrine of his egotism.

He proposes a constitutional revolution and the substitution of the despotic government of men only for the orderly government of laws. He brooks no opposition or criticism. He demands that he be all-in-all, and his fellow citizens and republicans nothing. Such is the man the American people are asked to set in power over their lives and fortunes.—The Chicago Inter Ocean (Republican.)

LIQUOR DISPENSERS

IN THE TOILS OF THE LAW.

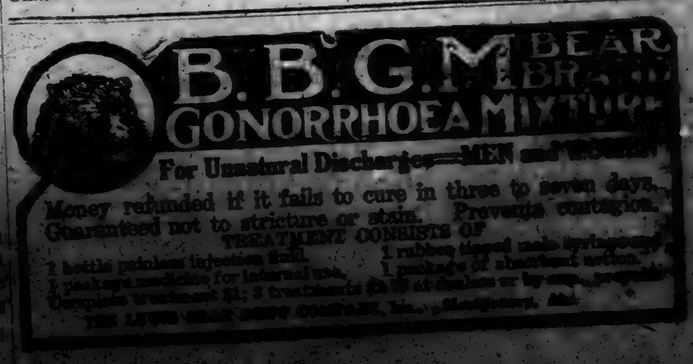
Last Saturday was a field day for the Sheriff and his force, five persons being arrested, charged with selling liquors.

Two of the youug men apprehended doubtless thought they had a perfect right to sell their "juice" as it was home made scuppernong wine; the others were selling just plain old whiskey.

Those caught in the Sheriff's drag net were:

Sim Lowery, Rueben Riggins, Torrence Eiland, Hugh Lockhart and Shelley Matthews.

LAKE HAS DISAPPEARED



SKEETERS WILL HAVE TO HUNT ANOTHER HOME.

All honor to Mayor Matthews and Marshal Hayes. The inland sea has disappeared and in its place there now stands a nice, clean basin free of water, trash and pestilence. Under the supervision of Marshal Hayes the pond has been drained and made to present a first rate appearance. No more will the noxious skeeter and the pestilence breeding fly find a nesting place there; fever germs have been cleared away and the place made to look real inviting.

PROFESSOR ROPER

GOES TO JEMISON ANOTHER YEAR

Prof. Howard Roper has just closed a contract by which he becomes Principal of the Jemison High School. Last year Prof. Roper was stationed at Stanton where he had a most successful year; in fact so successful that he asked to return for another year, but the Jemison field proved more inviting—and more lucrative also.

Twenty-five men were killed at Dante, Va., in a drunken row precipitated in a card game. It is reported that the dead men are Italians and mountaineers who made their homes at Dante, a mining town of about 6,000 inhabitants. The fight which resulted in so many fatalities is said to have ensued when the Italians charged the mountaineers with trying to defeat them at their game by using unfair methods. Practically every man in the game lost his life.

Baltimore awaits the coming of 1,090 delegates to the Democratic national convention, the preparations for which have practically been completed. Already the advance guard of boomers for candidates for the presidential nomination have now pitched their camps on the battleground and are laying the final plans of campaign. With the arrival of National Chairman Norman E. Mack, the official arrangements for the convention will be considered for adoption by the arrangements committee.

Count Tissea, president of the lower house of Hungary, had a very narrow escape from assassination in the diet at Budapest. He was fired upon three times by Deputy Julius Knovses, who then shot himself, probably fatally. The attack upon the count is a direct outcome of the agitation which has been persisted in since his election as speaker, May 22. Tissea is an opponent of universal suffrage.

An uninstructed delegation to the Democratic national convention at Baltimore was elected by the Louisiana state convention.

At district delegate conventions held in the fice congressional districts of West Virginia, Speaker Clark secured six instructed delegates in the second, third and fourth districts.

The Aiken county grand jury returned a true bill to the indictment against Fred O. Beach of New York, charging assault and battery with intent to kill. Pearl Hampton, the negro laundress, was attacked the same night Mrs. Beach was cut across the throat, and seven prominent Aiken, S. C., residents were summoned before the grand jury and gave evidence. The case will be called for trial at the fall term of court.

President Gomez of Cuba on being informed that American warships had been ordered to Havana, declined to make any comment. Senor Ramirez, the presidential secretary, however, said that the president had expressed neither satisfaction nor regret on the receipt of the news.

The navy department of the United States, acting under instructions from the state department, ordered Admiral Osterhaus to proceed forthwith from Key West to Havana with one dispatch ship and one other ship. These orders were issued by the state department, after the receipt of a dispatch from Minister Beaupre reporting that conditions in Havana and the suburbs had assumed the character of a race war.

Just before Capt. A. H. Rostron of the steamer Carpathia, the savior of the Titanic survivors, sailed for Mediterranean points, he was stormed by a host of pretty girls, who blushed less rosily than the captain as they begged for the customary blessing of a hero—a kiss. Two of them brought a gift in the shape of a black kitten, as an omen of good luck to the captain and his ship.

Frank confession of President Gomez that he was unable to meet the demands of the large plantation owners in eastern Cuba for adequate guards against the marauders and insurrectos was the factor that led Captain Kline, commanding the United States naval station at Guantanamo, to set in motion the body of United States marines gathered there for just such a purpose. The captain's action in dispatching nearly half of his available force of marines into the interior of Cuba gave the signal for the departure of half of the second squadron of the Atlantic fleet. American marines have landed on Cuban soil. To the number of 450, under command of Colonel Lucas, they went ashore at Caimerna and proceeded to Guantanamo City.

President Taft granted an unconditional pardon to Willard N. Jones of Portland, Ore., convicted of land frauds in the famous cases in which the late Senator Mitchell of Oregon and Binger Hermann.

Nineteen hundred prisoners were sitting down to dinner, when 200 or 300 of the men began a concerted demonstration. The men were driven out with hose spouting steam, several of the rioters being severely burned. The rioters after having been locked up continued their shrieks of defiance and kept up their shouting at intervals.

Forty-eight was the total number of delegates to the Republican convention turned into the "Taft column" by the national committee's decisions, which is in session in Chicago. Cases from Arkansas, Florida and Georgia were passed upon.

Twenty-four delegates from Alabama and Arkansas were added to the Taft column by the action of the Republican national committee on the so-called Roosevelt contests from those states. All contests presented before the committee were decided in Taft's favor, and in all but two of the decisions the action was unanimous.

The first large and concrete undertaking in the making of the New South has just been consummate in the acquisition of the Seaboard Air Line, the most important industry of the South Atlantic states, by Mr. Davies Warfield of Baltimore and a syndicate of Southern business men and New York bankers. The transfer of the majority stock of the property has bene made, and now Southern men have come into control of the property. Purchase of this railroad was part of a larger idea of Mr. Warfield and progressive Southern who oganized early in the year for this purpose.

Naked children by the score appeared in the streets of Chicago through the congested quarters of the west side of the city as a striking protest against the suffering brought to Hebrew women and children by reason of the high cost of kosher meat, the only meat Hebrews may eat.

The sentence of Mrs. Lena Cusumano of Hull, Mass., condemned to die for the murder of her husband, Frank Cusumano, was commuted to life imprisonment by the executive council. Enrico Mascioli, convicted jointly with Mrs. Cusumano, was electrocuted at the Charleston state prison.

Blow after blow was given the new commerce court by the Supreme court of the United States, which upheld the exclusive jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission over Federal rate laws. The principal decision was announced by Chief Justice White. He was sustained by the entire court. He held that the commerce court was not to substitute its judgment for the interstate commerce commission in the administration of the rate laws.

Testimony intended to show how the power of the New York City clearing house committee was used to force a solvent bank to the wall during the aftermath of the panic of 1907, with the result that the "fair reputation" of its president was "blasted," was dramatically presented before the Pujo committee of the house of representatives, which is investigating the so-called money trust.

The cost of policing the national capitol and the office buildings provided for the use of senators and representatives is $107,850. This item caused a considerable stir when it was reached in the legislative appropriation bill. Senator Reed of Missouri said that he was once mayor of Kansas City and that the town only had one policeman to every 1,000 persons, while there was a policeman on Capitol Hill to every four congressmen.

An investigation of the law office of the postoffice department is sought by Representative Akin of New York who introduced a resolution asking that a special committee be appointed to inquire into the conduct of the department for withholding from delivery mail sent under a congressional frank. Mr. Akin recently delivered a speech in the house in which he attacked several prominent New York politicians. Mr. Akin took an excerpt and had it printed on the envelopes in which he sought to mail copies of the speech. It was held up as a violation of the postal laws.

"I'M ONLY A LITTLE GIRL"

Failing Eyesight Responsible for an Old Man's Mistake—Rebuke Hardly Effective.

A certain group of youngsters in an exclusive West side residential section had been very noisy throughout the forenoon.

The children were still doing their utmost to imitate a bedlam, when a very angry old man appeared at the door of a nearby apartment house. He was quite old, and it was evident that his eyesight was not the best, but he finally succeeded in picking out a youngster who was aiding very strenuously in the noise making.

The aged man walked over to the child, took it by the hand and walked back to the apartment. When he reached the doorway he turned to the child and said:

"Don't you know it's against the law to make so much noise?"

"Yes, sir," was the meek reply.

"Well, don't you know that you'll be arrested and put in jail, and then you can never be president of the United States?"

"Please, sir?" replied the child, "I don't care; I'm only a little girl."—New York Mail.

The Only Way.

An elder while baptizing converts at a revival meeting advanced with a wiry, sharp-eyed old chap into the water. He asked the usual question, whether there was any reason why the ordinance of baptism should not be administered. After a pause a tall, powerful-looking man who was looking quietly on remarked:

"Elder, I don't want to interfere in yer business, but I want to say that this is an old sinner you have got hold of, and that one dip won't do him any good; you'll have to anchor him out in deep water over night."—Life.

What She Wants.

"I want you to build me a fashionable home."

"Have you any special ideas as to the style of house you want?" asked the architect.

"Not exactly. I want one of those modern places. You know the kind I mean—one with a living room too big to keep warm and a kitchen too small to cook in."—Detroit Free Press.

Still Hoping.

"Life is a series of disappointments."

"Yes. I know a man who has been hoping nearly all his life that he would some day come into possession of a coin worth more than its face value."

Less and Less.

"This is a great age we are living in," said Brinkley. "We have smokeless gunpowder, horseless wagons, wireless telegraph—"

"Yes," interrupted Cynicus, "and we have moneyless foreigners coming here and contracting loveless marriages with heartless heiresses."—Judge.

Twenty-five men were killed at Dante, Va., in a drunken row precipitated in a card game. It is reported that the dead men are Italians and mountaineers who made their homes at Dante, a mining town of about 6,000 inhabitants. The fight which resulted in so many fatalities is said to have ensued when the Italians charged the mountaineers with trying to defeat them at their game by using unfair methods. Practically every man in the game lost his life.

Baltimore awaits the coming of 1,090 delegates to the Democratic national convention, the preparations for which have practically been completed. Already the advance guard of boomers for candidates for the presidential nomination have now pitched their camps on the battleground and are laying the final plans of campaign. With the arrival of National Chairman Norman E. Mack, the official arrangements for the convention will be considered for adoption by the arrangements committee.

Count Tissea, president of the lower house of Hungary, had a very narrow escape from assassination in the diet at Budapest. He was fired upon three times by Deputy Julius Knovses, who then shot himself, probably fatally. The attack upon the count is a direct outcome of the agitation which has been persisted in since his election as speaker, May 22. Tissea is an opponent of universal suffrage.

An uninstructed delegation to the Democratic national convention at Baltimore was elected by the Louisiana state convention.

At district delegate conventions held in the fice congressional districts of West Virginia, Speaker Clark secured six instructed delegates in the second, third and fourth districts.

The Aiken county grand jury returned a true bill to the indictment against Fred O. Beach of New York, charging assault and battery with intent to kill. Pearl Hampton, the negro laundress, was attacked the same night Mrs. Beach was cut across the throat, and seven prominent Aiken, S. C., residents were summoned before the grand jury and gave evidence. The case will be called for trial at the fall term of court.

"I'M ONLY A LITTLE GIRL"

Failing Eyesight Responsible for an Old Man's Mistake—Rebuke Hardly Effective.

A certain group of youngsters in an exclusive West side residential section had been very noisy throughout the forenoon.

The children were still doing their utmost to imitate a bedlam, when a very angry old man appeared at the door of a nearby apartment house. He was quite old, and it was evident that his eyesight was not the best, but he finally succeeded in picking out a youngster who was aiding very strenuously in the noise making.

The aged man walked over to the child, took it by the hand and walked back to the apartment. When he reached the doorway he turned to the child and said:

"Don't you know it's against the law to make so much noise?"

"Yes, sir," was the meek reply.

"Well, don't you know that you'll be arrested and put in jail, and then you can never be president of the United States?"

"Please, sir?" replied the child, "I don't care; I'm only a little girl."—New York Mail.

IN THE KINDERGARTEN.

"Now, Willie, why do bees swarm—what is the cause of it?"

"Oh, simply bee cause, I guess."

The Only Way.

An elder while baptizing converts at a revival meeting advanced with a wiry, sharp-eyed old chap into the water. He asked the usual question, whether there was any reason why the ordinance of baptism should not be administered. After a pause a tall, powerful-looking man who was looking quietly on remarked:

"Elder, I don't want to interfere in yer business, but I want to say that this is an old sinner you have got hold of, and that one dip won't do him any good; you'll have to anchor him out in deep water over night."—Life.

What She Wants.

"I want you to build me a fashionable home."

"Have you any special ideas as to the style of house you want?" asked the architect.

"Not exactly. I want one of those modern places. You know the kind I mean—one with a living room too big to keep warm and a kitchen too small to cook in."—Detroit Free Press.

Still Hoping.

"Life is a series of disappointments."

"Yes. I know a man who has been hoping nearly all his life that he would some day come into possession of a coin worth more than its face value."

Less and Less.

"This is a great age we are living in," said Brinkley. "We have smokeless gunpowder, horseless wagons, wireless telegraph—"

"Yes," interrupted Cynicus, "and we have moneyless foreigners coming here and contracting loveless marriages with heartless heiresses."—Judge.

How He Got Them.

"Dat feller' Rastus Skinnah done bin talkin' a powahful lot 'bout how he's a-raisin' chickens."

"Sho! He doan' mean 'raisin',' he means 'liftin'."—Catholic Standard and Times.

EXPANSION IN IRON AND STEEL TRADE

Reports Constitute Most Encouraging Feature.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

The quickened movement of trade is clearly revealed by the statistics of bank clearings, railroad earnings and pig iron production. On the other hand, in number of defaults and amount of liabilities the May record of commercial failures, while better as compared with previous months of this year, was unfavorable as compared with corresponding months in most of the preceding years. The advices from the iron and steel trade constitute the most encouraging feature of the industrial situation. There was a remarkable producion of pig iron during May and, with the prospect of adequate crops, the reasonable outlook is for a high water mark activity this year in this great basic industry, with an advance in prices not unlikely. Undoubtedly business sentiment and business enterprise are still held in check by solicitude regarding the growing crops and the pending economic controversies but they are not standing idle, by any means, but cheered by the extraordinary expansion in the iron and steel trade, the advance in copper and the improvement in the condition in the textile idustries, they plainly display a desire to forge ahead rapidly as opportunity presents itself. A shortage of labor is reported in the Connellsville coke region.

In the primary markets for dry goods jobbers and retailers are fairly active, improved weather conditions having assisted distribution and stimulated the demand for goods for immediate consumption. Cotton goods at first hands are rather dull, but large shipments were made on old orders. More wash goods and summer merchandise are going into consumption and while export business is quiet for the moment shipments continue heavy. Fine cloths are quiet and dress ginghams dull, but staple ginghams are in fair demand. Duck holds steady and colored cottons are firm. The cotton yarn markets are quiet and prices easier, but worsted yarns spinners are busy on sample lines for a new season. Fall orders are coming in slowly for broad silks but new lines of tie silks are attracting much attention.

Trade in seasonable footwear continues to improve and many new orders are booked, but fall and winter contracts are backward, owing chiefly to the question of price and some manufacturers lack new business. Pronounced strength continues in all descriptions of sole and upper leather, but the market is generaly inactive.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Better, more seasonable weather and the progress of the crops toward points where progress itself can be measured are responsible for a further expansion in the volume of final distributive trade. This is, of course, most marked in retail trade in the larger cities and industrial centers and less so in the country districts, where farmers are still wrestling with the obstacles imposed by an almost uniformly late planting and growing season. Dry goods and light summer wearing apparel are feeling the stimulus of the weather and some reorder business is being engaged by jobbers, who also find an additional impetus to trade in semi-annual markdown trades to close out stocks of summer goods. There is a fair trade in fall goods but this is governed by a studied conservatism bred of political uncertainty and desire for a clearer view of crop probabilities. The industries are in rather good shape. Iron and steel report close to maximum production, though new demand is not so marked. The building trades show a good increase for May and the five months, and the coal trade having resumed work demand and distribution are better. Coke is easier. Trade on the Great Lakes is good and promises to be better. Reports from the cotton goods trade still display some of the curious cross-currents hitherto noted. Some lines of goods are closely sold up. Others, such as heavy yarns and wide prints, are softer. Still the general report from nearly all lines is that stocks are not in any sense burdensome. Business failures in the United States for the week ending June 6 were 197, against 231 last week, 232 in the like week of 1911, 189 in 1910, 197 in 1909, and 253 in 1908. Business failures in Canada for the week ending with Thursday number 19, which compared with 17 last week and 23 in the like week of 1911.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending June 6, 5,908,693 bushels, against 4,914,400 last week and 2,432,820 this week last year.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES.

Ashland, Ky.—Wallace Hurt, aged 8, and William Pemberton, aged 9, were run down and killed by a Chesapeake and Ohio passenger train.

Tacoma, Wash.—Louis W. Hill, who recently resigned as president of the Great Northern Railway, said he had received a telegram from his father, James J. Hill, stating that he (Hill) had resigned as chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern.

NICE MAN.

Softly—Won't you give me another dance?

Miss Charming—Really, Mr. Softly, you've had nearly all so far and—

Softly—Yes; you know, it's just to spite Miss Lovely. We've had a quarrel.

Miracle Repeated.

A Danish correspondent of the Lancet in a recent issue reports a case which he says "throws light on a miracle related in the Apocrypha." The patient was a man seventy-seven years old, with a cataract of eight years' standing. While at work in his garden one day the patient had occasion to rub his right eye several times on account of the sweat which had trickled into it. He awoke next morning to find that the sight of his right eye was restored. His wife and children also remarked that his eye no longer looked gray. On examination by a doctor five days later nothing was to be seen of the lens till the patient looked down, when it was seen as a gray, shining body floating in the vitreous humor at the bottom of the eye, where it moved with the movement of the eye. The miracle of which Tobias is the hero is the subject of a painting by Rembrandt in Brussels.

Sir Philip Sidney Outdone.

In the seventeenth century wars between Denmark and Sweden a wounded Dane was about to raise a wooden bottle of water when a cry reached him from a wounded Swede stretched on the ground at a little distance.

The good Dane, using the words of Sir Philip Sidney, stumbled to the side of his enemy, and, saying, "Thy need is greater than mine," kneeled down and offered the water to his lips. But the Swede, suddenly raising a pistol, fired and wounded the Dane in the shoulder.

"Rascal!" cried the twice-wounded soldier of Denmark, "I would have befriended you and you would murder me in return. Now I will punish you. I would have given you the whole bottle, but now you shall have only half."

He then raised the bottle to his lips, drank of it and afterward gave it into the hand that had attempted to kill him.

Old Industry Revived.

The offer by students of hand-woven bed coverlets as payment for their tuition led the president of Berea college to establish the Berea fireside industries. "Repair that loom" became a slogan which awakened interest in the remotest cabins, the fireside industries now include chairs, saddles, ax-handles, wooden plates, forks, spoons and baskets, in addition to blankets, linen towel covers, ramie towels and rag rugs of many colors and designs. The mountaineers often come a day's journey on horseback to the fairs or to get detailed instruction.

"Why not on the nap of the carpet?"

Swear no more by a cold day in June!

Who invented the "steam roller" anyway? Was'nt it Teddy? Well, whether or not, he sees how it works.

The "steam roller" seems to have a flare-back attachment which the esteemed Roosevelt did not investigate fully—It works "gwine and a commin"

Gov. O'Neal gave the "Birminghamers', some grape shot last week—and they deserved it. The idea of honest folks trying to dodge taxes because somebody else is a thief!

Taft is at least consistent. In 1908 Roosevelt turned all the contesting delegations down who were opposed to Taft—with the exception of three measley delegates who went to Foraker of Ohio.—Now Taft is doing the same thing—the trick taught him by Teddy, and Teddy is kicking.

The Alabama delegation and the Underwood marching cl will not be quartered at the Eutaw House as at first arranged—that hostelry having been recently damaged by fire—but nevertheless the Underwood delegations and the Underwood marching club will be there and will do the turn.

It should be borne in mind that the election for President and Congressmen comes usually the first week in November, every second and fourth year; a child born on election day is not eligible to registration in Alabama, even twenty-one years after. Mothers and fathers would do well to bear this in mind, if they want their male heirs to become voters upon attaining their majority. It disfranchises a man for noe full year, to be born thefirst week in Novemberunless heis particular about the day selectedfor being born.

It has been charged more than once that the editor of the PRESS has used its columns to villify certain gentlemen and frequently indulges in a little political mud slinging. We wish to deny both statements.

The editor of the PRESS does not believe in that kind of politics, hence, does not indulge in it. When a person holds an important political official position he is not above criticism and this paper reserves the right to indulge in criticism—when an official in public life gets beyond criticism he is almost beyond the judgment.

We take great pride in saying pleasant things about people, but painful as it is, it is sometimes necessary to say unpleasant things. Mud slinging and villification are not a part of the editor's make up. Our columns are always open to our friends, and we are glad to occasionally publish articles from their pens. When such articles are signed we invariably give them space; when they are not signed we invariably give them to the the waste basket.

Several articles which have appeared in the PRESS and which have caused considerahle comment were signed—however much they may have reflected the sentiments and opinions of the editor, he had no right to appropriate them. When the writer of an article signs his name, he thereupon becomes responsible for the article, and to say that the editor is lendieg his paper or what little talent he may possess to villification is to say that the printer of a Bible arrogates to himself the right to lay claim to its inspiration—simply because he printed it. That's bosh and non-sense, and none but a dunce would entertain such thoughts.

When the PRESS man has anything to say, he is mean enough, ugly enough and old enough to say it without hiding behind any old foxy names.

The Press wishes to indulge in a little political prognostication. That is not a sin, is it? Before another issue appears the republican national convention will have performed its task and the democratic convention will be in session at Baltimore. These two conventions are of world-wide importance; they decide which of two men shall rule the greatest nation upon earth; they set forth principles which shall, at least for four years, be the policy of a nation which has led all other nations in achievment, in research, in finance and in growth. These policies and the candidates, therefore, will have a general, if not a forcible bearing upon the world's history. Every citizen is more or less interested in the outcome of the two conventions—the one at Chicago and the other at Baltimore.

Teddy Roosevevelt, the erst while president is striving vigorously for the nomination to a third term; Taft is bending every nerve to secure a re-nomination—these are the republican candidates whom the country at large are to take into consideration before the convention assembles at Chicago. Its true that LaFollette, Cummins. and one or two others have their "hats in the ring," but they amount to about as much as did Foraker in the convention of 1908, unless a revolution breaks out in Chicago. Taft and Roosevelt are the dominant figures and their personalities will control the convention.

Taft stands, or pretends to stand, for the "busting" of the great trusts.

But, so far as any one has learned to the contrary, it is merely and purely "a stand." True, the Standard Oil Co. has been dissolved by order of court, but the dissolution means nothing more than the dividing up of the one big trust into a number of smaller ones to more effectively gather in the coin of the people. The Harvester trust and the "Money" trust are under investigation, but it will take more than a Taft to make people believe that anything serious will happen to either.

Roosevelt is aggressive, Taft is conservative—extremely so; the one is chuck full of exaggerated "Ego," the other filled to overflowing with cautious legality, hence neither will prove attractive either to the classes or the masses.

The outrageous way in which the Taft steam roller has been used at Chicago in recent days will secure him many delegates in the convention, but they will not stick. People like fair play in all things; the deliberate action of the committee in taking the California delegates from Roosevelt and giving them Taft after the former had carried the state by 77,000 majority, will make many frieuds for the strenuous one—this is but a sample of the actions of the committee, each item of which will tend to cause a revolt in the hearts and minds of fair minded people.

It is a foregone conclusion that neither, if nominated, could be elected; each has said too many hard things of the other to recover sufficiently before the election; neither could conscientiously support the other; the friends of the one could not lend assistance to the other—both men and their friends know this.

What then will be the outcome? William Barnes, Jr., the big cheese of New York, while espousing the cause of Taft, really wants a change—he is at heart for Root.

Taft will go into the convention with a majority of the delegates "hog-tied" and would, doubtless, secure the nomination on the first ballot, but Roosevelt is yet to be reckoned with; the game now seems to be one of "freeze out" and neither cares so much for the nomination as he does for the defeat of his opponent. Taft, recognizing his own defeat, will side step in favor of some other candidate who is opposed to Roosevelt and throw all his strength to him; Roosevelt will create a "rough house" as long as there is the slightest chance to obstruct matters, and the convention will resemble an old Fourth District affair before the disfranchisement of the negro. Taft's sun has set, tho' it appears on the surface to be rising; Roosevelt has so conducted himself as to forfeit the esteem of his old time admirers—neither will come out of the convention as strong as he went in, a third man, possibly Root, will be the nominee of the party of the trusts.

A Prominent New York Politician Near Death

Hon. R. N. Lansing, of Rensselaer, N. Y., Six Times a Member of the Assembly, Tells of Narrow Escape.

"About fifteen years ago I was taken with rheumatism, which affected my heart producing what was called valvular trouble. Three doctors told me I would never do another day's work. While I had many remedies recommended to me I got a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and it helped me inside of 48 hours. At the end of the week I called on my doctor and asked him to examine me. He said I was better than he ever expected to see me and asked if I was taking his medicine. When I told him I was not, but was taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, he said, 'Thank the Lord for Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy.' I continued to take it, and while I realized my heart was damaged so I could not expect a permanent cure, for fifteen years I worked every day, notwithstanding I had been told I would never work again. In July, 1911, I was taken with rheumatism again, and it went to my heart as before. I got so bad that one of the Albany papers wrote up my life and said I could not live but a few hours. I again took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy with very satisfactory results, and have not missed a day at business or in the legislature since January. I feel that Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has saved my life and cannot recommend it too highly."

The Chalice of Courage

Being the Story of Certain Persons Who Drank of it and Conquered

A Romance of Colorado

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transform brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk.

CHAPTER X.—(Continued.)

Have you ever climbed a mountain early in the morning while it was yet dark and having gained some dominant crest stood staring at the far horizon, the empurpled east, while the "dawn came up like thunder?" Or better still, have you ever stood within the cold, dark recesses of some deep valley of river or pass and watched the clear light spread its bars athwart the heavens like nebulous mighty pinions along the light touched crest of a towering range, until all of a sudden, with a leap almost of joy, the great sun blazed in the high horizon?

You might be born a child of the dark, and light might sear and burn your eye balls accustomed to cooler deeper shades, yet you could no more turn away from this glory, though you might hate it, than by mere effort of will you could cease to breathe the air. The shock that you might feel, the sudden surprise, is only faintly suggestive of the emotions in the breast of this man.

Once long ago the gentlest and tenderest of voices called from the dark to the light, the blind. And it is given to modern science and to modern skill sometimes to emulate that godlike achievement. Perhaps the surprise, the amazement, the bewilderment, of him who having been blind doth now see, if we can imagine it not having been in the case ourselves, will be a better guide to the understanding of this man's emotion when this woman came suddenly into his lonely orbit. His eyes were opened although he would not know it. He fought down his new consciousness and would have none of it. Yet it was there. He loved her!

With what joy did Selkirk welcome the savage sharer of his solitude! Suppose she had been a woman of his own race; had she been old, withered, hideous, he must have loved her on the instant, much more if she were young and beautiful. The thing was inevitable. Such passions are born. God forbid that we should deny it. In the busy haunts of men where women are as plenty as blackberries, to use Falstaff's simile, and where a man may sometimes choose between a hundred, or a thousand, such loves are born, forever.

A voice in the night, a face in the street, a whispered word, the touch of a hand, the answering throb of another heart—and behold! two walk together where before each walked alone. Sometimes the man or the woman who is born again of love knows it not, refuses to admit it, refuses to recognize it. Some birth pain must awaken the consciousness of the new life.

If those things are true and possible under every day conditions and to ordinary men and women, how much more to this solitary. He had seen this woman, white breasted like the foam, rising as the ancient goddess from the Paphian sea. Over that recollection, as he was a gentleman and a Christian, he would fain draw a curtain, before it erect a wall. He must not dwell upon that fact, he would not linger over that moment. Yet he could not forget it.

Then he had seen her lying prone, yet unconsciously graceful in her abandonment, on the sward; he had caught a glimpse of her white face desperately uptossed by the rolling water; he had looked into the unfathomable depth of her eyes at that moment when she had awakened in his arms after such a struggle as had taxed his manhood and almost broken his heart; he had carried her unconsciously, ghastly white with her pain-drawn face, stumbling desperately over the rocks in the beating rain to this, his home. Then he had held that poor, bruised slender little foot in his hand, gently, skilfully treating it, when he longed to press his lips passionately upon it. Last of all he had looked into those eyes, warmed with the red light of the fire, searched her dreamy eyes—almost like blue pools, in whose depths there yet lurked fire and light, while her golden hair tinged crimson by the blaze lay on the white pillow—and he loved her. God pity him, fighting against fact and admission of it, yet how could he help it?

He had loved once before in his life, with the fire of youth and spring, but it was not like this. He did not recognize this new passion in any light from the past; therefore he would not admit it. Hence, he did not understand it. But he saw and admitted and understood enough to know that the past was no longer the supreme subject in his life, that the present rose higher, bulked larger and hid more and more of his far-off horizon.

He felt like a knave and a traitor, as if he had been base, disloyal, false to his ideal, recreant to his remembrance. Was he indeed a true man? Did he have that rugged strength, that abiding faith, that eternal consciousness, that lasting affection, beside which the rocky paths he often trod were things transient, perishable, evanescent? Was he a weakling that he fell at the first sight of another woman?

He stopped his ceaseless pace forward and backward, and stopped near that frail and futile door. She was there and there was none to prevent. His hand sought the latch.

What was he about to do? God forbid that a thought he could not freely share with humanity should enter his brain then. He held all women sacred, and so he had ever done, and this woman in her loneliness, in her helplessness, in her weakness, trebly appealed to him. But he would look upon her, he would fain see if she were there, if it were all not a dream, the creation of his disordered imagination.

Men had gone mad in hermitages in the mountains, they had been driven insane in lonely oases in vast deserts; and they had peopled their solitude with men and women. Was this some working of a disordered brain, too much turned upon itself and with too tremendous a pressure upon it, producing an illusion? Was there in truth any woman there? He would raise the latch and open the door and look. Once more the hand went stealthily to the latch.

The woman slept quietly on. No thin barricade easily unlocked or easily broken protected her. Something intangible, yet stronger than the thickest, the most rigid bars of steel guarded her; something unseen, indescribable, but so unmistakable when it left the latch, it fell gently, he drew back and turned away trembling, a conqueror who mastered himself. He was awake to the truth again.

What had he been about to do? Profane, uninvited, the sanctity of her chamber, violate the hospitality of his own house? Even with a proper motive, imperil his self-respect, shatter her trust, endanger that honor which so suddenly became a part of him on demand? She would not probably know; she could never know unless she awoke. What of that? That ancient honor of his life and race rose like a mountain whose scarped face cannot be scaled.

He fell back with a swift turn, a feeling almost womanly; and more men, perhaps, if they lived in feminine isolation, as self-centered as women are so often by necessity, would be as feminine as their sisters—influenced him, overcame him. His hand went to his hunting shirt. Nervously he tore it open; he grasped a bright object that hung against his breast. As he did so, the thought came to him that not before in five years had he been for a moment unconscious of the pressure of that locket over his heart, but now that this other had come, he had to seek for it to find it.

The man dragged it out, held it in his hand and opened it. He held it so tightly that it almost gave beneath the strong grasp of his strong hand. From a nearby box he drew another object with his other hand. He took the two to the light, the soft light of the candle upon the table, and stared from one to the other with eyes brimming.

Like crystal gazers, he saw other things than those presented to the casual vision. He heard other sounds than the beat of the rain upon the roof, the roar of the wind down the canon. A voice that he had sworn he would never forget, but which, God forgive him, had not now the clearness that it might have had yesterday, whispered awful words to him.

Anon he looked into another face, red, too, with no hue from the hearth or leaping flame, but red with the blood of ghastly wounds. He heard again that report, the roar louder and more terrible than any peal of thunder that rived the clouds above his head and made the mountains quake and tremble. He was conscious again of the awful stillness of death that supervaded. He dropped on his knees, buried his face in his hands where they rested on picture and locket on the rude table.

He Stared From One to the Other.

Ah, the past died hard, for a moment he was the lover of old—remorse, passionate expiation, solitude—he and the dead together—the world and the living forgot! He would not be false, he would be true there was no power in any feeble woman's hand to drive him [illegible] throbs in the breast of those who depend on it feel that their dependence is not in vain watched over her.

Cherishing no evil thought, the man had power to gratify his desire which might yet bear a sinister construction should it be observed. It was her privacy he was invading. She had trusted to him, she had said so, to his honor, and that stood her in good stead. His honor! Not in five years had he heard the word so [illegible] but he had not forgotten it. [illegible] not appealed to an absent thing, upon that [illegible] unconscious woman slept quietly on. The red firelight died away, the glowing coals sank into gray ash. Within the other room the cold dawn stealing through the unshaded window looked upon a field of battle—death, wounds, triumphs, defeats—portrayed upon one poor human face, upturned as sometimes victors and vanquished alike upturn stark faces from the field to the God above who may pity but who has not intervened.

So Jacob may have looked after that awful night when he wrestled until the day broke, with the angel, and would not let him go until he blessed him, walking, forever after with halting step as memorial, but with his blessing earned. Hath this man's blessing won or not? And must he pay for it if he hath achieved it?

And all the while the woman slept quietly upon the other side of that door.

CHAPTER XI.

The Log Hut in the Mountains.

What awakened the woman she did not know; in all probability it was the bright sunlight streaming through the narrow window before her. The cabin was so placed that the sun did not strike fairly into the room until it was some hours high, consequently she had her long sleep out entirely undisturbed. The man had made no effort whatever to awaken her. Whatever tasks he had performed since daybreak had been so silently accomplished that she had not been aware of them.

So soon as he could do so, he had left the cabin and was now busily engaged in his daily duties outside the cabin and beyond earshot. He knew that sleep was the very best medicine for her, and it was best that she should not be disturbed until in her own good time she awoke.

The clouds had emptied themselves during the night, and the wind had at last died away toward morning, and now there was a great calm abroad in the land. The sunlight was dazzling. Outside, where the untempered rays beat full upon the crests of the mountains, it was doubtless warm, but within the cabin it was chilly. The fire had long since burned completely away, and he had not entered the room to replenish it. Yet Enid Maitland had lain snug and warm under her blankets. She presently tested her wounded foot, by moving it gently, and discovered agreeably that it was much less painful than she had anticipated. The treatment the night before had been very successful.

She did not get up immediately, but the coldness of the room struck her so soon as she got out of bed. Upon her first awakening she was hardly conscious of her situation; her sleep had been too long and too heavy, and her awakening too gradual for any sudden appreciation of the new condition. It was not until she had stared around the walls of the rude cabin for sometime, that she realized where she was and what had happened. When she did so she arose at once.

Her first impulse was to call. Never in her life had she felt such deathlike stillness. Even in the camp almost always there had been a whisper of breeze through the pine trees, or the chatter of water over the rocks. But here there were no pine trees and no sound of rushing brook came to her. It was almost painful. She was keen to dress and go out of the house. She stood upon the rude puncheon floor on one foot, scarcely able yet to bear even the lightest pressure upon the other. There were her clothes on chairs and tables before the fireplace. Such had been the heat thrown out by that huge blaze that a brief inspection convinced her that everything was thoroughly dry. Dry or wet, she must needs put them on, since they were all she had. She noticed that there were no locks on the doors, and she realized that the only protection she had was the sense of decency and the honor of the man. That she had been allowed her sleep unmolested made her the more confident on that account.

She dressed hastily, although it was the work of some difficulty in view of her wounded foot, and of the stiff condition of her rough, dried apparel. Presently she was completely clothed, save for that disrobed foot. With the big clumsy bandages upon it, she could not draw her stocking over it, and even if she succeeded in that, she could in no way make shift to put on her boot.

The situation was awkward, the predicament annoying. She was wearing bloomers and a short skirt for her mountain climbing, and she did not know quite what to do. She thought of tearing up one of the rough, unbleached sheets and wrapping it around her leg, but she hesitated as to that. It was very trying. Otherwise she would for the man. In her helplessness she thought of his resourcefulness with eagerness. The man, however, did not appear, and there was nothing for her to do but to wait for him. Taking one of the blankets from the bed, she sat down and drew it across her knees and took stock of the room.

The cabin was built of logs, the room was large, perhaps 12 by 20 feet, with one side completely taken up by the stone fireplace; there were two windows, one on either side of the outer door, which opened toward the southwest. The walls were unplastered save in the chinks between the rough hewn logs of which it was made.

He Caught It Up Quickly.

Over the fireplace and around on one side ran a rude shelf covered with books. She had no opportunity to examine them, although later she would become familiar with every one of them.

Into the walls on the other side were driven wooden pegs; from some of them hung a pair of snow shoes, a heavy Winchester rifle, fishing tackle and other necessary wilderness paraphernalia. On the puncheon floor wolf and bear skins were spread. In one corner against the wall again were piled several splendid pairs of horns from the mountain sheep.

The furniture consisted of the single bed or berth in which she had slept, built against the wall in one of the corners, a rude table on which were writing materials and some books. A row of curtained shelves, evidently made of small boxes and surmounted by a mirror, occupied another space. There were two or three chairs, the handiwork of the owner, comfortable enough in spite of their rude construction. On some other pegs hung a slicker and a sou'wester, a fur overcoat, a fur cap and other rough clothes; a pair of heavy boots stood by the fireplace. On another shelf there were a number of scientific instruments, the nature of which she could not determine, although she could see that they were all in a beautiful state of preservation.

There was plenty of rude comfort in the room, which was excessively mannish. In fact, there was nothing anywhere which in any way spoke of the existence of woman—except a picture in a small, rough, wooden frame which stood on the table before which she sat down. The picture was of a handsome woman—naturally Enid Maitland saw that before anything else. She would not have been a woman if that had not engaged her attention more forcibly than any other fact in the room. She picked it up and studied it long and earnestly, quite unconscious of the reason for her interest, and yet a certain uneasy feeling might have warned her of what was toward in her bosom.

This young woman had not yet had time to get her bearings. She had not been able to realize all the circumstances of her adventure. So soon as she did so she would know that into her life a man had come, and whatever the course of that life might be in the future, he would never again be out of it.

untranslatable emotions that she [illegible] ied this picture. She marked a certain resentment the bold [illegible] quite apparent, despite the dim [illegible] outlines of a photograph never good. So far as she could discern woman was dark haired and dark —her direct antithesis! The viewer would have found little [illegible] in the presentment, but Enid land's eyes were sharpened by pray? At any rate, she decided the woman was of a rather [illegible] fiber, that in things finer and she would be found wanting. She such a woman, so the girl re acutely, as might inspire a pass

These thoughts were the re long and earnest inspection, was with some reluctance that th at last put the photograph aside looked toward the door. She wa gry, ravenously so. She began a little alarmed, and had just made up her mind to rise and ble out as she was, when she steps outside and a knock on door.

"What is it?" she asked in resp

"May I come in?"

"Yes," was the quick answer.

The man opened the door, ajar and entered the room.

"Have you been awake long?" began abruptly.

"Not very."

"I didn't disturb you, because needed sleep more than anything How do you feel?"

"Greatly refreshed, thank you

"And hungry, I suppose?"

"I will soon remedy that. foot?"

"It seems much better, but I—"

The girl hesitated, blushing. "I get my shoe on, and—"

The man nodded; he seemed derstand. He went to his cracke chiffonier and drew from it a coarse woolen stocking.

"That is the best that I can you," he said.

"And that will do very nicely," the girl. "It will cover the ban and that is the main thing."

SUBMARINE GOES TO BOTTOM OF SEA

TRAGEDY OCCURS DURING THE MANEUVERS OF THE FRENCH FLEET.

THE WHOLE NATION MOURNS

Sixth Craft of This Type That Has Been Lost by the French Navy Since Invention.

Cherbourg, France. — During the practice maneuvers of the French fleet the battleship Saint Louis collided with the submarine Vandemaire. The smaller craft immediately disappeared and is believed to have been cut in two and to have carried to their death the crew of 26 men.

The accident occurred between Aurigny Island and Cape Hague, in the Race of Alderney, where violent tidal currents prevail.

The battleship was steaming along slowly when the submarine suddenly appeared right under the bows of the warship. There was no time to avoid a collision. The stem of the Saint Louis struck the submarine with terrific force, driving the little craft below the surface. The engines of the warship had been quickly reversed, but when she was brought to a stop the submarine had disappeared, and only the threshing of the waters showed where the under-the-surface fighter had gone down.

The Vandemiare was commanded by Lieutenant Prioul, a young ensign, and had a crew of 25 men. She was launched July 7, 1910, and was the ninth vessel of the Pluviose type added to the French navy. She was 167 feet in length, with a beam of 16 feet.

The latest loss to the French navy has caused great distress, not only throughout the service, but among the public generally, which has been made so frequently to mourn naval disasters. No other navy has been so unfortunate in the matter of submarines.

The Vandemaire is the sixth craft of this type to be lost by the French navy.

TAFT HAS A CLOSE CALL.

Presidential Yacht Mayflower Narrowly Escapes a Collision.

Old Point Comfort, Va.—The presidential yacht, Mayflower, with the President and Mrs. Taft and party of distinguished guests aboard, narrowly escaped a collision with the steamer Northland of the Norfolk and Washington line, not far from Point Lookout, where the Potomac river empties into Chesapeake Bay. Only the vigilance of the officers of the Northland and the Mayflower and their prompt action prevented what looked for a minute like an accident.

As it happened the Northland narrowly missed the Mayflower. Officials and one or two persons on the passenger boat who were looking only got a momentary shock. It was a perfectly still moonlight morning with no sea running and the lights of passing vessels could be seen for miles. The few passengers awake showed no signs of panic but they looked relieved when danger was over.

The cause of the near accident:

The Northland gave a signal that she wished to pass on the Mayflower's port side and a few seconds later came the response from the yacht, one whistle blast, meaning that she wished the Northland to pass not on the port side but on the starboard.

Officers in the Northland's pilot house were astonished when they heard the Mayflower's one whistle, but they were even more surprised when the Mayflower began slowly to cross her bow. It was a few seconds before they grasped just what was happening, but when they did four or five sharp, short blasts shot from the Northland's whistle, meaning the seas over, "Danger, look out!" The quartermaster at her wheel was given a sharp order. He flung the wheel over, the engines of the Northland were slowed down perceptibly. She sheered to starboard with a shudder and the Mayflower made her way across the Northland's course with a gulf of deep green water between that quickly narrowed to less than a thousand feet. Once beyond the Northland's course the Mayflower seemed to slow up and the Northland seemed to slow starboard quarter.

Kimmerling had taken part in many important competitions, including the Paris-Rome-Turin race in May, 1911, and the Circuit de l'Est race in July of the same year.

CONSTANT DRAIN ON NATION

Cost of Tuberculosis and Other Preventable Diseases Has Been Put Into Figures.

While state commissions and other bodies are trying to find a method for reducing the cost of life insurance, Prof. James W. Glover of the University of Michigan demonstrates that every policy-holder of a $10,000 ordinary whole life policy could save about $20 a year on his premiums if tuberculosis and typhoid fever were eliminated. Tuberculosis alone causes a loss to such a policy holder of from $16.70 at twenty to $17.50 at the age of sixty. At age of twenty, with the present high death rate from tuberculosis, this one disease alone shortens the complete expectation of life by two years and 158 days. While the death rate from tuberculosis seems to be declining, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis says that the combined effort of every man, woman and child is necessary to bring about a radical reduction in life insurance rates such as Professor Glover has indicated.

IT IS CRIMINAL TO NEGLECT THE SKIN AND HAIR

Think of the suffering entailed by neglected skin troubles—mental because of disfiguration, physical because of pain. Think of the pleasure of a clear skin, soft, white hands, and good hair. These blessings, so essential to happiness and even success in life, are often only a matter of a little thoughtful care in the selection of effective remedial agents. Cuticura Soap and Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little, that it is almost criminal not to use them. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a postal to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston, will secure a liberal sample of each, with 32-page booklet on skin and scalp treatment.

Oddities of Justice.

That the whole theory of penal codes is practically unsound and opposed to the modern conceptions of the relation of the state to crime, is the contention of Eugene Smith of the New York bar, writing in the May number of Case and Comment, the lawyers' magazine, illustrating the absurdity and disparity between penalty for crimes in different states. Mr. Smith says: "The average sentence for perjury in Florida is ten years, in Maine one year; for larceny, in Delaware ten years, in the District of Columbia ten months; the penalty for arson in Pennsylvania is twice that of burglary, but in Connecticut the guilt of burglary is twice that of arson; the guilt of counterfeiting in Ohio is twice that of perjury, but in Rhode Island the guilt of perjury is twice that of counterfeiting.

Law of Life.

Two men were out walking one day in sun-kissed California. Suddenly, kissing time being over, it began to rain in torrents, and they were miles from the car line. One man laughed, long and loud. The other wept bitterly. "Why do you laugh?" he asked his chuckling companion. "Because I am paying meter rates on water. But why do you weep?" "Because I am paying $10 a day for climate," replied the tourist. "One man's meat is another man's meat bill."

"The Hon. Stephen Coleridge, the English anti-vivisectionist," said an anti-vivisectionist of Philadelphia, "is delighted with the recent English vivisection report, which promises to abolish even the use of live bait in fishing.

"Mr. Coleridge once argued here in Philadelphia about the cruelty of fishing with worms.

"'Oh,' his opponent said, 'the mere fact that a worm writhes and wriggles when impaled on a hook is no proof that it is actually suffering pain.'

"'No, oh, no!' said Mr. Coleridge, sarcastically. 'Beyond doubt that is just the worm's way of laughing at being tickled.'"

Vogue in Outer Garments.

According to the Dry Goods Economist, at the present time retailers are featuring wraps of charmeuse and satin. The best sellers are the medium-priced numbers retailing from $10 to $30. These are usually attractively lined in some bright color, giving a pleasing contrast. Lace collars and cuffs are often used as a finishing touch and are very effective, while white lace is used largely for this purpose. Some garments are shown trimmed with black lace, which is cut away to show the lining underneath.

Her Excuse.

"These people have a plausible and self-righteous excuse for their misdeeds," said Senator Bankhead, apropos of certain hypocritical lawbreakers, in an address in Fayette.

"They remind me, in fact, of a certain parson's domineering wife. The parson said meekly one day:

"'My love, you told me before the wedding that you knew our marriage was made in heaven, yet you now order me about as if I were a slave.'

"'Order,' the woman calmly answered, 'is heaven's first law.'"

We were sitting one night as usual, with our backs to the fog, when suddenly the fog lifted, and we all went flop into the sea. A bit thick, wasn't it?"—San Francisco Chronicle.

BIG FORTUNE WELL HANDLED

Millions Left by the Late Russell Sage Are Being Expended for the Welfare of Humanity.

While the late Russell Sage was in the flesh he was one of the most prudent, shrewd and persistent money-grubbers in Gotham. The astute financier never plunged nor risked any money in wild-cat schemes. He was a "sure-shot" operator in Wall street, and when he died he left in the hands of his lone widow a fortune of something like $75,000,000. Since becoming possessed of this enormous fortune she has worked as persistently and assiduously in scattering the money as her husband did in gathering it. The scriptures tell us that the miser is the man that "heaps up riches and cannot tell who shall gather them." Russell Sage knew better, and the good lady upon whose shoulders was imposed the burden of this enormous sum of money has worked hard in lightening the burden. Her philanthrophies have been productive of as much wisdom as marked her husband's operations in the market. She is reported to be failing in health, and her task is only begun. Should she be taken from the world thousands will regret her departure, and it is very earnestly to be hoped that further care of the property will fall into good hands.

As the car rounded a sharp curve with a jerk the person in incongruous apparel fell quickly and heavily to the cobblestones. He was picked up by the strong hands of the conductor and about twenty passengers.

"Collision?" he asked in a dignified tone of voice.

"No," said the conductor.

"Off the track?" further questioned the victim of the accident.

"No," said the conductor.

"Well," concluded he of the jag, "if I had known that I wouldn't have got off."—Popular Magazine.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

This is the age of research and experiment, when all nature, so to speak, is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides during the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine comes that of Therapion, which has, we understand, been used with great success in the French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder or nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., we think there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who are interested and would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say—miraculous cures, have only to send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. Le Clerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng. and decide for themselves whether The New French Remedy, "THERAPION," is what they require and which they may have been seeking in vain during a life of untold misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness.

You Look Prematurely Old

Not In Politics

But I am a candidate for your Life and Fire Insurance business. Many of you, both Democrats and Republicans, have good homes, that you have, as well as myself, been half a lifetime accumulating. In case of a fire, it would be quite a hardship to rebuild without a little Insurance money to help you. I can insure you in a good Old Line Company for three or five years at a very low rate and you can add a Tornado Wind-Storm Policy for the same length of time at a very small additional cost, and, when it comes to a life Insurance Policy, I defy competition. I have a limited amount of the most attractive and cheapest Policies ever offered for sale by any reliable Old Line Company. These contracts have a disability clause, which means, if you become totally disabled from any cause, your payments cease and your Policy is paid up by the Company. See me now, to-day, or the first time you come to town; better stop your plow and attend to these important matters while you can; your house may burn down to-night, or you may die. If your house burns and you are still living, you could rebuild with a little insurance money to help you. But, should you die, your wife and littlehelpless children could never replace you. So come on now and buy you one of these Special Life Policies before they are all gone. As above stated, I have only a limited amount of these and the first comes, the first served. You know it is a duty you owe to your family and your God, so why not do it now?

Some time you mean to mend your ways, why don't you do it now?
You hope to win the world's praise, why don't you do it now?
You've always read in prose or rhyme, "The present is the Golden Time."
If you are ever going to climb, why don't you do it now?

In short, no matter what you've planned, why don't you do it now?
If you'll give work right at your hand, why don't you do it now?
Successful men are never late; you'll fail if you procrastinate;
If you have vowed to conquer Fate, why don't you do it now?

This is an appeal to you and I hope you'll 'phone, write or call at my office and give me an opportunity to more fully explain these valuable contracts to you. You need the insurance and I need and will appreciate your patronage.

Respectfully,

C. REESE MULLINS, The Insurance Man

DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINED

Messrs. Tipton Mullins and Tom Woods and Mesdames Carrie Mullins and Gamma Anderson were delightfully entertained last week at Mr. and Mrs. Guy Higgins' summer home. The party went out in Mr. Mullins' car and enjoyed the day boating and fishing, Mr. Higgins having three nice canoes on the creek for the pleasure of his friends.

BURNED OUT

The friends of Mr. Cleve Headley, who recently removed to Gallatin, Tenn., will regret to learn that last week his place of business in that city was totally destroyed by fire. Mr. Headley carried no insurance and the loss falls upon him quite heavily.

In some unaccountable way last week the name of Mr. Marion Foshee was omitted from the list of masonic officers elected for the ensuing term. The editor is sure he had the name inserted with the other officers, but the type setter seems to have omitted it through error. Mr. Foshee was elected Junior Warden of the order. We regret the oversight, but it was unavoidable.

HICH PARTY IS THE NEGROES' PARTY?

When the American colonies re being persecuted by the Brit- government, they realized that was impossible for a single col- y to resist such a strong power England, so they consolidated ir forces for the specific pur- of resisting the tyrannies of English government.

After the colonies had gained ir independence from the moth- country and had become inde- dent States, and at the time eral constitution was being fied or adopted, it was not ught by any of the States that y should ever be deprived of drawing from the consolida- and resuming their position n independent state or govern- t (if they should ever at any re time desire.) Even the thern States that resisted so gly the South's seceding, if had thought, at the time they ed the constitution, that they ld be deprived of that privi- would never have adopted it. was the South at the time it seceded, traveling upon ary grounds, or was it as- g a right that every State, at doption of the constitution, ded it to have?

w let's see the South's posi- It believed in adhering ly to the constitution, that in- ent which it regarded as the ental law of the land, and great questions arose it ap- d to the constitution for its tion.

people of the South held the under the constitution just as held the mule under the con- on. They were his property , and as the negro was his erty under the constitution, ered that he had the right ry his property into any ter- y that he saw fit. And in the Dred Scot decision that was affirmed to him.

ere were a few people in the who did not approve of this ion of the United States Su- e Court and they were known olitionists. They devised ev- eans imaginable to decoy off egro from his master and him out into Canada or hide some other place where the could not find him. This known as "the under ground system." Now think of system! People who were ing to abide by the law of ntry, but would assert their personal feelings regardless decisions of the courts! The in the South had bought groes from the North. Had ard earned money for them, was perfectly legitimate un- law of the country, and have them drug off and any such way!

e abolitionists later formed ves into a political party was known as the free soil and which a short while in 1856, changed its name to publican party, which is the Republican party that we day. Now any one can see this that the Republican was organized or born strict- the interest of the negro. publican party was organ- three purposes as follows: o prevent the slave owners rying their slaves into free ry. 2nd. To decoy off the om their masters and then ect the masters from re- them. 3rd. To abolish as soon as possible regard- e cost to the South.

Republican party by elect- o as its first president dertaking the South in the succeeded in freeing the But listen, did they also him? Shortly after the Civil war the Republican party passed the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments to the Federal constitution. Now it must be remembered that no other laws, either Congressional or state laws, can be passed if they are in conflict with the Federal constitution or its amendments. The 13th amendment freed the negro, the 14th made him a citizen and gave him equal protection with the white man under the law, and the 15th amendment reads as follows: "The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on ac count of RACE, COLOR, or previous condition of servitude." Now I ask your candid judgment, who gave the negro the right to cast his first ballot? This was forced on the South at a time when it was helpless; at a time when its people were hungry and naked; at a time when its once proud cities were in ashes; at a time when its property was destroyed; at a time when children were orphans and mothers were widows; Ah, negro equality was forced on by the Republican party at a time when we could not help ourselves. And this is not all. The Republican party elected negroes, carpet-baggers and scalawags to office here in the South, and then formed the South into military districts and sent bands of Federal troops here to protect these outrageous officers in their infamous deliberations. And to show you further the relations between the Republican partp and the negro, I will call your attentiont o the "Force" bill which was introduced into the Republican Congress in 1875 and passed the lower house. It reads as follows: "What all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall be entitled to the usual enjoyment of the accommodations, advantages, facilities and privileges of inns, public conveyances on land and water, theaters and other places of public amusement, and applicable alike to citizens of EVERY RACE AND COLOR regardless of previous involuntary servitude." Now this would have become a law had it not been for Hon. John T. Morgan of Alabama, whose strenuous efforts defeated it in the Senate. Negroes would have been riding in the same cars with the whites, would have been sleeping in the same hotels and would have been eating at the same table. That is Republicanism, pure and simple, was what it was organized for and is what it tried to do. Any man that doesn't approve of it is not a Republican, I don't care what political name you are bearing. Negro party? No! In the name of God get your old United States history and see for what it was organized! I assert, backed by the 15th amendment of the Federal constitution and affirmed by the Force bill, which were both Republican measures, from a Republican standpoint, that a negro has as much right to be elected Probate Judge, Tax Assessor, Tax Collector, Treasurer or to any other office in Chilton county as any white man has.

The Democratic party in most of the Southern States tried to devise means to eliminate the negro from politics, and it has been a tedious undertaking on account of the 15th amendment to the Federal constitution being in the way. They couldn't kick him out on account of RACE or COLOR, so they had to adopt other measures. A State has the right to demand certain qualifications of its citizens to vote and Alabama adopted the "Grand-father" clause, the Educational clause, the Poll Tax clause and thereby eliminated the majorities of the negroes. Now the polls if the negro comes up to the State constitutional requirement, then the 15th amendment of the Federal constitution forces them to register him. If you repeal the 15th amendment to the Federal constitution, there will no more negroes voting in the South. The Republican party is as closely aligned with the negro now as it has ever been, for they take him into their conventions and elect him delegates and members of the State Committee.

Now my friend can you answer the question, do you believe in this kind of law? If not, you can be a Republican.

Yours truly,
E. F. Calloway

CHILTON COUNTY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

The next Institute for the white teachers of Chilton County, Ala., will be held in the Clanton High School Building at Clanton, for week beginning July 29, 1912.

The State Department informs me that Miss Sarah Luther of Troy, Ala., has been selected as conductor for the institute, and Miss Nonie Jim Ogbun, of 418 Finley Avenue, Montgomery, Ala. as assistant.

I am confident that these ladies are well prepared for the work, and will give much valuable information on the subjects that will be used during the week as well as inspiration in general on school work.

All teachers holding state teacher's certificates in the county, unless they have a written excuse from the County Superintendent, signed by the Chairmrn of the County Educational Board, or have attended some training school in the state for teachers for at least three weeks during the year, or hold a teacher's life certificate, are requested to attend the County Institute, for at least four full days, and should any fail to do so, it is the duty of the State Superintendent to cancel the certificate of all such teachers.

We had a splendid institute last year and we hope to have a better one this year. I shall expect every teacher in the county, without a single exception, to attend.

Last year the County Educational Board extended considerable leniency to those teachers who failed to attend, because the law had just passed and was put into force immediately, but teachers have had time now to prepare themselves on the late acts, so the County Educational Board will not incline to extend such lenincy in the future. Be certain to call on the Conductor for one of those attendant cards at the close of the week.

ALL BUT TWO OF THE GEORGIANS STICK

TWO WHITE DELEGATES WILL DISREGARD INSTRUCTIONS.

Chicago, June 17,—26 of Georgia's 23 delegates to the national convention, including all the negroes, went on record for Taft at the caucus of the delegation today. Claud Grier and J. H. Boone, both white, served notice that they intended to disregard their instructions and vote for Roosevelt.

Several of the negro delegates became so disroderly while Mr Boone, who is postmaster at Hazelhurst, Ga., was explaining why he would vote for Roosevelt, that Boone lost his temper and called the disturbers "a bunch of infernal scoundrels." The negroes advanced on Boone, whereupon he pickey up a chair and lifted it menacingly into the air. Peacemakers intervened and Boone retired from the meeting. Later he returned to the hall and apologized to the chairman, Col. Walter Johnston.

BOONE DECLINSS APOLOGY

Henry Lincoln Johnson, recognized leader of the twelve negroes on the delegation, said he thought Mr. Boone also owed an apology to those ne had designated as "scoundrels." Boone immediately declined to apologise to them and again retired.

The test of the strength of Taft and Roosevelt in the delegation came on a resolution that the chairman should cast the delegation's entire vote as unit for Taft. Grier and Boone alone voted "no" J. A. Styles, J. E. Peterson and S. S. Mincay, whose names were attached to the letter, made publid last night by Roosevelt headquarters, voted "yes" The three admitted privately they signed the letter under the misapprehension that the state leaders had gone over to Roosevelt. In spite of the passage of the resolution, any member of the delegation may vote individually if he pleases, under the rules of the convention

An important action of the caucus was the election of Henry S. Jackson of Atlanta, as national committeeman to succeed to Captain Henry Blun, Jr., of Savannah. Mr. Blun was chosen as Georgia's member of the credentials committee; J. M. Barnes for rules; J. W. Martin for resolution; Roscoe Pickett for organization; M. B. Morton to notify the President, and J. A. Peterson to notify the Vice President.

NEGROES SING TAFT SONG

After the meeting the negroes attracted much attention in the corridors of the hotel by singing with manifest enthusiasm.

While the caucus was in progress cries of "throw him out; he don't belong in here," came thro' the door. A moment later the door opened and out came a negro wearing a Roosevelt badge, propelled by a dozen willing hands.

The negro was Dr. J. M. Lewis of Chicago, who said he was looking for Grier to tell him that he had found A. N. Fluker, one of the delegates injured in a wreck early today. Grier had said Fluker was friendly to Roosevelt and the Taft forces were trying to hide him. Fluker is in St. Luke's hospital with three ribs broken and his alternate, A. W. Bryant, will take his seat in the convention. Taft supporters denied they had tried to hide Fluker.—Age Herald.

CHARGE BRIBERY BY ROOSEVELT MEN

brey by the Roosevelt forces, two of them accusing Charles Banks, the negro delegate from Mississippi, who several days ago deserted the Taft standard to join the Roosevelt forces, with using money, were made public at the Taft headquarters here tonight.

The affidavits were executed by the Rev. James W. Shumpert, A. Buckley, delegates, and D. W. Sherrod, alternate, from Mississippi. All are negroes. The affidavit of Shumpert charges that Banks showed him a big roll of bills and asked him how much he would want to disregard his instructions for Taft and vote for Roosevelt. Shumpert said he refused to be bought. Buckley's affidavit set forth that Banks had offered him $300 in installments of $100 to desert the Taft forces. Buckley also refused.

The affidavit of Sherrod charged that he had been approached on two separate occasions by Dr. D. S. Rodman of Jackson, Miss., and by Ed Bond of Canton, Miss., and offered money if he would use his influence to shift Buckley's vote from Taft to Roosevelt.

SHUMPERT'S AFFIDAVIT.

Shumpert is presiding elder in the Meridian. Miss., African Methodist Episcopal church conference and a delegate from the First district of Mississippi. The essential feature of the affidavit, dated today, is as follows:

"On Thursday, June 13, Charles Banks, a delegate from Mississippi, came to where I was staying in Chicago. He asked everybody to leave except me. He began by asking if I had ever seen a $1000 bill. He then put his hand in his pocket and brought a big roll of bills. The outside bill was one of the denomination of $1000. It was the first I had ever seen. The roll of bills were nearly all gold certificates.

"He then wanted to know how much I would ask to go with him and support Mr. Roosevelt. I told him that I would not be bought; that I had not come to Chicago to sell myself. He then said that all, or a majority of the delegates were going to Roosevelt, who would be nominated and that Mr. Roosevelt would make him the referee in Mississippi in connection with all the federal offices. I repeated that I would not be a party to such a transaction and then excused myself."

BUCKLEY'S AFFIDAVIT.

Buckley's affidavit says in substance that:

"Dr. S. D. Rodman of Jackson, Miss., on June 15 asked him if he would go with him for Roosevelt, who surely would win, and make Buckley and Dr. E. E. Howard referee for the Fifth congressional district. Buckley averred that he also promised him $300 or $400, but that he declined to go with him." The affidavit continues:

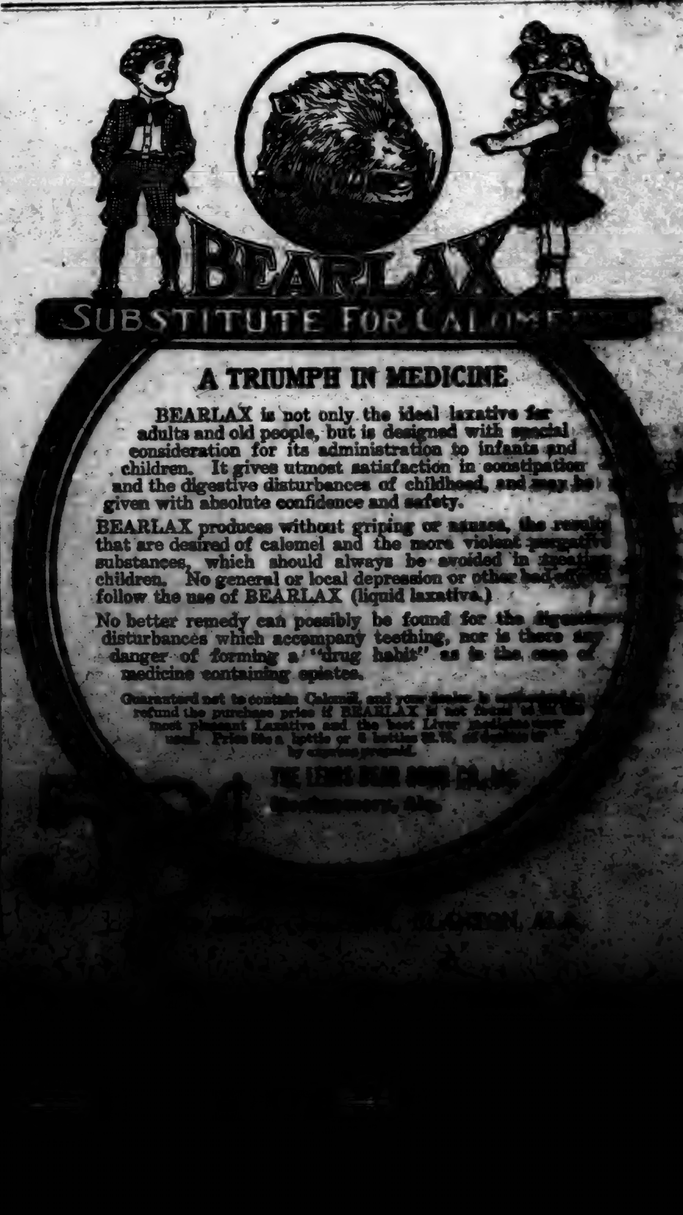
Then on Friday, June 14, Charles Banks of Mound Bayou, Miss., who was instructed by the state convention to vote for Taft, told me Mr. Roosevelt would surely win and he did not like the way things were carried on in Mississippi and if I would go with Roosevelt he would give me $100 cash, $100 on the first day of the convention and $100 the second dav of the convention.

"At the same time Mr. Banks pulled out a roll of greenbacks and said:

"I have the money and will give you $100 now."

SHERROD'S AFFIDAVIT.

D. W. Sherrod's affidavit alleges that he met S. D. Rodman of Jackson, Mississippi, today in front of the Coliseum, "and he said he knew I had influence with A. Buckley, the delegate from my district, and to bring A. Buckley over to the Roosevelt side and that he would make Dr. E. E. Howard and A. Buckley and me referees of the Fifth congressional district, and any other consideration I might desire.



"I said Mr. Buckley is instructed for President Taft by our congressional and state conventions and I can't ask him to do this. Mr. Ed Bond of Canton, Miss., saw me last Sunday and wanted me to use my influence to bring the Taft delegates over to the Roosevelt side, that they have arranged to get any amount of money necessary from $100 to $2000, or any amount required; that Roosevelt's managers had sent for me and that Mr. Dixon was out, but would be back in a few moments, but I excused myself when I found out what they wanted, as I wanted the delegates who were instructed for President Taft to stay with him."—Age Herald.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

At Salisbury, N. C., Frank D. Chunn, smarting under a second rejection of an offer of marriage, shot Miss Burnadette Roueche dead, held off an attendant of her sister at the point of his pistol and then fired a shot through his own temple, falling dead upon the lifeless body of his girl victim. The tragedy occurred upon the front porch of the dead girl's uncle, J. K. Roueche, editor of the Salisbury Post, and almost in the presence of Miss Hortense Roueche and Charles Cable.

Baltimore's women suffragists are planning a big parade on Thursday evening of the Democratic presidential convention week as a demonstration to the delegates and leaders. Several thousand women are expected to be in line of march. Some of the suffragists will be costumed in the heroic dress of women of history, while the parade will be led by mounted suffragists.

Following a family feud of many years standing, O. C. Walton, a well-known planter, shot and killed his uncle, W. O. Evans, and his cousin, Oscar Evans, son of the latter. The killing occurred near Woodberry, five miles from Greenville, Ga., and, according to witnesses, was in self-defense. Walton was not arrested, and probably will not be.

Representative Underwood of Alabama will determine upon the designation of the man who will nominate him as Democratic nominee for president after a conference with Senator Bankhead of Alabama. Representative Heflin is said to be Mr. Underwood's choice for the honor.

Pellagra-phobia—or fear of pellagra—is a clearly defined disease which has been discovered by the Thompson-McFadden pellagra commission, sent to Spartanburg, S. C., recently by the New York Post-Graduate hospital for research work. In an address to the South Carolina Press association Dr. Joseph F. Siler, a member of the commission, requested the newspapers not to publish sensational stories about pellagra, the fatality of which he said had been exaggerated.

All defendants in the Myrtle Hawkins case were declared not guilty by the jury which has been sitting through the three long weeks of the trial at Hendersonville, N. C., and were ordered released by the court. The release of George Bradley, Boney Bradley, A. B. McCall, Beatrice McCall, Dan McCall, Lizzie Shaft and Nora Britt puts the situation back where it started with the finding of the body, and sends the question, "Who killed Myrtle Hawkins?" down among the unsolved mysteries of the age.

Plans are being quietly formulated by several members of the Democratic national committee at Baltimore to create a new office to be known as chairman of the campaign committee. This new officers of the campaign may or may not be a member of the national committee, and his selection will be made after a conference with the new national committeemen. The national chairman in active charge of the campaign.

General.

Crop conditions in general on the first of June averaged for the United States slightly better (0.3) than on the same date last year. Crops, as a whole, were above average in the north Atlantic states due mostly to favorable hay prospects and in the far Western and Northwestern states. They were below average in Southern states and in the North Central states east of the Mississippi. In the North Central states west of the Mississippi conditions were but slightly above average.

Apparently irreconcilability of differences between Taft and Roosevelt leaders in the Republican party, borne on a rising tide of charges of bribery, theft and other accusations, threaten to precipitate decisive developments. Charges of corruption were made in an open statement given to the press by Director McKinley of the Taft bureau. Senator Dixon of the Roosevelt forces says it is merely "a campaign lie."

South Florida has suffered half a million dollars' loss from torrential rain, which have prevailed here for ten days. Not since the establishment of the Tampa weather bureau has such precipitation been recorded.

The Minnesota legislature has gone on record as being in favor of direct election of senators.

A hydro-aeroplane was employed at Hammondsport, N. Y., to convey Dr. F. L. Allen to Urbana, on Lake Keuka, eight miles away, where a boy was believed to be suffering from concussion of the brain as the result of a fall downstairs.

...ts it is believed that the ...truck Kansas City, Mo., ...eath of two persons and ...e amounting to many dollars, swept to the Bates county, where it death and destruction. ...sons are known to have buildings demolished, down and many small towns and country homes completely wrecked.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, wearing his new fighting hat, a compromise between a sombrero and a rough rider's headgear, came into Chicago and was acclaimed by thousands of his supporters. Colonel Roosevelt declared that he had not mapped out a plan of campaign. He was in consultation for several hours with the managers of his candidacy, and then assumed charge in person of what he termed "this naked fight between corrupt politicians and thieves and the plain people."

The Cuban municipality of Cobre has been depopulated as a result of the proclamation of General Antomanchi, in command of the second brigade of the insurgent forces in Cuba, exhorting foreigners to flee from the troubled zone within 24 hours. State department advices say there are 3,000 refugees at El Cobre and a like number at Palma Seriano. General Montagudo assured Consul Holiday that destruction of property would be prevented. The Cuban capital is happy over the news from Santiago de Cuba, where a large number of insurrectionists have surrendered. It is stated that Luna and Leban, the rebel leaders, have been killed.

The relief tug Redonda's report from Kariuk that there was no sign of life on the mainland this side of Shelikof strait in the vicinity of the mountain virtually confirms the fears that the mainland villages of Alaska, with a total population estimated at 200 perished in the diaster. All efforts have failed to obtain news from the government station at Afognak on the island of the same name, which lies just north of Kodiak island and anxiety is increasing concerning the plight of Superintendent Heidmonn and a large force of men who maintained the fish hatchery.

Two thin lines of deputy sheriffs, heavily armed, held at bay 2,000 strikers who tried to storm the $5,000,000 plants of the American Smelting and Refining company and the Barber Asphalt works at Perth Amboy, N. J., while searchlights, atop high towers, played upon the rioters. Two hundred shots or more were fired by the deputies at the mob. When the firing ended one man lay dead and several of the mob were injured.

Theodore Roosevelt announced, through Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver, that he is in favor of woman suffrage in this country, and that the platform which he will submit to the Chicago convention will contain an unequivocal declaration to that effect.

President Taft has gained 40 more votes in the Republican national convention through the settlement of contest cases by the national committee in session at Chicago.

Washington.

Congress will be in almost total eclipse during the next fortnight. The senate, perfunctorily meeting a few minutes every third day, will transact no business. The house may pass the sundry civil appropriation bill. The delay in enactment of a dozen annual appropriation bills, which provide for the operation of the government, will make it necessary for both houses to pass a concurrent resolution about July 1, continuing the present supply bills into the next fiscal year for a brief period.

Justice Charles E. Hughes of the United States Supreme court, with his family, has gone to the Adirondacks, where he will pass the summer. Justice Hughes says that he is completely out of politics, and will not permit the use of his name for president by the Republican national convention.

All ocean steamers entering American ports in the future must be equipped with life-boats sufficient to carry at one time every passenger and member of the crew, according to the new regulations adopted by the steamboat inspectors and approved by Secretary Nagel of the navy. In the case of coastwise, lake, bay and sound steamers, life-boats for all aboard must be carried, except from May 15 to September 15, when, for various reasons, such travel is comparatively safe.

As the final chapter in the congressional investigation of the Florida Everglade reclamation project and the drainage lands in North Carolina, the house agricultural committee inquired into the disbursement methods of the department of agriture of the national government. Disbursing Officer Zarpone of the department and Director True of the experiment station division explained the bookkeeping methods in connection with the alleged technical irregularities.

The present of American battleships in Havana harbor may be regarded as greatly diminishing the likelihood of intervention in Cuba, according to the construction placed upon that fact by the administration. Secretary Knox, who all along, has lost an opportunity of declaring against any purpose to intervene politically in Cuba, unless absolutely driven to do so by the failure of the Cuban government to uphold the law, and protect life and property, felt called upon to renew that assurance directly to the Cuban people.

Baby Picked up By Wind and Carried Over a Mile Without Being Injured.

Kansas City.—Twenty-eight persons are known to have been killed and many injured by a storm that passed over central west Missouri, demolishing buildings, tearing down wires and leaving the smaller towns and country homes completely wrecked.

From meagre reports that have been received it is believed that the storm that struck Kansas City late causing the death of two persons and doing damage amounting to many thousands of dollars, swept to the south through Bates county where it left a trail of death and destruction.

The path of the storm was half a mile wide and five miles long. Between Merwin and Adrain 19 persons were killed.

At Creighton in Case county two are known to be dead, while at Leeton in Johnson county, two are dead and unverified reports say others have been killed.

After striking Merwin the storm took a northward course, passing Sedalia, where the wind did much damaeg.

In the country between Merwin and Adrain the storm came up suddenly and swept clean its path through the northern section of the country.

When Henry Cameron and three of his children were killed the wind picked up another child and carried it away. The baby was found a mile of Gibson and Fred Groves were found more than a mile from their home, where they were when the storm struck. In another place the storm in passing over a farm killed 50 head of live stock but did no other damage.

Throughout the stricken district wires are down and communication is carried on by messengers.

Chattanooga.—Ex-Senator Frazier's condition continues critical.

Knoxville.—The lure of the old swimming hole was too strong for 13-year-old Paul Brown, son of the Rev. Charles Brown, and when he plunged into Kyler's pond near Newport, Tenn., for a swim it was to death.

Knoxville.—The St. Louis Nationals have bought Pitcher Griner of the Cleveland team of the Appalachian league, paying $1,000 for delivery next September at the close of the Appalachian league season. Griner is a young giant in size and has won nine out of 10 games pitched this season.

Linkoeping, Sweden.—Twenty persons were killed and 16 injured in a collision between a mail train proceeding to Stockholm by a freight train at Malmslaett station. Among the victims was a daughter of the late Auguste Strindberg, the novelist. No Americans were injured.

Havana.—The government is without further news from Oriente. Rumors that General Estenoz, the insurgent leader, has been killed, are apparently without foundation. Panama.—Instructions have been issued by the American commissioners who will have supervision of the Panama elections. The general belief now is that the elections will be conducted peacefully and without favoritism. The Diario says that Colonel Goethal and the American minister, M. Percival Dodge, and other Americans, are so deserving of as much praise for their services as if they had assisted Panama in securing national independence.

Indianapolis.— Levy Lockhart, 42 years old, alias George Blackburn, who after killing J. C. Dawson and wounding James Bell, Owensboro, Ky., policemen, on June 1, led a posse a chase over southern Indiana, was captured in a St. Louis, Mo., rooming house and brought here. He will be returned to the state prison, from which he was paroled, and later turned over to the Spencer county, Indiana, authorities to face the charge of murder.

Paris.—Anatole LeRoy-Beaulieu, director of the Institute of France, died age 70. He was closely identified with the peace movement.

GONE ARE DAYS OF CHIVALRY

Imagine This Situation In the Times When Knights Died for the "Love of a Ladye!"

Miss Italia Garibaldi, granddaughter of the famous "liberator," complained in Chicago about the way Italian women are treated there.

"When I see," she said, "the male employer, with all his vaunted chivalry to women, taking such an unfair advantage of his female employes, I don't wonder that woman is beginning to sneer at man's chivalry.

"It reminds me of an Italian washerwoman, very industrious and successful, to whom a young man offered himself in matrimony.

"'You love me?' the washerwoman asked.

"'Devotedly,' the young man replied.

"'Are you sure?'

"'I swear it!'

"She gave him a searching look.

"'Are you out of work?' she said."

Its Place.

"Where shall I put this joke about the millionaire dropping his handkerchief?"

"In the pick-up column, you boob."

When birds of a feather flock together it is a pretty safe bet they'll try to pluck each other.

Sunday is the day of rest; but did you ever know a man who felt rested on Monday morning?

OUTDOOR LIFE.

Will Not Offset the Ill Effects of Coffee and Tea When One Cannot Digest Them.

A farmer says:

"For ten years or more I suffered from dyspepsia and stomach trouble, caused by the use of coffee (Tea contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee), until I got so bad I had to give up coffee entirely and almost give up eating. There were times when I could eat only boiled milk and bread; and when I went to the field to work I had to take some bread and butter along to give me strength.

"I doctored steady and took almost everything I could get for my stomach in the way of medicine, but if I got any better it only lasted a little while. I was almost a walking skeleton.

"One day I read an ad for Postum and told my wife I would try it, and as to the following facts I will make affidavit before any judge:

"I quit coffee entirely and used Postum in its place. I have regained my health entirely and can eat anything that is cooked to eat. I have increased in weight until now I weigh more than I ever did. I have not taken any medicine for my stomach since I began using Postum.

"My family would stick to coffee at first, but they saw the effects it had on me and when they were feeling bad they began to use Postum, one at a time, until now we all use Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ten days' trial of Postum in place of coffee proves the truth, an easy and pleasant way.

Birmingham, Ala.—At a recent meeting of the Alabama Good Roads Association a resolution was adopted requesting Congressman Dent, Second Congressional District, to introduce a bill asking Congress to appropriate $250,000 out of the war department funds to build a military road from Fort Morgan to Foley, Ala. This resolution also called upon the two U. S. Senators and members of Congress from Alabama to support the measure. It seems that good seed have been sown and Congressman Dent has gone actively at work to secure the appropriation. Secretary Rountree transmitted the resolution and together with President John Craft wrote a strong letter urging that quick action be taken in regard to the measure. Secretary Rountree is in receipt of the following letter:

Washington, D. C.

Secretary Alabama Good Roads Association:—I have your letter of the 7th inst., with enclosure of resolution endorsing the building of a military road from Fort Morgan to Foley, Ala. I have prepared and will introduce in the House a bill to construct this road. Yours very truly, S. M. Dent, Jr.

Florence.—Several years ago, John M. Legg became involved in a shooting affray at Rogersville, a small village a few miles from Florence, in what is known as east Lauderdale county, in which it was alleged that he killed Buck Beddingfield and his father. The killing of John Beddingfield and his son, Jerome, was the sensation of many days in Lauderdale county, and search was made in vain, but the man seemed to have a method of his own in eluding his pursuers. Recently the man was captured at Harrison, Ark., and placed in jail. The sheriff of Lauderdale county was notified and he left to bring in the fugitive.

Ozark.—The Masons of Land Mark Chapter No. 71, at a regular convocation at Ozark, elected the following officers for the next ensuing year: L. W. Kolb, E. H. P.; H. M. Sessions, K.; J. E. O. Riley, S.; H. O. Dowling, Treasurer; B. P. Garner, Secretary; D. W. Munn, C. of H.; R. W. Garner, P. S.; Marvin Dowling, R. A. C.; J. E. Lewis, M. 1st V.; W. A. Brown, M. 2nd V.; A. B. Metcalf, M. 3rd V.; Yancey Carroll, Sentinel.

Montgomery.—G. W. Nixon, tax collector of Elmore county, returned $73,628.11 in taxes to the state auditor for the fiscal year, according to his final report. The amount was divided into the following taxes: General state, $11,666.72; old soldiers, $466.62; schools, $12,999.77; poll, $2,295.

Opelika.—The second anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. C. Ross Baker was observed with special exercises at the First Baptist church. Dr. Baker since coming here from Spokane, Wash., has done great work for good and is beloved by his church.

Decatur.—St. John's Episcopal church, New Decatur, will soon begin work on a new $6,400 rectory. The old building will be sold and moved off the property to give way to the new one.

Two Alabama boys brought distinction to this state at Annapolis this year. They are Virgil C. Griffin, of Montgomery, and Charles H. Morris, of Wetumpka, both finishing their course in the class of 1913.

They were among the 10 highest honor men, McMorris standing sixth in his class for the four years' course, and Griffin standing ninth. The honors are even more notable for the fact that five of the ten honor men are Southerners and two of the five from Alabama.

McMorris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. McMorris, of Wetumpka, and was appointed by Congressman Heflin in 1908.

Griffin is the son of Virgil C. Griffin, of Montgomery.

Mobile.—Enthusiasm prevailed at the meeting of the Mobile Chamber of Commerce and Business League, held in the Battle House auditorium. The occasion was the celebration of the activity of the "Committee of One Hundred" in running the membership up from less than 900 to the 1,600 mark in four days of work in the city.

Montgomery—Commissions were issued to Robert V. Mabry, of Birmingham, as ordnance officer and assistant rifle inspector, Alabama National Guard, with the rank of captain of Company L of the Fourth Infantry. The commissions bore the signatures of Governor O'Neal and Adjutant General Scully.

Greensboro.—The surveyors of the Gulf, Florida and Alabama railroad were in Greensboro connecting up a new survey from Uniontown to Greensboro with the old line running northward. The new route, running through Newbern, seems to be a better one than the original survey.

Athens — The L. and N. railroad, which is doing work on the new track from Athens to Decatur itself, not letting any of it to contractors, has a force of several hundred men on the work between Athens and Rowland, four miles south of here.

Mobile—H. H. Wheeless, the lumber man who killed himself at Shreveport, La., was well known here. He was one of the largest timber land owners in this county, his possessions being estimated at more than a quarter million dollars.

Montgomery — Memorial services were held at the new Pythian temple by the two lodges of that order in honor of knights that have died during the year. Rev. H. M. Edmunds, pastor of the Presbyterian church, made the address.

Gadsden—The six-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. George Burgess, residing near Wellington, fell from a wagon on which he was riding with his father and a rear wheel passed over him, crushing his skull and killing him instantly.

Mobile—In the matter of Fred Hudoff, charged with selling liquor to minors the excise commission decided to suspend license.

Huntsville—The annual meeting of the Alabama Cotton Seed Crushers' association was held at Pensacola, Fla., June 19 and 20.

Gadsden—T. A. Womack, aged 60, a familiar figure as a horse trader in every section of Etowah and adjoining counties, died last week.

Greenville—Shipments of tomatoes have been started by the Greenville truckers. The weather has been favorable and the quality of the crop is excellent.

Athens—The county commissioners have accepted the new jail just completed. John Adams, assistant to Dr. Oates came from Montgomery and inspected the building and reported to the court that it was up to plans and specifications and upon this information the court of county commissioners accepted the building.

Montgomery.—The governor ordered Judge Pearson of the Montgomery circuit court to call a special term of that court for the purpose of investigating the assassination of Brooks Fuller, a Montgomery man, who was killed in a sensational manner. The governor has also instructed Solicitor Temple Seibels to have the coroner to call a special jury of picked men in order to ascertain just what person fired the fatal shots.

Montgomery.—Indemnity bond for the collection of additional tax on a mortgage, if it shall be put into effect, was accepted by the state board of compromise from the Montgomery Traction company. The mortgage is for $4,000,000 with but $1,000,000 of it now in effect. The board collected $1,500 tax on that part of the mortgage now in effect. If the remaining $3,000,000 is called for by the Traction company the board will collect an additional $4,500 tax.

Lineville—Bishop T. C. Carter, of Memphis, Tenn., lectured here at the college auditorium. His subject was "The Americanism of the South."

Opelika—W. C. McClendon took his little son, Homer, to Montgomery to the Pasteur institute for treatment. A dog attacked the little fellow near the city and bit him on the head and shoulder. Mr. McClendon took the dog's head to the state bacteriologist in Montgomery and it is reported that there was evidence of rabies.

THE PEEVISH CHILD NEEDS TREATMENT

When a child sulks drowsily, or is fretful, it is usually due to some slight disorder of the digestive organs, and a mild laxative is very often all that is necessary to restore cheerfulness and buoyancy of spirits.

In cases where the use of a gentle, effective laxative stimulant is indicated, many of the best physicians are now prescribing Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This preparation is admittedly the perfect laxative, being mild, yet positive in its action on the bowels, and far preferable to violent cathartics and purgative waters. It is very pleasant to the taste and is an ideal remedy to regulate and strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels. Its easy, natural action makes it especially desirable in the case of children, a dose at bed-time being sure to have the desired result next morning, with no attendant unpleasantness or discomfort.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this splendid remedy, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., for a sample. He will be very glad to send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

The Press is a little late this week; we have been holding back with a view to giving our readers the result of the Chicago convention, or as much of the convention news as possible.

City politics have begun to enliven things a wee bit within the past few days. We have heard of several who have the mayoralty bee buzzing particularly close to their bonnets.

The matter of city taxation is causing considerable comment on the street just now. The Press has undertaken to prepare an article on the subject but sickness has prevented us from completing it just as we would like to have it appear. That there are grave inequalities in the valuation of taxable property and in the matter of collections cannot be successfully disputed. It appears that it is the poorer classes—mostly the widows and orphans—who have heretofore paid the city tax. while the rich, the affluent and the mighty have succeeded in escaping with just a wee bit of the burden upon their shoulders.

The bulletins stated that Dr. U. G. Mason of Birmingham, the negro delegate who represents the republicans of Alabama from the state-at-large, was one of the several delegates who seconded the nomination of Senator Root for temporary chairman of the national convention; however, the news columns of the papers do not confirm this statement. Whether it be true or not cannot be stated positively, but it is certain that his nomination was seconded by two other negro delegates. Now isn't that a pretty kettle of fish? Negro delegates—about sixty in number—stampeding the Chicago convention wherein there are more than a thousand white delegates. But, we forgot, that is a republican convention, and Dr. Mason was but standing true to his party when he made the speech for Mr. Root.

The announcement of Richmond Pearson Hobson that he would be in the race for Senator Johnston's seat does not come as a surprise to those who have kept up with the trend of political affairs in recent months. Mr. Hobson has for some moons had his eyes on the senatorial toga, believing that it would fit him to a nicety Hobson will make a good race but he has as an opponent one of the most astute politicians in the state; when he beats the red headed rooster from Jefferson he will have to run some—and then a little. Nevertheless the announcement has caused the lighting of political fires all along the line. It will inevitably bring Comer back into the arena. Henderson may have to be content with the presidency of the railroad commission, but he will be all the better prepared to make the race later on; Kilby of Anniston, Seed of Tuscaloosa and Comer of Jefferson-Barbour are all practical certainties for the gubernatorial race.

The fight between Johnston and Hobson will be interesting indeed, even if it is long drawn out.

The democratic convention. which is to assemble in Baltimore next Tuesday, will be a history making convention far surpassing any assembly that has met in recent years. Aside from the fact that it will name the next president of the United States, it will, for the first time, entertain the nomination for that exalted office of a Southern man; of the four favored candidates three are Southerners, by birth; two are now living in the South, and but one is a Northern man (really not a northern man either, for he was born and reared in Southern Ohio;) the three Southern men seem to have somewhat the better of the Ohio man on the start and the great probability is that the next President will be a man who hails from the South—the first to occupy that office since Andrew Johnson of Tennessee. who on April 15, 1865, succeeded the lamented Abraham Lincoln—nearly half a century ago.

Of the three Southern men in the race, it appears that Champ Clark of Missouri will go into the convention with the larger number of instructed delegates, but even he will not be able to muster enough to overcome the two-thirds rule; Wilson of New Jersey will be the next strongest man, but as with Clark, his strength will be shown on the first ballot, and he too will fail of the nomination.

Underwood of Alabama goes to the convention with approximately one hundred instructed delegates, but he is the second choice of every other candidate in the field, hence it is not unreasonable to prophesy that along about the fifth or sixth ballot Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, will be acclaimed the choice of the democracy of the nation as its standard bearer. Should this happen it will be the first time that Alabama has ever furnished a presidential candidate. In 1852 William R. King of Dallas county was elected along with Franklin Pierce of Vermont as Vice-president. This is the nearest Alabama has ever come to furnishing a President, but even with this Alabama ranks third of the Southern states in furnishing presidential timber, Virginia and Tennessee only having put forward more candidates. Unless the Press misses its guess considerably Underwood will occupy the White House after March 4, 1913.

The abolition of the two-thirds rule in the democratic convention is being widely discussed. The change cannot be made so as to effect the forthcoming convention nomination, if in fact it can be effected at all. Our party rulers would do well to look over the situation in the present republican convention at Chicago before making any change in our rule of procedure.

At Chicago there are ten hundred and seventy-eight delegates, sixty-eight of them are negroes. The Roosevelt and Taft forces are almost equally divided, hence if the sixty-eight negro delegates "get together" they can absolutely dictate the policy of the republican party, draft its platform, name its candidates for president and vice-president and run things to suit themselves.

THESE SIXTY-EIGHT NEGROES have the republican party of America in the hollow of their hands and can control the procedure of the convention from start to finish. If you don't believe it, take your pencil and do a little figuring. On the vote for temporary chairman sixty-seven of the sixty-eight negroes voted for Root, one voting for McGovern; suppose the sixty-seven had voted for McGovern and the one for Root? McGovern would have been nominated—which instead of giving Taft control of the convention would have given it to Roosevelt. Suppose they should even now turn against Taft and vote for Roosevelt, they could nominate him; so it is plain that the negro delegates have the republican party where the little boy had the speckled hen. It's sad but true; sixty-eight negroes holding in their hands the power to name a president of the United States.

The democrats would do well to think seriously before they abolish the two-thirds rule. While there would be no negro delegates in democratic conventions it shows how a small body of men—desirable or undesirable—can control the proceedings of an entire convention.

Thus far no names have been prominently mentioned for vice-president on either ticket. Sunny Jim Sherman and Penrose have been mentioned as possible candidates on the republican ticket, but the fight for the first place is so tense that the second place is not receiving any considerable attention. On the democratic ticket no name has received more than passing mention, but that a good, strong man will receive the nomination need not be doubted. Underwood being a Southern man the probability is that his running mate will come from the Empire state or else from Illinois.

CHEERING IS HARD WORK

Cheering is hard work. The excitement is wearing on the nerves and the continued shouting is physically exhausting. The noise makers in the Chicago convention will wear themselves out in due time and the convention will proceed with more or less ordiliness. The noise makers will have their way for two or three sessions of the convention, but they will ultimately succumb to weariness, and the men who will do the real work of the convention will finish their task.

The convention will in all probability hold longer than two days. Its length may be as much as four or five days. The shouters only prolong the agony. The strain is yet unrelieved, and the outcome is yet uncertain. The Taft people are unquestionably in control of the convention. The election of Senator Root and the defeat of the Roosevelt forces was a significant victory. But the vote for the Presidency is yet off in the distance.

The Southern delegates are suojected to a financial pressure that no other Republican delegate had to undergo. When a negro delegates flashes thousand dollar bills the mouth of a Southern Republican gapes open. Never before at a Republican convention did delegates bring such prices as are now being offered for them. THERE ARE SIXTY-EIGHT NEGRO DELEGATES FROM SOUTHERN STATES. THESE NEGRO DELEGATES CAN AND WILL NAME THE NOMINEE. If they stand firm to Taft, he will be nominated; if they bolt their instructions, Roosevelt, or a third man will be nominated.

What a COMMENTARY ON THE REPUBLICAN PARTY. UNDER ITS PRINCIPLES SIXTY-EIGHT NEGROES, WHO ARE CHARGING EACH OTHER WITH SELLING OUT, HOLD THE NEXT REPUBLICAN NOMINEE IN THE HOLLOW OF THEIR HAND. —Advertiser.

Whole Family Benefited By Wonderful Remedy

There are many little things to annoy us, under present conditions of life. The hurry, hard work, noise and strain all tell on us and tend to provoke nervousness and irritability. We are frequently so worn out we can neither eat, sleep nor work with any comfort. We are out of line with ourselves and others as well.

A good thing to do under such circumstances is to take something like to relieve the strain on the nerves. Mrs. J. B. Hartsfield, 33 Corput St., Atlanta Ga., writes;

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

"I have on several occasions been vastly relieved by the use of your medicines, especially the Anti-Pain Pills, which I keep constantly on hand for the use of myself, husband and two sons. Nothing in the world equals them as a headache remedy. Often I am enabled by the use of one or two of the Pills to continue my housework when otherwise I would be in bed. My husband joins me in my praise of the Anti-Pain Pills and Nervine."

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

are relied upon to relieve pain, nervousness and irritability in thousands of households. Of proven merit after twenty years' use, you can have no reason for being longer without them.

At all Druggists, 25 doses 25 cents.

In Memory of an Infant

On Friday, May 21, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Charles Giles and wafted away their dear beloved Marvin, who was sick twenty days, when the Lord saw fit to call him from this world of sorrow to that sweet home above. He was nearly four years of age; he leaves one brother, father and mother and a host friends and relatives to mourn his loss. He was a dear, loving child, wore a smile for everybody who knew him. There is not one who can fill the vacant place of dear little Marvin. Weep not, dear father and mother, for your dear little one is resting in the arms of Jesus, where we all hope to live, and to meet him in that sweet home of rest where there will be no pain, no sorrow. All that friends, relatives and physician could do to help him from his suffering was done, but no one could save him. But the Lord our Savioun, Jesus Christ, knew best

One who loved him dearly.

BUYING DELEGATES IN THE OLD DAYS

Some of the old time Alabama republicans are astonished at the big price delegates are bringing in the Chicago Republican convention No such prices prevailed in the palmy days about 1880, when the desperate fight was made to renominate Gen. Grant for a third term.

A Montgomery man, familiar more or less with Republican politics, recounted Tuesday the adventures of a Lowndes County negro school teacher who went to that convention in 1880, where money was freely passed around, In the district and state conventions this negro tried first to be elected as a delegate and later as an alternate He failed to attain either ambition. Notwithstanding the fact that he had no recognition and no credentials, the negro went to the convention and mingled with the delegates. He looked like a delegate, talked like a delegate, and told the political strikers that he was a delegate.

He got back to Lowndes County with $300 in real money and 16 new suits of clothes. He was a rather seedy looking negro when he reached the convention. Some lieutenant of one of the candidates walked up to him and said: "You ought to wear better clothes than these; lets go out and I will get you a new suit." This seemed to be easy money to the Lowndes negro. And as soon as one purchaser of a suit of clothes had left he would take off the new clothes, put on his old ragged suit, and move out into the political zone, where his apparent poverty was certain to inspire the thought of another suit of clothes. Where he got the $300 in new bills he never told.—Advertiser.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transform brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection.

CHAPTER XI. (Continued).

"I will go and cook you some breakfast while you get yourself ready. If you have not washed, you'll find a bucket of water and a basin and towel outside the door."

He went through the inner door as suddenly as he had come through the outer one. He was a man of few words, and whatever social grace he might once have possessed, and in more favorable circumstances exhibited, was not noticeable now. The tenderness with which he had caressed her the night before had also vanished.

His bearing had been cool, almost harsh and forbidding, and his manner was as grim as his appearance. The conversation had been a brief one, and her opportunity for inspection of him consequently limited. Yet she had taken him in. He was a tall, splendid man. No longer young, perhaps, but in the prime of life and vigor. His complexion was dark and burned browner by long exposure to sun and wind, winter and summer. In spite of the brown, there was a certain color, a hue of health in his cheeks. His eyes were hazel, sometimes brown, sometimes gray, and sometimes blue, she afterward learned. A short thick closely cut beard and mustache covered the lower part of his face disguised but not hiding the squareness of his jaw and the firmness of his lips.

He had worn his cap when he entered, and when he took it off she noticed that his dark hair was tinged with white. He was dressed in a leather hunting suit, somewhat the worse for wear, but fitting him in a way to give free play to all his muscles. His movements were swift, energetic and graceful. She did not wonder that he had so easily hurled the bear to one side and had managed to carry her—no light weight, indeed!—over what she dimly recognized must have been a horrible trail, which, burdened as he was, would have been impossible to a man of less splendid vigor than he.

The cabin was low ceiled, and as she sat looking up at him, he had towered above her until he seemed to fill it. Naturally, she had scrutinized his every action, as she had hung on his every word. His swift and somewhat startled movement, his frowning as he had seized the picture on which she had gazed with such interest, aroused the liveliest surprise and curiosity in her heart.

Who was this woman? Why was he so quick to remove the picture from her gaze? Thoughts rushed tumultuously through her brain, but she realized at once that she lacked time to indulge them. She could hear him moving about in the other room. She threw aside the blanket with which she had draped herself, changed the bandage on her foot, drew on the heavy woolen stocking which, of course, was miles too big for her, but which easily took in her foot and ankle encumbered as they were by the rude, heavy but effective wrapping. Thereafter she hobbled to the door and stood for a moment almost aghast at the splendor and magnificence before her.

He had built his cabin on a level shelf of rock perhaps fifty by a hundred feet in area. It was backed up against an overtowering cliff, otherwise the rock fell away in every direction. She divined that the descent from the shelf into the pocket or valley spread before her was sheer, except off to the right, where a somewhat gentler acclivity of huge and broken boulders gave a practicable ascent—a sort of titanic stairs—to the place perched on the mountain side. The shelf was absolutely bare save for the cabin and a few huge boulders. There were a few sparse, stunted trees further up on the mountain side above; a few hundred feet beyond them, however, came the timber line, after which there was nothing but the naked rock.

Below, several hundred feet, lay a clear, emerald pool, whose edges were bordered by pines, where it was not dominated by high cliffs already the lakelet was rimmed with ice on the shaded side. This enchanting little body of water was fed by the melting snow from the crest and peaks, which in the clear, pure sunshine and rarified air of the mountains seemed to rise and confront her within a stone's throw of the place where she stood.

On one side of the pretty lake in the valley, or pocket, beneath, there was a little grassy clearing, and there the dweller in the wilderness had built a rude corral for the burros. On a rough bench by the side of the door she saw the primitive conveniences to which he had alluded. The water was delightfully soft and as it had stood exposed to the sun's direct rays for some time, although the air was exceedingly crisp and cold, it was tempered sufficiently to be merely cool and agreeable. She luxuriated in it for a few moments, and while she had her face buried in the towel, rough, coarse, but clean, she heard a step. She looked up in time to see the man lay down upon the bench a small mirror and a clean comb. He said nothing as he did so, and she had no opportunity to thank him before he was gone. The thoughtfulness of the act affected her strangely, and she was very glad of a chance to unbraid her hair, comb it out and plait it again. She had not a hair pin left, of course, and all she could do with it was to replait it and let it hang upon her shoulders. Her coiffure would have looked very strange to civilization, but out there in the mountains, it was eminently appropriate.

Without noticing details, the man felt the general effect as she limped back into the room toward the table. Her breakfast was ready for her. It was a coarse fare, bacon, a baked potato, hard tack crisped before the fire, coffee, black and strong, with sugar, but no cream. The dishes matched the fare, too, yet she noticed that the fork was of silver, and by her plate there was a napkin, rough dried, but of fine linen. The man had just set the table when she appeared.

"I am sorry I have no cream," he said, and then, before she could make comment or reply, he turned and walked out of the room, his purpose evidently being not to embarrass her by his presence while she ate.

Enid Maitland had grown to relish the camp fare, bringing to it the appetite of good health and exertion. She had never eaten anything that tasted so good to her as that rude meal that morning, yet she would have enjoyed the brimming, smoking coffee pot on it better, she thought, if he had only shared it with her, if she had not been compelled to eat it alone. She hastened her meal on that account, determined as soon as she had finished her breakfast to seek the man and have some definite understanding with him.

And, after all, she reflected that she was better alone than in his presence, for there would come stealing into her thoughts the distressing episodes of the morning, before, as she would to put it out of her mind. Well, she was a fairly sensible girl; the matter was passed, it could not be helped now, she would forget it as much as was possible. She would recur to it with mortification later on, but the present was so full of grave problems that there was not any room for the past.

CHAPTER XII.

A Tour of Inspection.

The first thing necessary, she decided, when she had satisfied her hunger and finished her meal, was to get word of her plight and her resting place to her uncle and the men of the party, and the next thing was to get away, where she would never see this man again, and perhaps be able to forget what had transpired—yet there was a strange pang of pain in her heart at that thought!

No man on earth had ever so stimulated her curiosity as this one. Who was he? Why was he there? Who was the woman whose picture he had so quickly taken from her gaze? Why had so splendid a man buried himself alone in that wilderness? These reflections were presently interrupted by the reappearance of the man himself.

"Have you finished?" he asked, unceremoniously standing in the doorway as he spoke.

"Yes, thank you, and it was very good indeed."

Dismissing this politeness with a wave of his hand, but taking no other notice, he spoke again.

"If you will tell me your name—"

"Maitland, Enid Maitland."

"Miss Maitland?"

The girl nodded.

"And where you came from, I will endeavor to find your party and see what can be done to restore you to them."

"We were camped down that canon at a place where another brook, a large one, flows into it, several miles, I should think, below the place where—"

She was going to say "where you found me," but the thought of the way in which he had found her rushed over her again; and this time, with his glance directly upon her, although it was as cold and dispassionate and indifferent as a man's look could well be, the recollection of the meeting to which she had been about to allude rushed over her with an accompanying wave of color which heightened her beauty as it covered her with shame.

She Watched Him as Long as She Could See Him.

She could not realize that beneath his mask of indifference so deliberately worn the man was as agitated as she, not so much at the consciousness of anything that had transpired, but at the sight, the splendid picture of the woman as she stood there in the little cabin that, because of its inmate, if she acknowledged it in her own heart all the radiance and light and beauty, all the purity and freshness and splendor of the entire mountain and forest world, seemed to concentrate.

She was conscious that he was looking, to shine and dazzle in his face. As she hesitated in confusion, perhaps comprehending its cause, he helped out her lame and halting sentence.

"I know the canon well," he said. "I think I know the place to which you refer. Is it just above where the river makes an enormous bend upon itself?"

"Yes, that is it. In that clearing we have been camped for two weeks. My uncle must be crazy with anxiety to know what has become of me, and—"

The man interposed.

"I will go there directly," he said. "It is now half after ten. That place is about seven miles or more from here across the range, fifteen or twenty by the river. I shall be back by nightfall. The cabin is your own."

He turned away without another word.

"Wait," said the woman. "I am afraid to stay here."

She had been fearless enough before in those mountains, but her recent experience had somehow unsettled her nerves.

"There is nothing on earth to hurt you, I think," returned the man. "There isn't a human being, so far as I know, in these mountains."

"Except my uncle's party?"

He nodded.

"But there might be another—bear," she added desperately, forcing herself.

"Not likely; and they wouldn't come here if there were any. That's the first grizzly I have seen in years," he went on, unconcernedly, studiously looking away from her, not to add to her confusion at the remembrance of that awful episode which would obtrude itself on every occasion. "You can use a rifle or gun?"

She nodded. He stepped over to the wall and took down the Winchester which he handed her.

"This one is ready for service, and you will find a revolver on the shelf. There is only one possible way of access to this cabin; that's down those rock stairs. One man, one woman, a child, even, with these weapons could hold it against an army."

"Couldn't I go with you?"

"On that foot?"

Enid pressed her wounded foot upon the ground. It was not so painful when resting, but she found she could not walk a step on it without great suffering.

"I might carry you part of the way," said the man. "I carried you last night, but it would be impossible, all of it."

"Promise me that you will be back by nightfall, with Uncle Bob and—"

"I shall be back by nightfall, but I can't promise that I will bring anybody with me."

"You mean?"

"You saw what the cloudburst nearly did for you," was the quick answer. "If they did not get out of that pocket, there is nothing left of them now."

"But they must have escaped," persisted the girl, fighting down her alarm at this blunt statement of possible peril. "Besides, Uncle Robert and most of the rest were climbing one of the peaks, and—"

"They will be all right, then; but if I am to find the place and tell them your story, I must go now."

He turned, and without another word or a backward glance, scrambled down the hill. The girl limped to the brink of the cliff over which he had plunged and stared after him. She watched him as long as she could see him, until he was lost among the trees. If she had anybody else to depend upon, she would certainly have felt differently toward him; when Uncle Robert, and her aunt, and the children, and old Kirkby, and the rest surrounded her, she could hate that man in spite of all he had done for her, but now she stared after him determinedly making his way down the mountain and through the trees. It was with difficulty she could restrain herself from calling him back.

The silence was most oppressive, the loneliness was frightful. She had been alone before in those mountains, but from choice; now the fact that there was no escape from them made the sensation a very different one.

She sat down and brooded over her situation until she felt that if she did not do something and in some way divert her thoughts she would break down again. He had said that the cabin and its contents were hers. She resolved to inspect them more closely. She hobbled back into the great room and looked about her again. There was nothing that demanded careful scrutiny. She wasn't quite sure whether she was within the proprieties or not, but she seized the oldest and most worn of the volumes on the shelf. It was a text book on mining and metallurgy, she observed, and opening it at the fly leaf, across the page she saw written in a firm, vigorous masculine hand a name, "William Berkley Newbold." And beneath these words, "Thayer Hall, Harvard," and a date some seven years back.

The owner of that book, whether the present possessor or not, had been a college man. Say that he had graduated at twenty-one or twenty-two, he would be twenty-eight or twenty-nine years old now, but if so, why that white hair? Perhaps, though, the book did not belong to the man of the cabin.

She turned to other books on the shelf. Many of them were technical books, which she had sufficient general culture to realize could be only available to a man highly educated, and a special student of mines and mining—a mining engineer, she decided, with a glance at those instruments and appliances of a scientific character plainly, but of whose actual use she was ignorant.

A rapid inspection of the other books confirmed her in the conclusion that the man of the mountains was indeed the owner of the collection. There were a few well worn volumes of poetry and essays, Shakespeare, a Bible, Bacon, Marcus Aurelius, Epictetus, Keats, a small dictionary, a compendious encyclopedia, just the books, she thought, smiling at her conceit, that a man of education and culture would want to have upon a desert island where his supply of literature would be limited.

The old ones were autographed as the first book she had looked in; others, newer additions to the little library, if she could judge their condition, were unsigned.

Into the corner cupboard and the drawers, of course, she did not look. There was nothing else in the room to attract her attention, save some piles of manuscript neatly arranged on one of the shelves, each one covered with a square of board and kept in place by pieces of glistening quartz. There were four of these piles and another half the size of the first four on the table. These, of course, she did not examine, further than to note that the writing was in the same bold, free hand as the signature in the books. If she had been an expert she might have deduced much from the writing; as it was, she fancied it was strong, direct, manly.

Having completed her inspection of this room, she opened the door and went into the other. It was smaller and less inviting. It had only one window, and a door opened outside. There was a cook stove here, and shelves with cooking utensils and graniteware, and more rude box receptacles on the walls which were filled with a bountiful and well selected store of canned goods and provisions of various kinds. This was evidently the kitchen, supply room, china closet. She saw no sign of a bed in it, and wondered where and how the man had spent the night.

By rights, her mind should have been filled with her uncle and his party, and in their alarm she should have shared, but she was so extremely comfortable, except for her foot, which did not greatly trouble her so long as she kept it quiet, that she felt a certain degree of contentment, not to say happiness. The adventure was so romantic and thrilling—save for those awful moments in the pool—especially to the soul of a conventional woman who had been brought up in the most humdrum and stereotyped fashion of the earth's ways, and with never an opportunity for the development of the spirit of romance which all of us exhibited some time in our life, and which, thank God, some of us never lose, that she found herself revelling in it.

She lost herself in pleasing imaginations of tales of her adventures that she could tell when she got back to her uncle, and when she got further back to staid old Philadelphia. How shocked everybody would be with it all there! Of course, she resolved that she would never mention one episode of that terrible day, and she had somehow absolute confidence that this man, in spite of his grim, gruff taciturnity, who had shown himself so exceedingly considerate of her feelings, would never mention it either.

She had so much food for thought that not even in the late afternoon of the long day could she force her mind to the printed pages of the book she had taken at random from the shelf which lay open before her, where she sat in the sun, her head covered by an old "Stetson" that she had ventured to appropriate. She had dragged a bear skin out on the rocks in the sun and sat curled up on it half reclining against a boulder watching the trail, the Winchester by her side. She had eaten so late a breakfast that she had made a rather frugal lunch out of whatever had taken her fancy in the store room, and she was waiting most anxiously now for the return of the man.

The season was late and the sun sank behind the peaks quite early in the afternoon, and it grew dark and chill long before the shadows fell upon the dwellers of the lowlands.

Enid drew the bear skin around her and waited with an ever-growing apprehension. If she should be compelled to spend the night alone in the cabin, she felt that she could not endure it. She was never more afraid of anything in her life than when she saw him suddenly break out of the woods and start up the trail, and for a moment her gladness, not tempered by the fact that he was presently to realize with dismay, that as he had gone he now returned, alone.

The Castaways of the Mountain.

upon the boulder against which she had been leaning, at the same time extending her hand to greet him.

"Oh," she cried, her voice trembling nervously as he drew near, "I am so glad you are back, another hour of loneliness and I believe I should have gone crazy."

Now whether that joy in his return was for him personally or for the fact strictly, he could not tell; whether she was glad that he had come simply because he was a human being who would relieve her loneliness, whether she rejoiced to see him individually, was a matter not yet determined. He hoped the latter, believed the former. At any rate he caught and held her outstretched hand in the warm clasp of his own. Burning words of passion rushed to his lips torrentially; but he said, however, was quite out of place, as is often the case, thought and outward speech do not correspond.

"It's too cold for you out here; you must go into the house at once," he declared masterfully, and she obeyed with unwonted meekness.

The sun had set and the night had grown suddenly chill. Supporting her hand, they started toward the cabin a few rods away. Her weight on foot was of little support to her, but the excitement had unnerved her and in spite of his hand she swayed; and with a thought he caught her about the waist and half lifted, half led her to the door. It seemed as natural as it was inevitable for him to assist her in this way, and in her weakness and the wilderment she suffered it without comment or resistance. Indeed there was such strength and power in his arm, she was so secure there, that she liked it. As for him, his pulses were bounding at the contact; but it was no matter even to look at her quickened his heart beat.

Drainage of the Zuyder Zee.

A great project is again before the people of Holland—the draining of the Zuyder Zee. The sea, which, as one knows, is at the north of Holland and covers an area of 50,000 hectare being practically two and a half.

Just half a century ago a scheme to drain the southern portion of the sea was first mooted and although it received considerable support, the opposition was greater, but now an association has been formed and a bill will be introduced into the chamber. The promoters see that with an increasing population means must be found to enlarge the country and this reclamation of the sea is suggested as a means of accomplishment. If the scheme is squared there are several labor questions can be dealt with later.

FATHER ROUSED THE BOY

Follows Doctor's Advice and Casts the Lure That Tempts Fleeting Ambition.

"The boy is all right," said the doctor, "but you want to talk to him and rouse his ambition. Promise him that you will take him somewhere when he recovers sufficiently to go out—to a vaudeville show, for instance; talk to him about playing with the boys; there are lots of ways in which you can interest him."

Then the doctor addressed the boy, who was just recovering from a fever, saying:

"Come, Tommy, cheer up, my boy; wouldn't you like to go and play with your schoolmates?"

A faint smile stole over the boy's face, but that was all.

"Stop, sir," said the father; "I'll arouse him. See here, Tommy," he asked, addressing the boy, "wouldn't you like to go out and throw a stone through Mother Bibb's candy shop window?"

The boy immediately sat up in bed and asked for his clothes.

"I thought that 'u'd rouse the boy," said the father, with a proud smile. "He's all right, doctor."—Kansas City Journal.

Wouldn't War on the Ministry.

There are some drawbacks to the teaching of language by sound, especially where the younger school element is being instructed by that system. In one of the first grade classes of the Greenwood school lately the teacher was endeavoring to drill the Band of Mercy slogan into the young brains. One clause of the "resolve" is an injunction to be "kind to all harmless living creatures." Somehow the pronunciation of thre phrase did not quite suit and the teacher asked for a repetition, and still there was something queer about the way it was repeated. Finally she requested one member of the class to say it to himself, and while she could not yet quite see what was the matter it did not sound right.

"Now, Tommy, say it over again slowly, 'I resolve to be kind to all harmless living creatures,'" said the teacher, bound to get the straight of the matter.

Tommy repeated slowly, and, while there seemed to be nothing exactly wrong with the rest of the sentence, the final word sounded off color.

"Is that 'creatures' you are saying there, Tommy?" asked the puzzled teacher. "Say it all again."

With the sweetest resignation in the world the boy repeated, "I resolve to be kind to all harmless living preachers."—Kansas City Journal.

Water for Nervousness.

A trained nurse says: "If people would only drink more water they would not be so nervous." Nearly every doctor will recommend a woman who is suffering from nervous prostration or nervous exhaustion to drink lots of water between meals, but many women who do not come under a doctor's care would look better and feel better if they would drink at least a quart of water in the course of the day. Water seems to be a nerve food like good butter. It has a distinctly soothing effect when sipped gradually, as one can test for herself. Water drunk slowly and gradually has somewhat the same quality as deep breathing.

Women Anxious to Serve.

More than twice as many women as could be used applied for enlistment in the Women's Sick and Wounded Convoy corps, the newest adjunct to the British army. The corps takes part in practice drills, makes its own camp, does stretcher work and otherwise gets practical training for the regular service. When enlisting the women accepted by the recruiting officer receive the king's shilling, which binds the bargain and makes the woman legally obliged to serve as part of the military establishment of the United Kingdom.

Chambermaid Music.

"Because," replied the musician, "their programs usually sound as if they had been selected to please the bell boys and chambermaids."—Washington Star.

HARD FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

It's hard enough to keep home if in perfect health, but a woman weak, tired and suffering with an aching back has a heavy burden. Any woman in this condition has cause to suspect kidney trouble, especially if the kidney action seems disordered. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands. It is the best recommended special kidney remedy.

Miss Lucinda Price, 11th St., Laurel, Md., says: "My feet and hands were swollen and my whole body bloated. There were such pains in my back I could not do my housework and for one whole winter, could not leave the house. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was promptly benefited. They cured me completely."

ECZEMA DISFIGURED BABY

"Our little boy Gilbert was troubled with eczema when but a few weeks old. His little face was covered with sores even to back of his ears. The poor little fellow suffered very much. The sores began as pimples, his little face was disfigured very much. We hardly knew what he looked like. The face looked like raw meat. We tied little bags of cloth over his hands to prevent him from scratching. He was very restless at night, his little face itched.

"We consulted two doctors at Chicago, where we resided at that time. After trying all the medicine of the two doctors without any result, we read of the Cuticura Remedies, and at once bought Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Following the directions carefully and promptly we saw the result, and after four weeks, the dear child's face was as fine and clean as any little baby's face. Every one who saw Gilbert after using the Cuticura Remedies was surprised. He has a head of hair which is a pride for any boy of his age, three years. We can only recommend the Cuticura Remedies to everybody." (Signed) Mrs. H. Albrecht, Box 883, West Point, Neb., Oct. 26, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

THEIR MOST JOYOUS MOMENT

Of the Trio, Probably Representative Redfield Had the Best Occasion to Smile.

The talk in one of the cloak rooms of congress turned to the thought of the happiest moments in one's life. Senator Bailey said his came the day he wore his first pair of trousers. And Paul Howland of Ohio declared his big moment of joy was when he was permitted once to drive a chariot in a pony and dog show parade.

Representative Redfield, who is a wise chap, even if he does hail from Brooklyn, said it was when he was going to school and trying to master long division. Three or four aisles over from where he sat a boy yawned. It was not an ordinary yawn, but one of such genuine expression of feeling toward things in general that it attracted Redfield's attention. He was fortunate in having a paper wad right at hand, ready for any emergency, and he aimed this at the boy's cavernous mouth. The wad went right square into the goal and—well, Fourth of July fireworks are tame to the stunts that boy did in the next few minutes.

He says he almost smiled once on shipboard when the vessel gave a lurch and threw a platter full of beefsteak, gravy and all, over the open-faced shirt front of a pompous passenger across the table.

Willing to Do Square Thing.

Brand Whitlock, who doubles as mayor of Toledo and as a literary man, had a Chicago career. He was a reporter on the old Herald when Pete Dunne and Charley Seymour were his side-kicks. Charley Chapin was one of his city editors.

Chapin is now city editor of the New York Evening World, and this story was told to Whitlock lately by a correspondent who had him under interviewing fire:

A new reporter had been hired on the Evening World, and he went to work on a Wednesday. The pay day on the paper is Thursday. In the course of a week, when the recruit received his first envelope, he found that he was a day short. He went to Chapin and complained, only to get this:

"Oh, well, never mind. When I fire you, I'll fire you a day earlier and that will make it come out even."

The Chief Requisite.

David Belasco, in an interview in New York, condemned a certain ultra-modern type of society woman.

"This type, which luckily isn't numerous," he said, "lives on notoriety. To a woman of this type a lawyer said one day:

"'Yes, madam, I can get you the divorce you desire. For $500 I can get you a divorce—and get it without publicity, too.'

"She wrinkled her smooth, white, well-powdered forehead in a frown; she bit her rouged and over-red lips in annoyance.

"'But what would it cost,' she asked, 'with publicity?'"

The Last Word in Defense.

The angry mother returns home from a shopping tour down town to find that Tommy has broken into the jam closet, teased his little sister till she cried, smashed a window pane with his top, tied a tin can on the tail of the dog next door, and then wound up further depredations by tracking the parlor carpet with his muddy boots. "You young villian, I'm going to whip you till you can't sit down." (Grabs hold of him.) "Now what have you got to say for yourself?"

Tommy: "Ow, say, ma, this looks like a frame-up."

Flattered Him.

A little girl four years old wanted a nickel one day and thought the best way to get it was to say something nice to papa. So climbing upon his lap she said sweetly:

"Papa, I love you better than the devil."

A fancy-dress ball was held in a certain garrison town recently, at which many military officers and men attended. A soldier attired as a lady was spoken to by the regimental chaplain.

"Well, young man," said the parson, "you are very well got up. Did you win a prize?"

"Yes, chum; I got second prize. Did you get a prize?"

"Me? Oh, no; I——"

"Well, now, that's rotten bad luck, I call it," said the Tommy, warmly, "for you are about the best get-up of a parson I've seen lately."—London Tit-Bits.

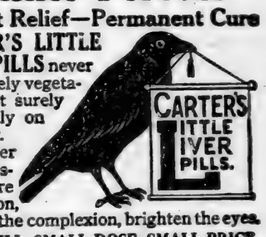
RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

Doctors Could Not Help Mrs. Templeton—Regained Health through Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Hooper, Nebraska.—"I am very glad to tell how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me. For five years I suffered from female troubles so I was scarcely able to do my work. I took doctors' medicines and used local treatments but was not helped. I had such awful bearing down pains and my back was so weak I could hardly walk and could not ride. I often had to sit up nights to sleep and my friends thought I could not live long. At my request my husband got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I commenced to take it. By the time I had taken the seventh bottle my health had returned and I began doing my washing and was a well woman. At one time for three weeks I did all the work for eighteen boarders with no signs of my old trouble returning. Many have taken your medicine after seeing what it did for me. I would not take $1000 and be where I was. You have my permission to use my name if it will aid anyone."—Mrs. SUSIE TEMPLETON, Hooper, Nebraska.



The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of woman—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you needs such a medicine?

Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

GNASHING OF TEETH NOT IN HELL FIRE.

Twisting the Scriptures Has Been Making Infidels.

Pastor Russell Shows That His Text Refers to Sorrow, Disappointment, Chagrin, That Came Upon Jews In Overthrow of Their Nation, A. D. 70.

Philadelphia, June 16.—Pastor Russell had his usual crowded house today. He delivered two addresses. We report one of them from the text, "The children of the Kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." (Matthew viii, 11, 12.)

The speaker declared that in common with the majority of ministers he had misinterpreted this and similar Scriptures to refer to all the unsaintly of mankind and to imply that they are writhing in torture in a hell whose location is unknown and which he now sees to be a human tradition without authority of the Word of God.

The Pastor analyzed his text and showed that it was addressed to the Jews, that they for sixteen centuries had been God's favored nation, in harmony with His promise to Abraham. They had much advantage every way over all the other nations—not only in the fact that the promises were given to them and the assistful influences of the Law, but additionally that to them were sent the Prophets with their encouraging messages.

Notwithstanding all these favors but comparatively few of that nation were in the heart condition to be accepted of God, to be Messiah's joint-heirs in His Kingdom. As the natural seed of Abraham they were the children or heirs of the Kingdom, and to them Jesus presented Himself. All of His miracles and teachings went to them, yet only a few were in such condition of heart that they could receive this Message.

In the context Jesus referred to the fact that the Gentile centurion who had none of Israel's privileges had more faith than any Jew. Commenting upon this the Great Teacher declared that God would take from the Jews the special privileges, except such Jews as were "Israelites indeed," and that He would complete the number of His elect by a selection of saintly characters from amongst Gentiles.

The Election Hath Obtained It.

St. Paul declares, "Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for, but the election hath obtained it and the rest of the nation were blinded." (Romans xi, 7.) The elect of Israel were gathered into the New Dispensation at Pentecost and subsequently, while the Jewish people as a whole became more and more blinded and darkened in understanding until their nation expired in a time of anarchy, A. D. 70. Since then the Jews have been in trouble, in sorrow.

It was to this very condition of things that Jesus referred. He used the highly figurative language common in the East. What St. Paul styled "blindness upon Israel" Jesus described as going into outer darkness—losing the light of the prophecies and the hopes of the Abrahamic promise and thus getting into the same blind and dark condition in which Gentiles in general were. The experiences of the Jews during the past eighteen centuries Jesus described as "weeping and gnashing of teeth." His words simply signify sorrow, disappointment and chagrin.

Truly the Jews have had all of these experiences. We are glad if we see in God's Word a glorious prospect for His ancient and Covenant people. St. Paul calls this promise to our attention in Romans xi, 25-33. He tells us that God's Covenant with Israel cannot be broken, but will be established, and that natural Israel shall yet receive mercy, Divine favor, at the hands and through the agency of the Church—spiritual Israel—part of whom have been selected from the Jews and some from every nation—all saintly.

"Sit Down With Abraham."

The Great Teacher declares that while the natural heirs of the Messianic promises would be cast out from Divine favor, as they have been cast out for the past eighteen centuries—in the meantime Gentiles from the East and West, North and South would be found of similar character to the Centurion whose servant was healed. And these would sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the Kingdom, in the sense that they enter into rest. As St. Paul declared, "We who believe do enter into rest." This is the same rest or sitting down that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob enjoyed. They had God's promise that eventually He would raise up a spiritual Seed of Abraham through whom all the families of the earth would be blessed.

Abraham rested upon that promise; so did Isaac; so did Jacob. And so we rest in this Divine assurance that a blessing will come to the children of Adam in God's due time; more than with this assist we are resting on the Divine promises, and we have the supplemental assistance that if we faithfully follow in the steps of our Master we shall become joint-heirs with Him in His Kingdom, members of the glorious

ALMOST CRACKED

Chicago, June 15—Olaf Magnes, 38 years old, at his own request, began serving one month's sentence in the workhouse last night as a refugee from the turbulent scenes of the approaching republican national convention. He told Municipal Judge Hymes that his mind had almost cracked by the stress of the situation, and asked to be lodged in jail for eternity. He told the court that he was afraid some of the men at the Coliseum would put him out of the way.

"A life sentence is a good long time," Judge Hymes advised him. How would it be if we sent you to the Bridewell until the convention is over."

Magnes objected on the ground the time was toot short, but finally compromised on a month's imprisonment.

Heart Symptoms

The ailments of women include symptoms of heart trouble known as palpitation of the heart. The palpitation is so violent at times as to be really painful and leads the patient to fear she has heart disease. Ninety per cent of such cases are not heart disease at all but only a symptom of a liver disorder which has affected the normal action of the heart, and on applying the proper remedies the unusual throbbing ceases. The stomach and digestion need strengthening and the depressing effect of these disorders on the female organism must be corrected. For the latter purpose there is no more effective remedy to be found anywhere than

FIND DISCREPANCIES IN CHILTON COUNTY

MINOR AMOUNTS INVOLVED IN IRREGULARITIES POINTED OUT BY EXAMINER.

Montgomery, June 21.—(Special.) Minor discrepancies in the accounts of officials of Chilton county have been found by Examiner of Public Accounts W. F. Wilkinson, according to reports filed with Judge W. W. Pearson of Montgomery, judge of the Fifteenth judicial circuit, and Governor O'Neal

The report of the examiner covers a period beginning July 1, 1912, and ending January 1, 1912.

According to the report, J. W. Littlejohn, county treasurer, is charged with $345 for paying illegal warrants, which in the opinion of the attorney general, were not authorized by law. In all other respects the examiner found the books of the county treasurer correct.

J. S. Catts, ex-sheriff of Chilton county, is charged with $291.25 for warrants which were illegally drawn in his favor for paying detective service. The examiner quotes an opinion of the attorney general to the effect that there is no authority for the expenditure of the county's funds for such purposes. The warrants in question were paid for working up cases violating prohibition laws.

The examiner charges Sam W. Collins, ex-clerk of the circuit court, with $336 for the non-payment of fines collected by him and not paid over to the county treasurer.

Discrepancies in the accounts of J. N. Dennis, tax collector, to the amount of $108 were found by examiner Wilkinson, which resulted from fees which were not charged against him by the county treasurer. Mr. Dennis paid this amount as soon as it was called to his attention and the examiner exonerates him from all blame.

W. M. Adams, ex-solicitor, is charged with $131.05 for securing service in whiskey cases, which was an illegal allowance from the county fund.

Other small amounts are charged against L. H. Reynolds, ex-judge of probate, in the sum of $5, which was paid, and M. D. Mathee, clerk of the circuit court, $1.

The books of the following officials were found to be correct: L. A. Pounds, tax assessor; J. W. Shore, superintendent of education; B. L. Jones, Sheriff, and E. M. Deason, present probate judge.

Thorsby Institute Notes.

The closing exercises of Thorsby Institute occurred on Thursday and Friday nights, June 6th and 7th. The baccalaureate sermon was preached on Thursday night by Rev. George Eaves, D., of Birmingham. It was an earnest appeal for such an interpretation of the Christian life as should help to bring the kingdom of brotherhood of good will among men. The graduates of our schools should be the leaders in all movements for the betterment of social conditions.

The graduating exercises of the class of 1912 from the High School course occurred on Friday night. The music of the evening was furnished by the Thorsby band, and was well rendered. The opening prayer was offered by Rev. J. J. Richards. Miss Mabel A. Jones, in her essay on "What Prominent American Women Have Done," sketched the achievements of some of the most noted names among America's Women. Mr. Philip W. Horn, in his essay on "The Marvels of Modern Science," told something of the great achievements of recent years in the application of scientific knowledge. Miss Hilda S. Johnson, under the title, "When Day Comes On, the Stars Appear," told how, in the times in the world's history when all seemed dark, the characters of noble men and women had shone out like stars in the night. The essays all showed much thought and careful preparation, and reflected a great deal of credit on those who presented them.

The Commencement address was delivered by Rev. S. H. Herbert, the newly elected principal, on the subject, "Education and Efficient Citizenship." The speaker empasized the need of an education that would build up health and not undermine it, that should prepare students to co-operate intelligently with all measures for better health of the community and the State, that should create a wholesome respect for honest work, that should develop the ability to think clearly and independently on all questions, that should fit for the best enjoyment of life, and that should develop characters that will stand firmly for the right in all times of temptation. The product of such an education should be a citizen who is qualified and ready to make his life count for the best welfare of the country, not only in the present, but for coming generations.

Rev. Frank E. Jenkins, D. D., of Demorest, Ga., President of the Board of Trustees, presented to the three graduates, Miss Anderson, Miss Swan and Mr. Horn, the diplomas showing completion of the High School course of Thorsby Institute.

Rev. E. W. Butler then presented the honor prize, for the best record in school work during the year. The prize this year was evenly divided between Miss Thora Gerald and Mr. J. Dalton Weldon. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. M. Trosper.

Principal S. H. Herbert is spending the summer in Thorsby, getting plans under way for next year's work. Two lines along which especial effort will be made the coming year are the providing of work in order that worthy young people who are in earnest in their desire for a better education, but have not funds to pay for it in full, may have an opportunity to earn a part of their expenses, and the providing of special classes adapted to the needs of those who have reached mature years with little or no schooling. Quite a number of important repairs and improvements are to be made on the school property during the summer, and several important additions will be made to the laboratory equipment for scientific work. The new catalogee of the school will be out in a few days.

WEDDING ON TUESDAY

A wedding of much interest in Riderville was solemnized Tuesday, June 18th, at 2:30 o'clock at the church, when Mr. W. Henry Duncan and Miss Dixie Griffin were united in marriage by Rev. Bagby.

The House was beautifully decorated for the occasion with ferns and other flowers.

Mrs. Mattison presided at the organ. As the strains of the wedding march were heard Miss Willie Mae Parnell, Mr. C. H. Bowen, Miss Lena Johnson and Mr. Joe Rasberry took their places near the altar. The Bridesmaids wore lovely white embroidered voil dresses with black hats; each of them carried a bunch of roses.

The groom and his best man, Mr. John B. Rider, then proceeded to the altar and awaited the bride.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Pine Gentry as matron of honor, who wore a handsome lavender satin gown, trimmed with shadow lace.

The bride wore a lovely traveling suit, with hat and shoes to match; she carried a shower boquet of bride's roses.

THE "PROGRESSIVE" PARTY DEDICATED

THE BANDANNA HANDKERCHIEF ADOPTED AS "ROOSEVELT BATTLE FLAG."

Chicago, June 23.—The "progressive" party born last night was dedicated today. In the presence of 600 men, some of them recognized leaders of the movement, others merely onlookers, the first formal step was taken. Gov. Hiram Johnson of California was empowered to appoint a committee of seven members to confer with Colonel Roosevelt and formulate a plan of action.

"Here is the birth of a new party," said Governor Johnson, when this was done.

"The movement is going steadily ahead," said James R. Garfield, of Ohio. "Those who think this is a flash in the pan are mistaken."

In the opinion of the leaders the new party enters the field with a formidable equipment. The leaders, however, said that as to the men who took a conspicuous part in the campaign for Colonel Roosevelt's nomination each must speak for himself.

HADLEY'S ATTITUDE UNKNOWN

The attitude of Governor Hadley of Missouri was the chief point of discussion along this line. The governor left town without waiting to declare himself.

No definite idea of the plan to be followed could be obtained and it was said several weeks may elapse before the programme is decided upon. Governor Johnson, in the meantime, will act as field marshal and, in co-operation with Colonel Roosevelt, will decide upon the membership of the committee of seven and guide the preliminary work of the organization. Colonel Roosevelt will leave for Oyster Bay tomorrow afternoon and Governor Johnson for California, but they will keep in communication with each other.

Today's meeting was held in the headquarters of the national Roosevelt committee, under the direction of the most prominent Roosevelt supporters who had not left town. Seated at a table with Governor Johnson were Mr. Garfield, Gifford Pinchot, Governor Stubbs of Kansas, Medill McCormick of Chicago and Senator Clapp of Minnesota.

Scattered through the hall were a large number of Roosevelt delegates to the republican national convention, as well as some of the "steam rolled" delegates to whom seats were refused. It was impossible to ascertain how large a proportion of the full Roosevelt strength of the convention was represented, although it was said that nearly every state which sent Roosevelt delegates to Chicago had its share of men there.

BANDANNA IS BATTLE FLAG

The bandanna handkerchief was adopted as the "Roosevelt battle flag."

Most of the delegates wore [illegible] bandannas and many [illegible] arms and others wore them [illegible] by the hundreds to the crowd. The bandanna, it was explained, stands for the plain people who ordinarily use them.

"We're all plain people here and this is a movement of the plain people," said one of the delegates.

Colonel Roosevelt gave his sanction to the "battle flag" by appearing last night with one in his hand, which he waved to the crowd on the street. His daughter, Mrs. Longworth, wore a bandanna on her hat.

"I am not acting as the leader of this movement," said Governor Johnson, when the meeting of delegates had been called to order.

"The active leader must be a man from a more accessible state than California. I am merely acting as chairman of this meeting at which we are to begin on the road which leads to political freedom."

Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver, a democrat, arose.

"Surely there can be no more solemn occasion than this one," he said. "We are beginning on Sunday a great new movement. I believe that we should begin it by asking the guidance of Him for whom we are here."

W. H. Mixon of Selma, a negro clergyman and a Roosevelt delegate, who was excluded from the republican convention, began to recite the psalm which begins:

"The Lord is my shepherd." The delegates arose and repeated it with him. A prayer by Rev. Mixon followed. Some one began to sing "America," and in a moment the others were singing. The meeting was in contrast to the uproarious ones which had been held in the same room while the convention was in session. There was no cheering or hand-clapping, no cry of "eat 'em alive, Teddy." The solemnity of the occasion which was believed to signalize the birth of the new party pressed itself upon the gathering.

A hush fell over the crowd. broken only by the voices of the speakers.

Governor Johnson, in his opening address, appealed to the delegates to stay in the fight they had begun.—Age-Herald.

THIRD PARTY TO BE ORGANIZED IN ALABAMA

THOMPSON MAKES THIS ANNOUNCEMENT ON RETURN FROM CHICAGO.

Declaring that the new third party will organize in the state of Alabama at a meeting or state convention to be held probably in Birmingham shortly after the Baltimore convention adjourns, Joseph O. Thompson, United States collector of internal revenue, and the leading progressive republican of the state, returned today from Chicago, where he has been attending what he terms "the death of one political party and the birth of another at the same time."

Mr. Thompson was for two terms internal revenue collector under ex-President Roosevelt's administration, and continued in office under President Taft. From the beginning of the big split in the republican party, Mr. Thompson has fought in the Roosevelt ranks with Judge Oscar Hundley, also of Birmingham. Both Mr. Hundley and Mr. Thompson went to Chicago, and waged a warm fight over the Ninth Alabama district contests in the republican convention. Both of them joined the Roosevelt forces in the movement for a new party and Mr. Thompson stated today that the new party will not bear the name republican but will be known as the "Progressive party." Judge Hundley is expected back from Chicago this afternoon. Mr. Thompson [illegible] will remain for several weeks. At the conclusion of the Baltimore convention the Alabama leaders of the progressive party will immediately start a movement looking to a strong organization.

In regard to the progressive party and the republican split Mr. Thompson had the following to say today: "It is indeed interesting to have witnessed the funeral of one party and the birth of another at the same time. I feel that Roosevelt will sweep the country next November. The progressive spirit among the delegates from the east was just as strong at Chicago as among those from the west and the easterners were just as ready for the new party. The nomination at the Coliseum was made by a majority of 21 after Roosevelt withdrew from the convention. I had several conferences with Colonel Roosevelt and during one of them just before leaving Chicago, he seemed more cheerful than I have ever seen him.

When the proceedings of the Chicago convention are laid bare in the progressive campaign there is no doubt but that Roosevelt will receive three-fourths of the republican vote and a large part of the democratic vote both in the south and the north.

"An organization of the progressive party will be perfected in Alabama, but as yet no definite plans have been decided upon, pending the outcome of the democratic convention at Baltimore. A meeting for the purpose of organizing will not be held until after the Baltimore convention, but then a call will be issued to all electors of the state, regardless of past political affiliations, will be made to convene in one of the large cities, probably Birmingham.

The name of the new party will not be republican, but "Progressive party." It has not been finally decided yet where the national convention of the new party will be held. The nomination of Roosevelt by the progressives Saturday in Chicago is merely tentative, but there is no doubt that it will be ratified by the convention. The action of the temporary meeting was in keeping with Mr. Roosevelt's wishes in regard to the matter."—Ledger.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transform brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia.

CHAPTER I.—(Continued.)

Entering the main room, he led her gently to one of the chairs near the table and immediately thereafter lighted the fire which he had taken the precaution to lay before his departure It had been dark in the cabin, but the fire soon filled it with glorious light. She watched him at his task and as he rose from the hearth questioned him:

"Now tell me," she began, "you found—"

"First your supper, and then the story," he answered, turning toward the door of the other room.

"No," pleaded the girl, "can't you see that nothing is of any importance to me but the story? Did you find the camp?"

"I found the place where it had been."

"Where it had been!"

"There wasn't a single vestige of it left. That whole pocket, I knew it well, had been swept clean by the flood."

"But Kirkby, and Mrs. Maitland and—"

"They weren't there."

"Did you search for them?"

"Certainly."

"But they can't have been drowned," she exclaimed piteously.

"Of course not," he began reassuringly. "Kirkby is a veteran of these mountains and—"

"But do you know him?" queried the girl in great surprise.

"I did once," said the man, flushing darkly at his admission. "I haven't seen him for five years."

So that was the measure of his isolation, thought the woman, keen for the slightest evidence as to her companion's history, of which, by the way, he meant to tell her nothing.

"Well?" she asked, breaking the pause.

"Kirkby would certainly see the cloud burst coming and he would take the people with him in the camp up on the hogback near it. It is far above the flood line; they would be quite safe there."

"And did you look for them there?"

"I did. The trail had been washed out, but I scrambled up and found undisputed evidence that my surmise was correct. I haven't a doubt that all who were in the camp were saved."

"Thank God for that," said the girl, greatly relieved and comforted by his reassuring words. "And Robert Maitland and the rest on the mountain, what do you think of them?"

"I am sure that they must have escaped, too. I don't think any of them have suffered more than a thorough drenching in the downpour and that they are all safe and perhaps on their way to the settlements now."

"But they wouldn't go back without searching for me, would they?" cried the girl.

"Certainly not. I suppose they are searching for you now."

"Well then—"

"Wait," said the man. "You started down the canon, you told everybody you were going that way. They naturally searched in that direction, they hadn't the faintest idea that you were going up the river.

"No," admitted Enid, "that is true. I did not tell anyone. I didn't dream of going up the canon when I started out in the morning, it was the result of a sudden impulse."

"God bless that—" burst out the man, and then he checked himself, flushing again darkly.

What had he been about to say? The question flashed across his own mind and into the woman's mind at the same time when she heard the incompleted sentence; but she, too, checked the question that rose to her lips.

"This is the way I figure it," continued the man hurriedly to cover up his confusion. "Deep canon, steep sides. If these mountains, which, save for us, they are, they have you to have gone down the canon. Kirkby with Mrs. Maitland and the others waited on the ridge until Mr. Maitland and his party joined them. They couldn't have saved very much to eat or wear from the camp, they were miles from a settlement; they probably divided into two parties, the larger with the woman and children, started for home, the second went down the canon searching for your dead body!"

"And had it not been for you," cried the girl, impulsively, "they had found it."

"God permitted me to be of service to you," answered the man, simply. "I can follow their speculations exactly; up or down, they believed you to have been in the canon when the cloud burst, therefore there was only one place and one direction to search for you."

"And that was?"

"Down the canon?"

"What did you do then?"

"I went down the canon myself. I think I saw evidence that some one had preceded me, too."

"Did you overtake them?"

"Certainly not, they traveled as rapidly as I; they must have started early in the morning and they had several hours the advantage of me."

"But they must have stopped somewhere for the night and—"

"Yes," answered the man; "if I had only myself to consider, I should have pressed on through the night and overtaken them when they camped."

"Only yourself?"

"You made me promise to return here by nightfall. I don't know whether I should have obeyed you or not. I kept on as long as I dared and still leave myself time to get back to you by dark."

She had no idea of the desperate speed he had made to reach her while it was still daylight.

"If you hadn't come when you did, I should have died," cried the girl impetuously. "You did perfectly right. I don't think I am a coward; I hope not. I never was afraid before, but—"

"Don't apologize or explain to me, it's not necessary; I understand everything you feel. It was only because I had given you my word to be back by sunset that I left off following their trail. I was afraid that you might think me dead or that something had happened and—"

"I should, I did," admitted the girl. "It wasn't so bad during the day time, but when the sun went down and you did not come I began to imagine everything. I saw myself left alone here in these mountains, helpless, wounded, without a human being to speak to. I could not bear it."

"But I have been here alone for five years," said the man grimly.

"That's different. I don't know why you have chosen solitude, but I—"

"You are a woman," returned the other gently, "and you have suffered, that accounts for everything."

"Thank you," said Enid, gratefully. "And I am so glad you came back to me."

"Back to you," reiterated the man, and then he stopped. If he had allowed his heart to speak he would have said, Back to you from the very ends of the world. "But I want you to believe that I honestly did not leave the trail until the ultimate moment," he added.

"I do believe it;" she extended her hand to him. "You have been very good to me, I trust you absolutely."

And for the second time he took that graceful, dainty, aristocratic hand in his own larger, stronger, firmer grasp. His face flushed again; under other circumstances and in other days perhaps he might have kissed that hand. As it was he only held it for a moment and then gently released it.

"And you think they are searching for me?" she asked.

"I know it. I am sure of what I myself would do for one I love—I loved, I mean, and they—"

"And they will find me?"

The man shook his head.

"I am afraid they will be convinced that you have gone down with the flood. Didn't you have a cap or—"

"Yes," said the woman, "and a sweater. The bear you shot covered the sweater with blood. I could not put it on again."

As she spoke she flushed a glorious crimson at the remembrance of that meeting, but the man was looking away with studied care. She thanked him in her heart for such generous and kindly consideration.

"They will have gone down the stream with the rest, and it's just possible that the searchers may find them, the body of the bear, too. This river ends in a deep mountain lake and I think it is going to snow; it will be frozen hard tomorrow."

"And they will think me—there?"

"I am afraid so."

"And they won't come up here?"

"It is scarcely possible."

"Oh!" exclaimed the woman faintly at the possibility that the might

"I took an empty bottle with me,"

"And Who Is James Armstrong?"

said the man, breaking the silence, "in which I had enclosed a paper saying that you were here and safe, save for your wounded foot, and giving direction how to reach the place. I built a cairn of rocks in a sheltered nook in the valley where your camp had been pitched and left the tightly corked bottle wedged on top of it. If they return to the camp they could scarcely fail to see it."

"But if they don't go back there."

"Well, it was just a chance."

"And if they don't find me?"

"You will have to stay here for a while; until your foot gets well enough to travel, anyway," returned the man, evasively.

"But winter is coming on; you said the lake would freeze tonight and if it snows?"

"It will snow."

The woman stared at him appalled.

"And in that case—"

"I am afraid," was the slow reply, "that you will have to stay here."

He hesitated in the face of her white, still face—"all winter," he added, desperately.

"My God," exclaimed the girl, "alone, with you?"

"Miss Maitland," said the man, resolutely, "I might as well tell you the truth. I can make my way to the settlements now or later, but it will be a journey of perhaps a week. There will be no danger to me, but you will have to stay here. You could not go with me. If I am any judge you couldn't possibly use your foot for a mountain journey for at least three weeks, and by that time we shall be snowed in as effectually as if we were within the arctic circle. But if you will let me go alone to the settlement I can bring back your uncle, a woman to keep you company, before the trails are impassible. Or enough men to make it practicable to take you through the canons and down the trails to your home again. I could not do that alone even if you were well, in the depth of winter."

The girl shook her head stubbornly.

"A week alone in these mountains and I should be mad," she said decisively. "It isn't to be thought of."

"It must be thought of," urged the man. "You don't understand. It is either that or spend the winter here with me."

The woman looked at him steadily.

"And what have I to fear from you?" she asked.

"Nothing, nothing, as God is my witness," protested the other; "but the world?"

"The world," said the woman reflectively. "I don't mean to say that it means nothing to me, but it has become enough for what it could take my now." She came to her decision swift smiled faintly as she used the old word of tropic island and southern sea—"together. You have shown me that you are a man and a gentleman. In God and you I put my trust. When my foot gets well, if you can teach me to walk on snow shoes and it is possible to get through the passes, we will try to get back; if not, we must wait."

"There is no [illegible]

"The decision is yours," said the man, "and yet I feel that I ought to point out to you how—"

"I see all that you see," she interrupted. "I know what is in your mind. It is entirely clear to me. We can do nothing else."

"So be it. You need have no apprehension as to your material comfort; I have lived in these mountains for a long time. I am prepared for any emergency. I pass my time in the summer getting ready for the winter. There is a cave, or recess rather, behind the house which, as you see, is built against the rock wall, and it is filled with wood enough to keep us warm for two or three winters; I have an ample supply of provision and clothing for my own needs. You will need something warmer than that you wear," he continued.

"Have you needle, thread and cloth?" she asked.

"Everything," was the prompt answer.

"Then I shall not suffer."

"Are you that wonder of wonders," asked the man, smiling lightly, "an educated woman who knows how to sew?"

"It is a tradition in Philadelphia," answered the girl, "that her daughters should be expert needlewomen."

"Oh, you are from Philadelphia."

"Yes, and you?"

She threw the question at him so deftly and so quickly that she caught him unaware and off his guard a second time within the hour.

"Baltimore," he answered before he thought, and then bit his lip. He had determined to vouchsafe her no information regarding himself, and here she had surprised him into an admission in the first blush of their acquaintance, and she knew that she had triumphed for she smiled in recognition of it.

She tried another tack.

"Mr. Newbold," she began at a venture, and as it was five years since he had heard that name, his surprise at her knowledge, which after all was very simple, betrayed him a third time. "We are like stories I have read, people who have been cast away on desert islands and—"

"Yes," said the man, "but no castaways that I have ever read of have been so luxuriously provided with [illegible] even your mind need not stagnate."

"I have looked at your books already," said the woman, answering his glance.

This was where she had found his name, he realized.

"You will have this room for your own use and I will take the other for mine," he continued.

"I am loath to dispossess you."

"I shall be quite comfortable there, and this shall be your room exclusively except when you bid me enter, as when I bring you your meals. I shall hold it inviolate."

"But," said the woman, "there must be an equal division of labor. I must do my share."

"There isn't much to do in the winter except to take care of the burros, keep up the fire and prepare what we have to eat."

"I am afraid I should be unequal to outdoor work, but in the rest I must do my part."

He recognized at once that idleness would be irksome.

"So you shall," he assented heartily, "when your foot is well enough to make you an efficient member of our little society."

"Thank you, and now—"

"Is there anything else before I get supper?"

"You think there is no hope of their searching for me here?"

The man shook his head.

"If James Armstrong had been in the party," she said reflectively, "I am sure he would never have given up."

"And who is James Armstrong, may I ask?" burst forth the other bluntly.

"Why he—I—he is a friend of my uncle and an—acquaintance of my own."

"Oh," said the man shortly and gloomily, as he turned away.

Enid Maitland had been very brave in his presence, but when he went out she put her head down on her arms on the table and cried softly to herself. Was ever a woman in such a predicament, thrown into the arms of a man who had established every conceivable claim upon her gratitude, forced to live with him shut up in a two-room log cabin upon a lonely mountain range, surrounded by lofty and inaccessible peaks, pierced by terrific gorges soon to be impassable from the snows? She had read many stories of castaways, from Charles Reade's famous "Foul Play" down to more modern instances, but in those cases there had always been an island comparatively large over which to reign with privacy, seclusion, opportunity for withdrawal; bright heavens, balmy breezes, idyllic conditions. Here were two uplifted from the earth upon a sky-piercing mountain. They would have had more range of action and more liberty of motion if they had been upon a derelict in the ocean.

And she realized at the same time that in all those stories the two castaways always loved each other. Would it be so with them? Was it so? And again the hot flame within outvied the fire of the hearth as the blood rushed to the smooth surface of her cheek again.

What would her father say if he could know her position, what would the world say, and above all what would Armstrong say. It cannot be denied that her thoughts were terribly and overwhelmingly dismayed, and yet that despair was not without a certain relief. No man had ever so interested her as this one. What was the mystery of his life, why was he there, what had he meant when he had blessed the idle impulse that had sent her into his arms?

Her heart throbbed again. She lifted her face from her hands and dried her tears, a warm glow stole over her and once again not altogether from the fire. Who and what was this man? Who was that woman whose picture he had taken from her? Well, she would have time to find out. And meantime the world outside could think and do what it pleased. She sat staring into the fire light, seeing pictures there, dreaming dreams. She was as lovely as an angel to the man when he came back into the room.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Woman's Heart.

That upper earth on which they lived was covered with a thick blanket of snow. The lakes and pools were frozen from shore to shore. The mountain brooks, if they flowed at all, ran under thick arches of ice. The deepest canons were well nigh impassible from huge drifts that sometimes almost rose level with the tops of the walls. In every sheltered spot great banks of white were massed. The spreading branches of the tall pine trees in the valleys drooped under heavy burdens of snow. Only here and there sharp gaunt peaks were swept clean by the fierce winter winds and thrust themselves upward in icy air, naked and bare. The cold was polar in its bitter intensity.

[illegible] shelf or plateau jutting out from the mountain side upon which the lonely cabin stood was sheltered from the prevailing winds, but the house itself was almost covered with the drifts. The constant fire roaring up the huge stone chimney had melted some of the snow at the top and it had run down the slanting roof and formed huge icicles on what had been the eaves of the house. The man had cut away the drifts from doors and windows for light and liberty. At first every stormy night would fill his laborious clearings with drifting snow, but as it became packed down and frozen solid he was able to keep his various ways open without a great deal of difficulty. A little work every morning and evening sufficed.

Every day he had to go down the mountain stairway to the bottom of the pocket to feed and water the burros. What was a quick and simple task in milder, warmer seasons sometimes took him a half a day under the present rigorous conditions. And the woman never saw him start out in the storm without a sinking heart and grave apprehension. On his return to the cabin half frozen, almost spent and exhausted, she ever welcomed him with eager gratitude and satisfaction which would shine in her eyes, throb in her heart and tremble upon her lips, control it as she might. And he thought it was well worth all the trouble and hardships of his task to be so greeted when he came back to her.

Winter had set in unusually early and with unprecedented severity. Any kind of winter in the mountains would have amazed the girl, but even the man with his larger experience declared he had never before known such sharp and sudden cold, or such deep and lasting snows. His daily records had never shown such low temperatures nor had his observation ever noted such wild and furious storms as raged then and there. It seemed as if Nature were in a conspiracy to seal up the mountains and all they contained, to make ingress and egress alike impossible.

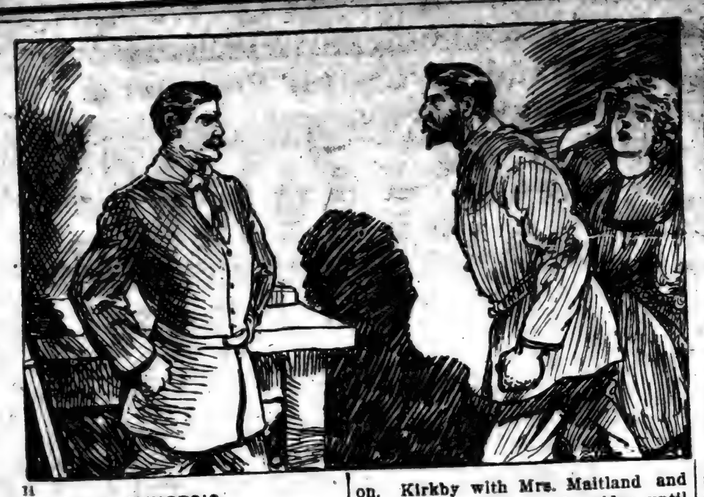
A month had elapsed and Enid's foot was now quite well. The man had managed to sew up her boot where the knife had cut it and although the job was a clumsy one the result was a usable shoe. It is astonishing the comfort she took when she first put it on and discarded for good the shapeless woolen stocking which had covered the clumsy bandage happily no longer necessary. Although the torn and bruised member had healed and she could use it with care, her foot was still very tender and capable of sustaining no violent or long continued strain. Of necessity she had been largely confined to the house, but whenever it had been possible he had wrapped her in his great bear skin coat and had helped her out to the edge of the cliff for a breath of fresh air.

Sometimes he would leave her there alone, would perhaps have left her alone there always had she not imperiously required his company.

Insensibly she had acquired the habit—not a difficult one for a woman to fall into—of taking the lead in the small affairs of their circumscribed existence, and he had acquiesced in her dominance without hesitation or remonstrance. It was she who ordered their daily walk and conversation. Her wishes were consulted about everything; to be sure no great range of choice was allowed them, of liberty of action or freedom in the constraints with which nature bound them, but whenever there was any selection she made it.

The man yielded everything for her and yet he did it without in any way derogating from his self-respect or without surrendering his natural independence. The woman instinctively realized that in any great crisis in any large matter, the determination of which would naturally effect their present or their future, their happiness, welfare life, he would assert himself, and his assertion would be unquestioned and unquestionable by her.

There was a delightful satisfaction to the woman in the whole situation. She had a woman's desire to lead in the smaller things in life, and yet craved the woman's consciousness that in the great emergencies she would be led, in the great battles she would be fought for, in the great dangers she would be protected, in the great perils she would be saved. There was rest, comfort, joy and satisfaction in these thoughts.



The strength of the man she mastered was estimate of her own power and charm. There was a great, sweet, voiceless, unconscious flattery in his deference of which she could not be unaware.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transform brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia.

Entering the main room, he led her gently to one of the chairs near the table and immediately thereafter lighted the fire which he had taken the precaution to lay before his departure It had been dark in the cabin, but the fire soon filled it with glorious light. She watched him at his task and as he rose from the hearth questioned him:

"Now tell me," she began, "you found—"

"First your supper, and then the story," he answered, turning toward the door of the other room.

"No," pleaded the girl, "can't you see that nothing is of any importance to me but the story? Did you find the camp?"

"I found the place where it had been."

"Where it had been!"

"There wasn't a single vestige of it left. That whole pocket, I knew it well, had been swept clean by the flood."

"But Kirkby, and Mrs. Maitland and—"

"They weren't there."

"Did you search for them?"

"Certainly."

"But they can't have been drowned," she exclaimed piteously.

"Of course not," he began reassuringly. "Kirkby is a veteran of these mountains and—"

"But do you know him?" queried the girl in great surprise.

"I did once," said the man, flushing darkly at his admission. "I haven't seen him for five years."

So that was the measure of his isolation, thought the woman, keen for the slightest evidence as to her companion's history, of which, by the way, he meant to tell her nothing.

"Well?" she asked, breaking the pause.

"Kirkby would certainly see the cloud burst coming and he would take the people with him in the camp up on the hogback near it. It is far above the flood line; they would be quite safe there."

"And did you look for them there?"

"I did. The trail had been washed out, but I scrambled up and found undisputed evidence that my surmise was correct. I haven't a doubt that all who were in the camp were saved."

"Thank God for that," said the girl, greatly relieved and comforted by his reassuring words. "And Robert Maitland and the rest on the mountain, what do you think of them?"

"I am sure that they must have escaped, too. I don't think any of them have suffered more than a thorough drenching in the downpour and that they are all safe and perhaps on their way to the settlements now."

"But they wouldn't go back without searching for me, would they?" cried the girl.

"Certainly not. I suppose they are searching for you now."

"Well then—"

"Wait," said the man. "You started down the canon, you told everybody you were going that way. They naturally searched in that direction, they hadn't the faintest idea that you were going up the river.

"No," admitted Enid, "that is true. I did not tell anyone. I didn't dream of going up the canon when I started out in the morning, it was the result of a sudden impulse."

"God bless that—" burst out the man, and then he checked himself, flushing again darkly.

What had he been about to say? The question flashed across his own mind and into the woman's mind at the same time when she heard the incompleted sentence; but she, too, checked the question that rose to her lips.

"This is the way I figure it," continued the man hurriedly to cover up his confusion. "They [illegible] these mountains, which, save for six days that we have you to have come down the canon. Kirkby with Mrs. Maitland and the others waited on the ridge until Mr. Maitland and his party joined them. They couldn't have saved very much to eat or wear from the camp, they were miles from a settlement; they probably divided into two parties, the larger with the woman and children, started for home, the second went down the canon searching for your dead body!"

"And had it not been for you," cried the girl, impulsively, "they had found it."

"God permitted me to be of service to you," answered the man, simply. "I can follow their speculations exactly; up or down, they believed you to have been in the canon when the cloud burst, therefore there was only one place and one direction to search for you."

"And that was?"

"Down the canon?"

"What did you do then?"

"I went down the canon myself. I think I saw evidence that some one had preceded me, too."

"Did you overtake them?"

"Certainly not, they traveled as rapidly as I; they must have started early in the morning and they had several hours the advantage of me."

"But they must have stopped somewhere for the night and—"

"Yes," answered the man; "if I had only myself to consider, I should have pressed on through the night and overtaken them when they camped."

"Only yourself?"

"You made me promise to return here by nightfall. I don't know whether I should have obeyed you or not. I kept on as long as I dared and still leave myself time to get back to you by dark."

She had no idea of the desperate speed he had made to reach her while it was still daylight.

"If you hadn't come when you did, I should have died," cried the girl impetuously. "You did perfectly right. I don't think I am a coward; I hope not. I never was afraid before, but—"

"Don't apologize or explain to me, it's not necessary; I understand everything you feel. It was only because I had given you my word to be back by sunset that I left off following their trail. I was afraid that you might think me dead or that something had happened and—"

"I should, I did," admitted the girl. "It wasn't so bad during the day time, but when the sun went down and you did not come I began to imagine everything. I saw myself left alone here in these mountains, helpless, wounded, without a human being to speak to. I could not bear it."

"But I have been here alone for five years," said the man grimly.

"That's different. I don't know why you have chosen solitude, but I—"

"You are a woman," returned the other gently, "and you have suffered, that accounts for everything."

"Thank you," said Enid, gratefully. "And I am so glad you came back to me."

"Back to you," reiterated the man, and then he stopped. If he had allowed his heart to speak he would have said, Back to you from the very ends of the world. "But I want you to believe that I honestly did not leave the trail until the ultimate moment," he added.

"I do believe it;" she extended her hand to him. "You have been very good to me, I trust you absolutely."

And for the second time he took that graceful, dainty, aristocratic hand in his own larger, stronger, firmer grasp. His face flushed again; under other circumstances and in other days perhaps he might have kissed that hand. As it was he only held it for a moment and then gently released it.

"And you think they are searching for me?" she asked.

"I know it. I am sure of what I myself would do for one I love—I loved, I mean, and they—"

"And they will find me?"

The man shook his head.

"I am afraid they will be convinced that you have gone down with the flood. Didn't you have a cap or—"

"Yes," said the woman, "and a sweater. The bear you shot covered the sweater with blood. I could not put it on again."

As she spoke she flushed a glorious crimson at the remembrance of that meeting, but the man was looking away with studied care. She thanked him in her heart for such generous and kindly consideration.

"They will have gone down the stream with the rest, and it's just possible that the searchers may find them, the body of the bear, too. This river ends in a deep mountain lake and I think it is going to snow; it will be frozen hard tomorrow."

"And they will think me drowned?"

"I am afraid so."

"And they won't come up here?"

"It is scarcely possible."

"Oh!" exclaimed the woman faintly, [illegible] possibility that she might [illegible]

"I made an error in my calculations," said the man, breaking the silence, "in which I had enclosed a paper saying that you were here and safe, save for your wounded foot, and giving direction how to reach the place. I built a cairn of rocks in a sheltered nook in the valley where your camp had been pitched and left the tightly corked bottle wedged on top of it. If they return to the camp they could scarcely fail to see it."

"But if they don't go back there."

"Well, it was just a chance."

"And if they don't find me?"

"You will have to stay here for a while; until your foot gets well enough to travel, anyway," returned the man, evasively.

"But winter is coming on; you said the lake would freeze tonight and if it snows?"

"It will snow."

The woman stared at him appalled.

"And in that case—"

"I am afraid," was the slow reply, "that you will have to stay here."

He hesitated in the face of her white, still face—"all winter," he added, desperately.

"My God," exclaimed the girl, "alone, with you?"

"Miss Maitland," said the man, resolutely, "I might as well tell you the truth. I can make my way to the settlements now or later, but it will be a journey of perhaps a week. There will be no danger to me, but you will have to stay here. You could not go with me. If I am any judge you couldn't possibly use your foot for a mountain journey for at least three weeks, and by that time we shall be snowed in as effectually as if we were within the arctic circle. But if you will let me go alone to the settlement I can bring back your uncle, a woman to keep you company, before the trails are impassible. Or enough men to make it practicable to take you through the canons and down the trails to your home again. I could not do that alone even if you were well, in the depth of winter."

The girl shook her head stubbornly.

"A week alone in these mountains and I should be mad," she said decisively. "It isn't to be thought of."

"It must be thought of," urged the man. "You don't understand. It is either that or spend the winter here with me."

The woman looked at him steadily.

"And what have I to fear from you?" she asked.

"Nothing, nothing, as God is my witness," protested the other; "but the world?"

"The world," said the woman reflectively. "I don't mean to say that it means nothing to me, but it has ceased to [illegible] which it would [illegible] my [illegible]

Clothes and the Man.

A colporteur in South Carolina, walking many miles through mud, accosted a passerby and suggested the purchase of the Bible. He was refused. The next day, says the Record of Christian Work, after a night's rest and cleanup, he set up his stand in town and had the pleasure of selling a Bible to the very man who had refused to purchase the day before. "I met a muddy man yesterday with Bibles," said he, "who looked like a Methodist tramp. When I buys a Bible I buys it from a Baptist gentleman."

UNIFORM REPORTS SHOW SATISFACTION

Clear Signs of Active Preparation For Fall Trade.

New York.—R. G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Rarely are the reports from leading trade centers in different sections so uniformly satisfactory. In most cases an actual widening demand is noted and in others there are clear signs of preparation for an active fall trade. The weather is ideally favorable both for wholesale and retail distribution and for the growing crops.

The gradual movement towards a higher price basis in iron and steel denotes unusual activity. In eastern territory the situation reflects increased strength with piemakers continuing steady buyers.

The demand for basic materials is taxing capacity, and orders for structural steel show a substantial total. With few exceptions finished lines are booked ahead through a third quarter. Heavy steel melting scrap remains at $13.50 (Pittsburg), but holders of stocks are not inclined to accept much future business at this figure. It is now more difficult to obtain Bessemer and open-hearth billets for prompt shipment and the quotations of $20.50, and $21 (Pittsburg), respectively, are the minimum.

Labor conditions are causing some concern, the scarcity of workers interfering with operations at many points. Demand for spot goods has improved with jobbers of drygoods. The retail trade is growing more freely for quick shipments of small lots.

There is a distinct broadening in the demand for cotton goods and advances have established in wide print cloths and convertibles new records. Printers and convertors have been buying for delivery into October. Brown sheetings and drills are firmer and export demand from miscellaneous ports is steady. Reorders for fall cottons are coming in moderately with the best business in printed shirtings and percales.

The situation in woolens and worsteds continues satisfactory and advances are named by the largest producers. Cotton yarns are firmer and slightly higher and some fair sized orders are being tendered on worsted yarns.

The seasons when the shoe factories close for a few weeks is at hand, but an active fall business is looked for and the New England footwear market shows improvements. Leather is very firm.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says: Improved crop reports and continued activity in industrial circles present the more pleasant aspect of an otherwise quiet trade situation. Jobbers and wholesale dealers in textiles and dress goods are taking fabrics for fall and spring, and, in some instances, men's wear, for example, re-orders are noted for the higher prices of raw wool seem to presage higher quotations on finished goods. An advance of 5 per cent already has been made on broadcloth and worsted yarn probably will go higher.

The general tendency is to operate cautiously to give some attention to politics and to await clearer views as to probable crop results. However, there is no pessimism and it is noteworthy that political matters, while receiving attention, diverting interest from buying, as it were, do not cause any real concern. The best situated line is iron and steel, where specifications against contracts are especially heavy with blast furnaces and mills operating to nearly full capacity. This industry is best seen by a shortage of labor, which seems to have displayed a drifting tendency.

Shoes at wholesale are dull because of high prices. Leather is quite active and strong with sole leather leading, but hides are easier. Collections are not above fair, and in fact, many points report them to be very slow, this being especially true of the south where trade continues dull.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending June 20 were 266, against 266 last week, 22 in the like week of 1911, 187 in 1910, 223 in 1909, and 250 in 1908. Business failures in Canada for the week number 21, which compares with 21 for last week and 17 for the like week of 1911.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending June 20 aggregate 4,734,034 bushels, against 3,652,148 last week, and 1,538,478 this week last year. For the 51 weeks ending June 20 exports are 169,208,518 bushels, against 120,795,356 in the corresponding period last year.

KEEPING BABIES IN HEALTH

Success of Tent Scheme Last Summer So Pronounced That It Will Be Repeated.

Mothers of little babies that suffered much from the intense heat in the early part of July last summer will be interested in the success of the "baby tent" scheme adopted in some of the big cities.

The tents are placed on flat roofs of tall buildings and in open lots, with eight little cradles or cots in each tent. When all was ready mothers of babies under two years were invited to leave them at the nearest available tent over night, so that the youngsters, in addition to enjoying the privilege of sleeping out of doors, could also receive the attention of trained nurses and doctors free.

Some of the tents have a perforated iron pipe extending along the ridge pole and connected with the city water supply. On very hot nights the water was turned on and allowed to stream down over the canvas. By evaporation it greatly reduced the temperature inside the tents. Some of the tents were also kept cool by the use of large blocks of ice in tubs before the entrance. Electric fans blew the cold air from the ice into the tents sufficiently to keep the babies comfortably cool.

This is the way some of the poor babies are being cared for, but the ideas could be utilized by any one who had the welfare of the baby at heart.

That Was Different.

A stern father who had repeatedly told a young man who was paying his addresses to his daughter not to visit the house again without his permission, which he never intended to give, was surprised when he answered a ring at the doorbell late one evening to see the young man waiting on the step.

"Sir," said he in anger, "didn't I tell you not to call again, eh, sir?"

"Yes," said the young man. "I know, but I didn't call to see your daughter. I came on behalf of our firm about that little bill."

"Oh—er—er—" stammered the stern father, "call again, will you?"

Needed No More Help.

An American gentleman got acquainted with a Frenchman who was very anxious to acquire the English language. The American in order to help him said that if he would send his exercises to him he would willingly correct them.

Nothing was heard from the Frenchman for some time, but finally a letter came couched in the following choice English.

"In small time I can learn so many English from his text-book and her dictionary as I think I will to come at the America and to go on the scaffold to lecture."

Only One Fault to Find.

Lambert Kaspers, Chicago attorney, told the following story at a recent Y. M. C. A. banquet:

A Kansas farmer, a Dane, applied for naturalization papers. The judge asked him: "Are you satisfied with the general conditions of the country?"

"Yas," drawled the Dane.

"Does the government suit you?" queried the judge.

"Yas, yas, only I would like to see more rain," replied the farmer.

The Shorter Route.

Lady Duff-Gordon, at a luncheon at Sherry's in New York, told an anecdote apropos of the divorce evil.

"Two girls," she said, "were chatting over a cocktail and a cigarette.

"'Marriages are made in heaven,' said the first girl, and she blew a cloud of smoke into the air and regarded it with dreamy eyes.

"The second girl with a light laugh replied:

"'Yes, that is true; but, thank goodness, to unmake them we have to go only as far as Reno."

The Village Cut-Up.

"Charley Billingsby always has something funny to say, no matter what happens."

"I know it. He's awful comical."

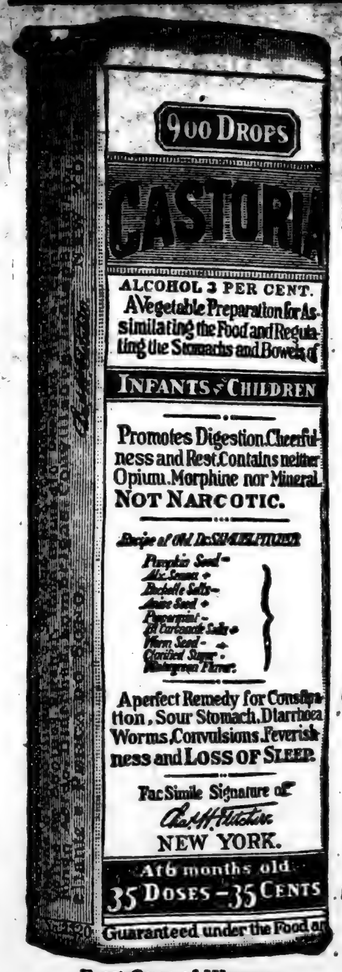
"I often wonder how he thinks of the humorous thoughts he has. He's just perfectly killing. I never heard him call an umbrella anything but a bumbershoot."

A Changed Man.

Mrs. Knagg—You were a different man when I married you.

Mr. Knagg—I sincerely hope so, for then I was a fool.

Make your failure tragical by the earnestness of your endeavor, and then it will not differ much from success.—Thoreau.



Society forgives a man if he breaks the Ten Commandments, but never if he goes broke himself.

Getting things without paying for them is some men's idea of economy.

If you would discover a woman's weakness, keep quiet and listen.

Nothing succeeds like the efforts of some people to be disagreeable.

If a man has common sense he seldom makes use of it in a love affair.

Terrible Teddy! Didn't they wallop him though!

Joe Thompson says the republican party is dead; he ought to know, he attended its funeral and saw it buried.

Don't blame Teddy for quitting the party when it stopped him in its death, but it does look a little ungrateful in Jody Thompson, who has been honored by the party, to quit and go to wearing a bandanna.

The way they did handle "Bull Moose" Teddy at Chicago was a caution; he may never have known what a sure enough steam roller was before, but we'll bet sunshine to tears he knows every little piece of its mechanism now.

The bandanna was the favorite article of clothing of Allen Thurman and of Senator E. W. Pettus—two of the best democrats that ever lived, and now comes Teddy and Jody using them for political purposes. Its sacrilege, pure and simple!

"The BULL MOOSE" party was born last Sunday; Rev. W. H. Mixon of Selma baptised it, Judge Lindsey of Denver was attending physician and TEDDY, he of the three inch teeth, was its daddy; J. C. Thompson of Birmingham is its Alabama God-father.

Well, all we've got to say is that that man Roosevelt can stand a lot of punching. If Jim Flinn can just stand before Jack Johnson as well as did Teddy before Taft and his walloping machine, he'll stand an awful good chance of making some money and gaining a title.

We have no desire to recall the unpleasant days of the amendment fight but as a matter of simple justice we wish to ask a question of our [illegible] friends, Gov. O'N[illegible] and [illegible] chief [illegible] ble d[illegible] chi[illegible] old [illegible] The [illegible] dolli[illegible] but [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] under [illegible]

Comer's hat is in the ring; it will stay in the ring until he picks it up to walk into the Governor's office—if the farmers of this state have [illegible] about it. His presence is demanded to protect them from further encroachments by the railroads. When he left the office of Governor, the railroads had learned a severe lesson and the farmers were receiving fair treatment at the hands of the roads; when Comer left the office the roads began anew to stretch forth their cryptic hands and to draw into their maws everything possible. The farmer is the one who furnishes the larger part of the revenues to the railroads and they look upon Comer as their friend. The fight may be a three cornered one but Comer will start out with a string well tied to his corner.

The advent of Abercrombie into Alabama politics is somewhat skyrocketty; fired bodily from the presidency of the State University he made the race for congressman at large and received the nomination—equivolent to an election, but, not satisfied with this honor, or gloating over his victory, he casts his hat into the senatorial ring and seeks further and higher honors. Abercrombie should remember the downfall of Cæsar, of Napoleon and others, whose ambition led on to final destruction; then too, it would be well for him to learn a lesson from the genial Cy Brown. Alabamians are liberal in their views but they are loathe to pile honors upon one man to the exclusion of all others. He should be satisfied with what he has. It would at least be becoming for him to serve, say a day or two, in the office to which he has been chosen before he seeks preferment.

That Negro Delegate.

The wires flashed the news last Saturday that the State of Colorado had elected a nigger as a delegate to the national democratic convention. The news was rolled as a sweet morsel upon the tongues of local republicans; they saw in it a vindication of their own acts in sitting in conventions with numberless burr heads; they seemed to realize that it "evened up" matters and that it would put a muzzle upon the Press in denouncing local politicians for associating and conferring with negro delegates to state and district conventions.

In their joysome glee they forgot to distinguish between a national convention in which every state, territory and tributary are associated together and a state convention in which men from one state only are gathered for the purpose of outlining a policy for that particular state, or a district convention composed of a few neighboring counties associated together for the purpose of selecting a candidate to represent them in those vital things which effect their home welfare and go not out of their own particular home sphere.

In the first place let it be said, and said with emphasis, that every democrat in Chilton county, whether old or young, progressive or conservative, has openly and persistently denounced the action of the Colorado democracy in sending out a negro delegate.

Let it be said with equal emphasis that the leading republicans of Chilton do not denounce the sending of negro delegates to state or district conventions, but on the other hand associate with them, handshake with them, act with them on committees, consult with them as to candidates and put [illegible] in prayer [illegible] the [illegible] of select committees.

There is a vast difference in do[illegible] [illegible] and re[illegible] [illegible] the action of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Election of the Special Class With a View to the Blessing of the Non-Elect, Who Have Ears but Hear Not, Eyes but See Not.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Cleveland, O., June 23. — Pastor Russell had his usual large audience today. He gave two addresses. We report the one on the text, "To present you holy and unblameable and unreprovable in His sight."—Colossians 1, 22.

Whatever our creeds have said to the effect that anyone declining the drawing and invitation of this Gospel Age would suffer eternal torture, we are glad that the Bible says nothing of this kind. God's Word holds out a specially glorious reward for those who now renounce the world and become true, faithful, footstep followers of Jesus.

But nowhere do the Scriptures declare the unreasonable proposition that any declining this offer of jointheirship with Jesus in His Kingdom and its terms in the narrow way must on account of this rejection suffer eternal torture. How unjust would such a proposition be—how ungodlike! How did we ever so seriously blunder?

The Transforming Work.

Note the class the Apostle mentions as undergoing the transforming influences, preparing them for a share in the Kingdom glories. He declares in the context that those to whom he wrote were once alienated from God, enemies in mind by wicked works, yet now reconciled. Ah, as every Christian knows, there is a wonderful, transforming influence in the Message of the love and grace of God. And it is this that St. Paul here declares.

Jesus first of all through His death as a satisfaction of Justice made possible the acceptance of the alienated, condemned ones. Next the Message of Divine Grace, the call to be sons of God, reached the hearts of many and captured them. The Message not only works in their hearts to will, but works powerfully also in their bodies to do, to the extent of ability, the will of God. And it is these that the Apostle declares the Redeemer will present before the Father holy, unblameable.

The transforming work now progresses in their minds, in their hearts, and all the faithful will share in the First or Chief Resurrection—"changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," to perfection on the spirit plane. "We shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." But the Apostle reminds us in the succeeding verse that all this glorious outcome is dependent—it all hangs upon the word if—if we continue in the faith; if we are grounded and settled, and if we be not moved away from the hope which we have received.

The Apostle reminds us that this is not a special, private Message, but the very identical one Message, the one Gospel, the one "faith once delivered to the saints"—and proclaimed for every creature which is under heaven. By this he did not mean to say that the Gospel had been preached in heathen lands. Indeed, although more than eighteen centuries have passed, the Gospel is not yet preached to every creature under heaven. What St. Paul did mean is that the Gospel, which originally was confined to the Jew, was from the days of Cornelius, the first Gentile convert, open to all people of every nationality under heaven—to all who had the hearing ear and appreciative heart. But, alas, how comparatively few are in such attitude of mind as to be appreciative of God's grace! Only the few, "a little flock," have been found, as God foreknew and as Jesus foretold.

The Future Program Different.

But God is interested in our entire race. He did not provide the redemption merely for the saintly ones whom He specially loves and is now drawing. On the contrary, "Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man" (Hebrews ii, 9.) Hence it does not surprise us that God's Plan, which begins with the calling of the saintly few, by no means ends with them. Indeed their calling and election is with a view to the blessing eventually of the non-elect, the unwilling, who now have ears but hear not, and eyes but see not.

These, the Bible tells us, are soon to be dealt with in a different manner. Force is to be used. The power of the Messianic Kingdom will bind Satan for a thousand years and will restrain evil. Divine Power will also let loose all the glorious agencies of Truth, righteousness, light, until the whole earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of God as the waters cover the great deep; and until "none shall need to say to his neighbor, Know thou the Lord, because all shall know Him, from the least of them to the greatest." "In that day the righteous shall flourish . . . instead of the wicked. In that day will I . . .

One man was killed and two were captured by a sheriff's posse when the three, masked, attempted to rob the Citizens Bank of Mammoth Spring, Ark. Lee Burrow, a relative of Otto Burrow, one of the men arrested, was brought to town with a serious wound. He said that Doctor Jones, father of Ben Jones, the dead robber, and Howard Sears, a neighbor, shot him because they thought he had informed the officers of the proposed robbery. Doctor Jones and Sears were arrested. Burrow will probably die.

International complications were narrowly averted at the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchange, in session at Louisville, Ky., when members of the delegation from Winnipeg, Manitoba, noted the absence of British flags among the decorations of the convention hall, and an effort was made to change the name from national to American association. The Cuban contingent allied themselves with the Canadians and the result was to change the name of the organization to the International Association of Real Estate Boards.

One of the cleverest schemes ever devised to keep from working was pulled off by Ed Thompson, serving time in the county jail at Chester, Ky. When Jailer Mullins went to the jail to start the prisoners to work he found Thompson in the same garments that Adam wore, with all his clothes in a tub of water. As no other clothes were to be had, the man got a half holiday.

Three lives were lost, two persons badly injured, seven automobiles destroyed and property valued at $30,000 destroyed in a fire in a garage of the English building at Waycross, Ga. Several firemen had close calls from the falling walls, but none was injured. John Gamble and a young son were sitting on the front porch and had a close call. The fire started from some gasoline which had been pilled on the garage floor.

After battling successfully against the raging waters of the Mississippi river, throughout the months of April and May, holding the levee intact along the entire New Orleans front and with the river stage three feet below the official danger mark there, and eight feet lower than the maximum stage recorded during this flood, Algiers, Wetswego, Crano and McDonoughville, on the west side of the river from New Orleans, are threatened with inundation from the back water from the Hymelia crevasse, 30 miles above New Orleans. Behind McDonoughville and Algiers, a number of homes are under water. The back waters from the break in the river levee at Hymelia is rising rapidly and the residents of these places are experiencing a hard fight to hold the rear protection levees. Large forces of men are at work filling sand bags and raising the protection embankments.

Former Congressman Byrd of Philadelphia, Miss., is dead of congestion of the brain at Hot Springs, Ark., where he had been ill about a week. He went there a month ago, accompanied by his son and daughter. Mr. Byrd was 62 years old. He served in the Fifty-eighth, Fifty-ninth, Sixtieth and Sixty-first congresses. He was a native of Alabama and is survived by a wife and five children.

Hunter Fitzgerald, the three-legged boy of Blackstone, Va., who attained more than a local reputation by reason of his deformity, has had the third member amputated at a Richmond, Va., hospital, and is recovering.

Twenty torpede boat destroyers, the fastest in the navy, are being mobilized at Newport, R. I., to take part in the greatest speed test to which American vessels of their type were ever subjected. The plan calls for an eight-hour full speed run in which twenty destroyers will take part.

Maj. Eli H. Janney, field quartermaster on the staff of Gen. Robert E. Lee during the Civil war, is dead in his eightieth year. Major Janney was the inventor of a car coupler in general use on steam railroads.

More than three score houses were smashed and two persons hurt by a storm at Taylor, Okla.

Failure of the senate and house conferees on congress pension appropriation bill to agree on disposal of various pension agencies has caused a shortage in the June payment of pensioners, and another bill is being sent.

TAFT IS NOMINATED BY PART OF THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

WITH 350 OF THE ROOSEVELT DELEGATES DECLINING TO VOTE, THE PRESIDENT RECEIVED 561 VOTES ON THE FIRST BALLOT.

ROOSEVELT BOLTS TO LEAD NEW "PROGRESSIVE" PARTY

Vice President Sherman Named for Running Mate Without Any Opposition—The President Received 20 More Votes Than Needed to Nominate.

Convention Hall, Chicago.—With nearly 350 of the Roosevelt delegates declining to vote and hastening away at adjournment time, to tender to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt the nomination of a new party, the fifteenth Republican national convention at the end of a long and tumultuous session renominated William Howard Taft of Ohio for president and James Schoolcraft Sherman of New York for vice president.

NOMINATED BY REGULARS.

WILLIAM H. TAFT.

Taft Gets 561 Votes.

President Taft received 561 of the 1,078 votes in the convention, or 21 more than a majority.

The decision of the Roosevelt people, under the direction of their leader, to refrain from voting, left no other candidate near the president. The announcement of the Taft victory was greeted with cheering from his adherents and groans and hisses from the opposition.

When it became absolutely certain that Mr. Taft would be nominated without great difficulty, the leaders in control of the convention decided to give him as a running mate his companion on the ticket in 1908.

All others dropped from the race, and Mr. Sherman was the only candidate regularly placed before the convention. A motion from New Hampshire to make the nomination by acclamation was declared out of order. There were many scattering votes on the roll call.

The convention amid much confusion then adjourned sine die.

Chairman Root announced a call of the roll of the states for nominations for the presidency.

Alabama was passed. Arizon was silent. Down the list silence followed the calling of each state until Ohio was reached. A cheer greeted the state, and Warren G. Harding arose to place President Taft in nomination. Then it was discovered that Iowa had forgotten to nominate Cummins, and Root ordered that the state be called again. Silence greeted the second call, for the Iowans had decided not to nominate Cummins, but to vote for him.

Then Ohio was called again and Harding took the platform, greeted by scattering cheers, to nominate Taft.

When New York was called there had been a murmur of disappointment, for William A. Prendergast sat still in his seat, although he had been expected to nominate Roosevelt.

Taft Is Nominated.

Frequently during his speech, Harding was interrupted by applause and cheers. When, finally, he reached the name "William Howard Taft," floor and galleries burst into life. Hats and handkerchiefs were swung in the air and a steady roll of cheering swept through the hall. In the galleries women as well as men joined in the demonstration, which lasted for 16 minutes.

After seating all contested Taft delegates except those from Texas, the convention came to order again at 2:12 p. m., and took up the Texas cases.

The credentials committee report on Texas followed the report of the national committee, favorable to Taft, and was adopted, district by district, without roll call. The only delegates given Roosevelt were in the Third and Fifteenth Texas districts, both of which the national committee had originaly awarded him.

It was generally understood that with the completion of the organization, the Roosevelt people would declare their position of non-participation in further proceedings of the convention.

The report of the committee on permanent organization, recommending that the temporary list of officers headed by Senator Root, be made permanent, was adopted.

Senator Root came forward amid deafening noise of cheers, whistling, bowing and other signs of approval and disapproval.

The demonstration lasted several minutes, Mr. Root standing, smiling, waiting for the noise to subside.

When at last it became quiet, Mr. Root made a brief speech of thanks. He introduced Henry J. Allen of Kansas to make a statement.

"No Physical Bolt."

Henry J. Allen's speech was a declaration that the Roosevelt people repudiated this convention and its work, and without a physical bolt appealed to the people.

At no time was there an indication of a walkout of Roosevelt delegates. They expressed their revolt by silence.

In the closing moments of the convention, a resolution was passed under the gavel, giving the national committee the power to fill all vacancies and empowering the committee to declare vacant the seat of any members who "refuse to support the nominees of this convention."

Former Representative Hemenway of Indiana introduced the resolution.

Such of the delegates as had not left the hall crowded closely about the platform while the resolutions, announcements and customary routine of the closing hour was gone through with.

Band Plays "Praise God."

At 10:30 Delegate Estabrook of New Hampshire moved that the convention adjourn with delay, and the motion was adopted. The delegates filed out in absolute silence. As the last of the delegates left the hall, the band played, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

Former President Theodore Roosevelt was nominated for president on an Independent ticket, in the dying hours of the Republican national convention in which he had met defeat.

Followers of Colonel Roosevelt gathered in Orchestral hall, less than a mile from the Coliseum, and pledged their support to the former president.

In accepting the nomination Colonel Roosevelt appealed to the people of all sections, regardless of party affiliations, to stand with the founders of the new party, one of whose cardinal principles, he said, was to be "Thou shalt not steal."

The informal nomination of Colonel Roosevelt was said to be chiefly to effect a temporary organization.

The work of organization will be pushed rapidly state by state. At a later time, probably early in August it is intended that a national convention shall be held. Colonel Roosevelt, in accepting the nomination, said he did so on the understanding that he would be willing to step aside if it should be the desire of the new party when organized to select another standard bearer.

Roosevelt Nominated.

The speech nominating Colonel Roosevelt was made by Comptroller William Prendergrast of New York who was to have presented the colonel's name to the convention.

Dean William Draper Lewis of the University of Pennsylvania Law school, who was to make one of the seconding speeches, delivered the address which he had prepared for the Republican convention.

Representatives of 22 states composed the notification committee, which informed Colonel Roosevelt of his nomination and, in a sense, stood as sponsors for the movement.

The committee consisted of Comptroller W. R. Prendergrast of New York; Meyer Lissner of California; former Congressman Richmond Pearson of North Carolina; Frank Knox of Michigan; Matthew Hale of Massachusetts; A. R. Garford of Ohio; David Browning of Kentucky; Everard Bierer, Jr., of Utah; Walter Thompson of Vermont; Judge Oscar R. Hundlet of Alabama; Judge Ben J. N. Lindsey of Colorado; Andrew Rahn of Minnesota; Judge Stevens of Iowa. Judge Lowder of North Dakota; William Allen White of Kansas; John C. Greenway of Arizona; ex-Gov. John Franklin Fort of New Jersey; Col. E. C. Carrington, Maryland; Pearl Wight of Louisiana; Lorenzo Dowe of Washington; Walter Clyde Jones of Illinois and Frank Frantz of Oklahoma.

Hadley Sticks to Taft.

Jefferson City, Mo.—Governor Hadley, on his return, declared his determination not to join Roosevelt's third party movement. "I believe I can render more service to the people as a member of the Republican party than by joining in the formation of a third party," he said. "While I have in no way changed my mind as to the correctness of that for which I have contended, I say that my political party ties will exist in which none will be stronger existing."

Hotels Got $5,000,000.

Chicago.—More than $5,000,000 was expended by delegates, politicians and convention visitors in the last ten days, according to estimates made by Chicago hotel managers. Of this sum it is estimated $3,500,000 was expended for fod, drink and sleeping rooms, the remainder being distributed among the theatres, amusement parks and retail stores. It is estimated that Chicago entertained 200,000 visitors during the convention.

Colonel Stone and Pussy.

The Coliseum was full of oddities outside of politics. A big gray cat put in an appearance shortly after the doors of the Coliseum were opened and mounted to the platform, from where it surveyed proceedings until Sergeant-at-Arms "Bill" Stone stepped on its tail, accidentally. This seemed to annoy pussy and her—or his—wail of arpegance almost filled the hall. It took Colonel Stone several minutes to square things with the offended feline.

Didn't Know What It Was.

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher was condemning at a dinner in Jacksonville an orange grower who had failed.

"The man failed," he said, "through ignorance. He lays the blame on other things, but his ignorance alone is at fault. He is as ignorant of orange farming as the tramp was of industry.

"You've heard of that tramp, perhaps? He wore on his face a sneer of derision and scorn.

"'Work?' he said. 'Work? What is it—an herb?'"

Natural Query.

Gen. F. D. Grant, when discussing military neatness, used often to tell a story about his father.

"My father was talking to General Sherman in his tent one day," he would begin, "when a third general entered, a brigadier notorious for his slovenliness. After the brigadier left my father blew forth a cloud of smoke and said: 'Sherman, I wonder whom that man gets to wear his shirts the first week?'"

It's difficult for the average man to understand why some women are jealous of their husbands.

BURNING ITCH WAS CURED

"I deem it my duty to tell about a cure that the Cuticura Soap and Ointment have made on myself. My trouble began in splotches breaking out right in the edge of my hair on the forehead, and spread over the front part of the top of my head from ear to ear, and over my ears which caused a most fearful burning itch, or eczema.

"For three years I had this terrible breaking out on my forehead and scalp. I tried our family doctor and he failed to cure it. Then I tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and used them for two months with the result of a complete cure. Cuticura Soap and Ointment should have the credit due, and I have advised a lot of people to use them." (Signed) C. D. Tharrington, Creek, N. C., Jan. 26, 1911.

Itching Scalp—Hair Fell Out.

"I will say that I have been suffering with an itching on my scalp for the past few years. My hair fell out in spots all over my head. My scalp started to trouble me with sores, then the sores healed up, and crusts formed on the top. Then the hair fell out and left me three bald spots the shape of a half dollar. I went to more than one doctor, but could not get any relief, so I started to use the Cuticura Remedies. I tried one bar of Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment, and felt relieved right away. Now the bald spots have disappeared, and my hair has grown, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I highly recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all that are suffering with scalp trouble." (Signed) Samuel Stern, 236 Floyd St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 7, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Entirely Practical.

"Son, I hope you are engaged to a practical girl."

"Oh, she's very practical, dad. She drives her own car, and she can take a motor apart as well as any expert in the business."

GOMPERS GUILTY COURT CONTEMPT

SENTENCES ON LABOR LEADERS AGAIN IMPOSED—WILL APPEAL.

THE COURT'S SENTENCE

Charge Violation of Injunction in the Famous Buck Stove and Range Case.

Washington. — Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison and John Mitchell, labor leaders, were held guilty of contempt of court by the supreme court of the District of Columbia, in connection with the court's injunction in the Buck Stove and Range boycott case.

Justice Wright sentenced Gompers to one year, the same as upon his previous conviction, and sentenced Morrison to nine months. Morrison's sentence, under the first conviction, was nine months.

John Mitchell was not present and sentence upon him was deferred. His first sentence was six months.

Bondsmen were on hand and attorneys for the labor men gave notice of an intention to file an appeal to have the supreme court review the judgment. In its previous review of the case the s preme court reversed the conviction on the ground the contempt proceedings had been improperly instituted. New proceedings were at once begun.

The sentences under the first conviction were Gompers one year; Morrison nine months; Mitchell six months. The charge was that the three men as officers of the American Federation of Labor, through the organization's official publication, had disregarded Justice Gould's injunction against the publication of the Buck Stove and Range company's name in its boycott list.

After Gompers had been sentenced he attacked the decision, declaring that while Justice Wright lives in seclusion, his decision shows a mental concept of more than two centuries when the workingman was a serf. Information just came to me that the decision was completed more than a month ago, but withheld until the close of the Chicago national convention. If true the inference is obvious, he said.

In passing sentence on President Gompers, the court said:

"For the ringleader and chief offender the duty of the court, is to be ascertained by its obligations to administer the justice of the land 'without respect to persons,' requires it in determining a penalty appropriate for this, the most dangerous and destructive of contempts, at least to parallel the extreme penalty which is fixed by good precedents."

After a lengthy recital of the functions of the law and judicial power the opinion concludes:

"The evidence shows for these respondents an assiduous and persistent effort to undermine the supremacy of the law by undertaking insiduously to destroy the confidence of the people in the integrity of the tribunals which maintain it, by inoculating the minds of their followers and the people with a virus of mischievous falsehoods and misrepresentations concerning the court and judges, seeking and hopeful that the support of the people might be withdrawn from these tribunals and by this means their power undone, their judgment rendered value less and forceless.

"The defendants are here at the court bar to answer; they have been afforded full opportunity to hear the evidence against them and to say what, if any, reasons can exist against their punishment. Every part of their punishment; every part of their response, for they offer no defense, is measured by the words of their leader, Gompers: 'The things I am charged with, I do. Go to h— with your injunctions.'"

Evelyn Fears Her Husband.

White Plain, N. Y.—Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw still fears that if her husband gets out of Matteawan he will try to kill her, she testified at the hearing of Harry K. "I am afraid that if Thaw is released he will kill me as he has threatened to do," she volunteered during examination by counsel for Thaw.

Sir George White Dies in London.

London.—Field Marshal Sir George Stuart White, governor of Chelsea hospital, London's home for aged soldiers, and one of the most distinguished soldiers in the British army, died in his seventy-seventh year. It was during the Afghan war in 1879-80, however, that he made his fame and won the real distinction of the Victoria Cross for valor.

DOCTOR'S SHIFT.
Now Gets Along Without It.

A physician says: "Until last fall I used to eat meat for my breakfast and suffered with indigestion until the meat had passed from the stomach.

"Last fall I began the use of Grape-Nuts for breakfast and very soon found I could do without meat, for my body got all the nourishment necessary from the Grape-Nuts and since then I have not had any indigestion and am feeling better and have increased in weight.

"Since finding the benefit I derived from Grape-Nuts I have prescribed the food for all my patients suffering from indigestion or over-feeding and also for those recovering from disease where I want a food easy to take and certain to digest and which will not overtax the stomach.

"I always find the results I look for when I prescribe Grape-Nuts. For ethical reasons please omit my name." Name given by mail by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The reason for the wonderful amount of nutriment, and the easy digestion of Grape-Nuts is not hard to find.

In the first place, the starchy part of the wheat and barley goes through various processes of cooking, to perfectly change the starch into dextrose or grape-sugar, in which state it is ready to be easily absorbed by the blood.

The parts in the wheat and barley which Nature can make use of for rebuilding brain and nerve centers are retained in this remarkable food, and thus the human body is supplied with the powerful strength producers, so easily noticed after one has eaten Grape-Nuts each day for a week or ten days.

"There's a reason" and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

J. O. THOMPSON WIPES HIS BROW WITH BANDANNA.

BIRMINGHAM MAN IS NOW ALTOGETHER PROGRESSIVE REPUBLICAN

Birmingham, Ala., June 24.—"Just say I'm wiping my brow with a bandanna, altogether," said Jos. O. Thompson, Roosevelt leader in Alabama, Monday, regarding the political situation. "I'm a progressive now"

"I've voted the republican ticket all my life, but last week I witnessed the death of the republican party and the birth of a new.

"Frankly, I'm no longer a republican. As I said, I'm a progressive now."

Mr. Thompson expressed the belief that Roosevelt would carry every Northern state, save three or four. He says sentiment in favor of progressivism is especially pronounced in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Massachusettes.—Advertiser.

"Clean Up the Bowels and Keep Them Clean"

There are many remedies to be had for constipation, but the difficulty is to procure one that acts without violence. A remedy that does not perform by force what should be accomplished by persuasion is Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets. After using them, Mrs. N. A. Waddell, 315 Washington St., Waco, Tex., says:

"Almost all my life I have been troubled with constipation, and have tried many remedies, all of which seemed to cause pain without giving much relief. I finally tried Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets and found them excellent. Their action is pleasant and mild, and their chocolate taste makes them easy to take. I am more than glad to recommend them."

"Clean up the bowels and keep them clean," is the advice of all physicians, because they realize the danger resulting from habitual constipation. Do not delay too long, but begin proper curative measures.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are a new remedy for this old complaint, and a great improvement over the cathartics you have been using in the past. They taste like candy and work like a charm. A trial will convince you.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory after trial, return the box to your druggist and he will return your money.

MISS FOSTER DIES

MISS CLIFFIE FOSTER DIES AT WILLIAMSON FAULK INFIRMARY.

The friends of Miss Cliffie Foster were shocked to learn of her death, which occurred at the Williamson Faulk Infirmary Saturday morning at 3 o'clock. She was the third daughter of Mr. Guy Foster, one of Tuscaloosa's most prominent citizens, and was a girl of unusual mental ability. She graduated at the age of seventeen at the Central College and has been teaching with great success in the public schools since. The past session she held a responsible position in the faculty of the Wetumpka public school and for some time she had engaged in literary work and a number of splendid articles have appeared recently in magazines as the reward of her fertile brain and brilliancy.

Miss Foster was just 20 years of age and underwent a slight operation a week ago and was considered out of danger when lockjaw developed and her death comes as a distinct shock to her multitude of friends and relatives.

The funeral was held Sunday morning from the residence on Greensboro Avenue, Dr. L. O. Dawson officiating; interment took place at Greenwood cemetery.—(Birmingham Age Hearald.)

It is with distinct regret to the many friends of Miss Foster to hear of her untimely death.

Miss Foster will be pleasantly remembered here as the charming and much admired guest of Miss Lurline Harper, and was one of the bridesmaids at the Johnson-Harper wedding last December.

Perhaps no more popular young lady ever graced Clanton's visiting list, and her many friends here deeply sympathize with her family in their sad bereavement.

Up to time we go to press nothing definite has been done in the Baltimore convention, tho' it is expected that a nomination will be made during the day. Contrary to the usual rule nominations are to be made before the platform is adopted. The unit rule has been abrogated, which will doubtless change the votes of a number of delegates.

Is Clanton to make no effort whatever to secure the building of the railroad from the Coosa river to some point on the L. & N? It can be secured for Clanton if action is taken—but if we act as we have in other things (in a vast majority of things) it will go to our more enterprising neighbor, LOMAX.

It is stated upon what seems to be good authority that Teddy, he of the bandanna, has offered the vice-presidency to John Mitchell of the mine workers' union. Teddy's a schemer for getting votes, but he'll scarcely pull the wool over J. Mitchell's eyes.

Mr. W. E. Maddox received a telegram Wednesday night informing him that his brother-in-law, Mr. H. M. Willis, of Guntown, Miss., had been killed during the day by lightning.

DR. SIMMONS Squaw Vine Wine

A Palatable Medicine especially prepared to relieve and cure the diseases which affect women

This excellent medicine is not only successful in conquering the painful and prostrating diseases that attack the female generative system but it is exceptionally pleasant to take. The usual rule that the nastier the medicine the more effective it is, is reversed in the case of Squaw Vine Wine. It is one of the pleasantest of medicines. The fresh juice of a well ripened sweet orange is not more agreeable. It is indeed a happy combination of sweet herbs compounded with just enough spirits to keep it fresh and active in its medicinal effect. Poor, tired mothers, worn out with the cares of a family and household, and suffering from those distressing aches, bearing down pains and nervousness which women only know, revive wonderfully under its strengthening and exhilirating influence. It eases pain, strengthens weakened parts, corrects irregularities, builds up a strong, vigorous body, restores brightness to the eye and color to the cheeks.

FIND DISCREPANCIES IN CHILTON COUNTY

MINOR AMOUNTS INVOLVED IN IRREGULARITIES POINTED OUT BY EXAMINER.

Montgomery, June 21.—(Special.) Minor discrepancies in the accounts of officials of Chilton county have been found by Examiner of Public Accounts W. F. Wilkinson, according to reports filed with Judge W. W. Pearson of Montgomery, judge of the Fifteenth judicial circuit, and Governor O'Neal

The report of the examiner covers a period beginning July 1, 1912, and ending January 1, 1912.

According to the report, J. W. Littlejohn, county treasurer, is charged with $345 for paying illegal warrants, which in the opinion of the attorney general, were not authorized by law. In all other respects the examiner found the books of the county treasurer correct.

J. S. Catts, ex-sheriff of Chilton county, is charged with $291.25 for warrants which were illegally drawn in his favor for paying detective service. The examiner quotes an opinion of the attorney general to the effect that there is no authority for the expenditure of the county's funds for such purposes. The warrants in question were paid for working up cases violating prohibition laws.

The examiner charges Sam W. Collins, ex-clerk of the circuit court, with $336 for the non-payment of fines collected by him and not paid over to the county treasurer.

Discrepancies in the accounts of J. N. Dennis, tax collector, to the amount of $108 were found by Examiner Wilkinson, which resulted from fees which were not charged against him by the county treasurer. Mr. Dennis paid this amount as soon as it was called to his attention and the examiner exonerates him from all blame.

W. M. Adams, ex-solicitor, is charged with $131.05 for securing service in whiskey cases, which was an illegal allowance from the county fund.

Other small amounts are charged against L. H. Reynolds, ex-judge of probate, in the sum of $3, which was paid, and M. D. Lashee, clerk of the circuit court, $5.

The books of the following officials were found to be correct: L. Pounds, tax assessor; J. W. Moore, superintendent of education; B. L. Jones, Sheriff, and E. Deason, present probate judge.

Thorsby Institute Notes.

The closing exercises of Thorsby Institute occurred on Thursday and Friday nights, June 6th and 7th. The baccalaureate sermon was preached on Thursday night by Rev. George Eaves, D., of Birmingham. It was an earnest appeal for such an interpretation of the Christian life as should help to bring the kingdom of brotherhood of good will among men. The graduates of our schools should be the leaders in all movements for the betterment of social conditions.

The graduating exercises of the class of 1912 from the High School course occurred on Friday night. The music of the evening was furnished by the Thorsby band, and was well rendered. The opening prayer was offered by Rev. J. J. Richards. Miss Mabel A. Cox, in her essay on "What Prominent American Women Have Done," sketched the achievements of some of the greatest names among America's Women. Mr. Philip W. Horn, in his essay on "The Marvels of Modern Science," told something of the great achievements of recent years in the application of scientific knowledge. Miss Hilda S. Johnson, under the title, "When Day Comes On, the Stars Appear." showed how, in the times in the world's history when all seemed dark, the characters of noble men and women had come out like stars in the night. The essays all showed much thought and careful preparation, and reflected a great deal of credit on those who presented them.

The Commencement address was delivered by Rev. S. H. Herbert, the newly elected principal, on the subject, "Education and Efficient Citizenship." The speaker empasized the need of an education that would build up health and not undermine it, that should prepare students to co-operate intelligently with all measures for better health of the community and the State, that should create a wholesome respect for honest work, that should develop the ability to think clearly and independently on all questions, that should fit for the best enjoyment of life, and that should develop characters that will stand firmly for the right in all times of temptation. The product of such an education should be a citizen who is qualified and ready to make his life count for the best welfare of the country, not only in the present, but for coming generations.

Rev. Frank E. Jenkins, D. D., of Demorest, Ga., President of the Board of Trustees, presented to the three graduates, Miss Anderson, Miss Swan and Mr. Horn, the diplomas showing completion of the High School course of Thorsby Institute.

Rev. E. W. Butler then presented the honor prize, for the best record in school work during the year. The prize this year was evenly divided between Miss Thora Gerald and Mr. J. Dalton Weldon. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. M. Trosper.

Principal S. H. Herbert is spending the summer in Thorsby, getting plans under way for next year's work. Two lines along which especial effort will be made the coming year are the providing of work in order that worthy young people who are in earnest in their desire for a better education, but have not funds to pay for it in full, may have an opportunity to earn a part of their expenses, and the providing of special classes adapted to the needs of those who have reached mature years with little or no schooling. Quite a number of important repairs and improvements are to be made on the school property during the summer, and several important additions will be made to the laboratory equipment for scientific work. The new catalogee of the school will be out in a few days.

WEDDING ON TUESDAY

A wedding of much interest in Riderville was solemnized Tuesday, June 18th, at 2:30 o'clock at the church, when Mr. W. Henry Duncan and Miss Dixie Griffin were united in marriage by Rev. Bagby.

The House was beautifully decorated for the occasion with ferns and other flowers.

Mrs. Mattison presided at the organ. As the strains of the wedding marcn were heard Miss Willie Mae Parnell, Mr. C. H. Bowen, Miss Lena Johnson and Mr. Joe Raspberry took their places near the altar. The Bridesmaids wore lovely white embroidered voil dresses with black hats; each of them carried a bunch of roses.

The groom and his best man, Mr. John R. Rider, then proceeded to the altar and awaited the bride.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Tina Gentry as matron of honor, who wore a handsome lavender satin gown, trimmed with shadow lace.

The bride wore a lovely traveling suit, with hat and shoes to match; she carried a shower boquet of bride's roses.

THE "PROGRESSIVE" PARTY DEDICATED

THE BANDANNA HANDKERCHIEF ADOPTED AS "ROOSEVELT BATTLE FLAG."

Chicago, June 23.—The "progressive" party born last night was dedicated today. In the presence of 600 men, some of them recognized leaders of the movement, others merely onlookers, the first formal step was taken. Gov. Hiram Johnson of California was empowered to appoint a committee of seven members to confer with Colonel Roosevelt and formulate a plan of action.

"Here is the birth of a new party," said Governor Johnson, when this was done.

"The movement is going steadily ahead," said James R. Garfield, of Ohio. "Those who think this is a flash in the pan are mistaken."

In the opinion of the leaders the new party enters the field with a formidable equipment. The leaders, however, said that as to the men who took a conspicuous part in the campaign for Colonel Roosevelt's nomination each must speak for himself.

HADLEY'S ATTITUDE UNKNOWN

The attitude of Governor Hadley of Missouri was the chief point of discussion along this line. The governor left town without waiting to declare himself.

No definite idea of the plan to be followed could be obtained and it was said several weeks may elapse before the programme is decided upon. Governor Johnson, in the meantime, will act as field marshal and, in co-operation with Colonel Roosevelt, will decide upon the membership of the committee of seven and guide the preliminary work of the organization. Colonel Roosevelt will leave for Oyster Bay tomorrow afternoon and Governor Johnson for California, but they will keep in communication with each other.

Today's meeting was held in the headquarters of the national Roosevelt committee, under the direction of the most prominent Roosevelt supporters who had not left town. Seated at a table with Governor Johnson were Mr. Garfield, Gifford Pinchot, Governor Stubbs of Kansas, Medill McCormick of Chicago and Senator Clapp of Minnesota.

Scattered through the hall were a large number of Roosevelt delegates to the republican national convention, as well as some of the "steam rolled" delegates to whom seats were refused. It was impossible to ascertain how large a proportion of the full Roosevelt strength of the convention was represented, although it was said that nearly every state which sent Roosevelt delegates to Chicago had its share of men there.

BANDANNA IS BATTLE FLAG

The bandanna handkerchief was adopted as the "Roosevelt battle flag."

Most of the delegates were wearing bandannas tied around their arms and others were distributing them by the hundreds to the crowd. The bandanna, it was explained, stands for the plain people who ordinarily use them.

"We're all plain people here and this is a movement of the plain people," said one of the delegates.

Colonel Roosevelt gave his sanction to the "battle flag" by appearing last night with one in his hand, which he waved to the crowd on the street. His daughter, Mrs. Longworth, wore a bandanna on her hat.

"I am not acting as the leader of this movement," said Governor Johnson, when the meeting of delegates had been called to order.

"The active leader must be a man from a more accessible state than California. I am merely acting as chairman of this meeting at which we are to begin on the road which leads to political freedom."

Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver, a democrat, arose.

"Surely there can be no more solemn occasion than this one," he said. "We are beginning on Sunday a great new movement. I believe that we should begin it by asking the guidance of Him for whom we are here."

W. H. Mixon of Selma, a negro clergyman and a Roosevelt delegate, who was excluded from the republican convention, began to recite the psalm which begins:

"The Lord is my shepherd." The delegates arose and repeated it with him. A prayer by Rev. Mixon followed. Some one began to sing "America," and in a moment the others were singing. The meeting was in contrast to the uproarious ones which had been held in the same room while the convention was in session. There was no cheering or hand-clapping, no cry of "eat 'em alive, Teddy." The solemnity of the occasion which was believed to signalize the birth of the new party pressed itself upon the gathering.

A hush fell over the crowd. broken only by the voices of the speakers.

Governor Johnson, in his opening address, appealed to the delegates to stay in the fight they had begun.—Age-Herald.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

DEFEATED LAST WEEK IN CHICAGO CONVENTION

THIRD PARTY TO BE ORGANIZED IN ALABAMA

THOMPSON MAKES THIS ANNOUNCEMENT ON RETURN FROM CHICAGO.

Declaring that the new third party will organize in the state of Alabama at a meeting or state convention to be held probably in Birmingham shortly after the Baltimore convention adjourns, Joseph O. Thompson, United States collector of internal revenue, and the leading progressive republican of the state, returned today from Chicago, where he has been attending what he terms "the death of one political party and the birth of another at the same time."

Mr. Thompson was for two terms internal revenue collector under ex-President Roosevelt's administration, and continued in office under President Taft. From the beginning of the big split in the republican party, Mr. Thompson has fought in the Roosevelt ranks with Judge Oscar Hundley, also of Birmingham. Both Mr. Hundley and Mr. Thompson went to Chicago, and waged a warm fight over the Ninth Alabama district contests in the republican convention. Both of them joined the Roosevelt forces in the movement for a new party and Mr. Thompson stated today that the new party will not bear the name republican but will be known as the "Progressive party." Judge Hundley is expected back from Chicago this afternoon. Mr. Thompson left the city today for his home in Montgomery, Ala., where he will remain for several weeks. At the conclusion of the Baltimore convention the Alabama leaders of the progressive party will immediately start a movement looking to a strong organization.

In regard to the progressive party and the republican split Mr. Thompson had the following to say today: "It is indeed interesting to have witnessed the funeral of one party and the birth of another at the same time. I feel that Roosevelt will sweep the country next November. The progressive spirit among the delegates from the east was just as strong at Chicago as among those from the west and the easterners were just as ready for the new party. The nomination at the Coliseum was made by a majority of 21 after Roosevelt withdrew from the convention. I had several conferences with Colonel Roosevelt and during one of them just before leaving Chicago, he seemed more cheerful than I have ever seen him.

When the proceedings of the Chicago convention are laid bare in the progressive campaign there is no doubt but that Roosevelt will receive three-fourths of the republican vote and a large part of the democratic vote both in the south and the north.

"An organization of the progressive party will be perfected in Alabama, but as yet no definite plans have been decided upon, pending the outcome of the democratic convention at Baltimore. A meeting for the purpose of organizing will not be held until after the Baltimore convention, but then a call will be issued to all electors of the state, regardless of past political affiliations, will be made to convene in one of the large cities, probably Birmingham.

The name of the new party will not be republican, but "Progressive party." It has not been finally decided yet where the national convention of the new party will be held. The nomination of Roosevelt by the progressives Saturday in Chicago is merely tentative, but there is no doubt that it will be ratified by the convention. The action of the temporary meeting was in keeping with Mr. Roosevelt's wishes in regard to the matter."—Ledger.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transform brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia.

Entering the main room, he led her gently to one of the chairs near the table and immediately thereafter lighted the fire which he had taken the precaution to lay before his departure it had been dark in the cabin, but the fire soon filled it with glorious light. She watched him at his task and as he rose from the hearth questioned him:

"Now tell me," she began, "you found—"

"First your supper, and then the story," he answered, turning toward the door of the other room.

"No," pleaded the girl, "can't you see that nothing is of any importance to me but the story? Did you find the camp?"

"I found the place where it had been."

"Where it had been!"

"There wasn't a single vestige of it left. That whole pocket, I knew it well, had been swept clean by the flood."

"But Kirkby, and Mrs. Maitland and—"

"They weren't there."

"Did you search for them?"

"Certainly."

"But they can't have been drowned," she exclaimed piteously.

"Of course not," he began reassuringly. "Kirkby is a veteran of these mountains and—"

"But do you know him?" queried the girl in great surprise.

"I did once," said the man, flushing darkly at his admission. "I haven't seen him for five years."

So that was the measure of his isolation, thought the woman, keen for the slightest evidence as to her companion's history, of which, by the way, he meant to tell her nothing.

"Well?" she asked, breaking the pause.

"Kirkby would certainly see the cloud burst coming and he would take the people with him in the camp up on the hogback near it. It is far above the flood line; they would be quite safe there."

"And did you look for them there?"

"I did. The trail had been washed out, but I scrambled up and found undisputed evidence that my surmise was correct. I haven't a doubt that all who were in the camp were saved."

"Thank God for that," said the girl, greatly relieved and comforted by his reassuring words. "And Robert Maitland and the rest on the mountain, what do you think of them?"

"I am sure that they must have escaped, too. I don't think any of them have suffered more than a thorough drenching in the downpour and that they are all safe and perhaps on their way to the settlements now."

"But they wouldn't go back without searching for me, would they?" cried the girl.

"Certainly not. I suppose they are searching for you now."

"Well then—"

"Wait," said the man. "You started down the canon, you told everybody you were going that way. They naturally searched in that direction, they hadn't the faintest idea that you were going up the river.

"No," admitted Enid, "that is true. I did not tell anyone. I didn't dream of going up the canon when I started out in the morning, it was the result of a sudden impulse."

"God bless that—" burst out the man, and then he checked himself, flushing again darkly.

What had he been about to say? The question flashed across his own mind and into the woman's mind at the same time when she heard the incompleted sentence; but she, too, checked this question that rose to her lips.

"This is the way I figure it," continued the man hurriedly to cover up his confusion. "They [illegible] themselves alone in these mountains, which, save for me, they [illegible]; they believe you to have gone down the canon. Kirkby with Mrs. Maitland and the others waited on the ridge until Mr. Maitland and his party joined them. They couldn't have saved very much to eat or wear from the camp, they were miles from a settlement; they probably divided into two parties, the larger with the woman and children, started for home, the second went down the canon searching for your dead body!"

"And had it not been for you," cried the girl, impulsively, "they had found it."

"God permitted me to be of service to you," answered the man, simply. "I can follow their speculations exactly; up or down, they believed you to have been in the canon when the cloud burst, therefore there was only one place and one direction to search for you."

"And that was?"

"Down the canon?"

"What did you do then?"

"I went down the canon myself. I think I saw evidence that some one had preceded me, too."

"Did you overtake them?"

"Certainly not, they traveled as rapidly as I; they must have started early in the morning and they had several hours the advantage of me."

"But they must have stopped somewhere for the night and—"

"Yes," answered the man; "if I had only myself to consider, I should have pressed on through the night and overtaken them when they camped."

"Only yourself?"

"You made me promise to return here by nightfall. I don't know whether I should have obeyed you or not. I kept on as long as I dared and still leave myself time to get back to you by dark."

She had no idea of the desperate speed he had made to reach her while it was still daylight.

"If you hadn't come when you did, I should have died," cried the girl impetuously. "You did perfectly right. I don't think I am a coward; I hope not. I never was afraid before, but—"

"Don't apologize or explain to me, it's not necessary; I understand everything you feel. It was only because I had given you my word to be back by sunset that I left off following their trail. I was afraid that you might think me dead or that something had happened and—"

"I should, I did," admitted the girl. "It wasn't so bad during the day time, but when the sun went down and you did not come I began to imagine everything. I saw myself left alone here in these mountains, helpless, wounded, without a human being to speak to. I could not bear it."

"But I have been here alone for five years," said the man grimly.

"That's different. I don't know why you have chosen solitude, but I—"

"You are a woman," returned the other gently, "and you have suffered, that accounts for everything."

"Thank you," said Enid, gratefully. "And I am so glad you came back to me."

"Back to you," reiterated the man, and then he stopped. If he had allowed his heart to speak he would have said, Back to you from the very ends of the world. "But I want you to believe that I honestly did not leave the trail until the ultimate moment," he added.

"I do believe it;" she extended her hand to him. "You have been very good to me, I trust you absolutely."

And for the second time he took that graceful, dainty, aristocratic hand in his own larger, stronger, firmer grasp. His face flushed again; under other circumstances and in other days perhaps he might have kissed that hand. As it was he only held it for a moment and then gently released it.

"And you think they are searching for me?" she asked.

"I know it. I am sure of what I myself would do for one I love—I loved, I mean, and they—"

"And they will find me?"

The man shook his head.

"I am afraid they will be convinced that you have gone down with the flood. Didn't you have a cap or—"

"Yes," said the woman, "and a sweater. The bear you shot covered the sweater with blood. I could not put it on again."

As she spoke she flushed a glorious crimson at the remembrance of that meeting, but the man was looking away with studied care. She thanked him in her heart for such generous and kindly consideration.

"They will have gone down the stream with the rest, and it's just possible that the searchers may find them, the body of the bear, too. This river ends in a deep mountain lake and I think it is going to snow; it will be frozen hard tomorrow."

"And they will think me there?"

"I am afraid so."

"And they won't come up here?"

"It is scarcely possible."

"Oh!" exclaimed the woman, faintly at the dire possibility that she might not be found.

"I took an empty bottle with me," said the man, breaking the silence, "in which I had enclosed a paper saying that you were here and safe, save for your wounded foot, and giving direction how to reach the place. I built a cairn of rocks in a sheltered nook in the valley where your camp had been pitched and left the tightly corked bottle wedged on top of it. If they return to the camp they could scarcely fail to see it."

"But if they don't go back there."

"Well, it was just a chance."

"And if they don't find me?"

"You will have to stay here for a while; until your foot gets well enough to travel, anyway," returned the man, evasively.

"But winter is coming on; you said the lake would freeze tonight and if it snows?"

"It will snow."

The woman stared at him appalled.

"And in that case—"

"I am afraid," was the slow reply, "that you will have to stay here."

He hesitated in the face of her white, still face—"all winter," he added, desperately.

"My God," exclaimed the girl, "alone, with you?"

"Miss Maitland," said the man, resolutely, "I might as well tell you the truth. I can make my way to the settlements now or later, but it will be a journey of perhaps a week. There will be no danger to me, but you will have to stay here. You could not go with me. If I am any judge you couldn't possibly use your foot for a mountain journey for at least three weeks, and by that time we shall be snowed in as effectually as if we were within the arctic circle. But if you will let me go alone to the settlement I can bring back your uncle, a woman to keep you company, before the trails are impassible. Or enough men to make it practicable to take you through the canons and down the trails to your home again. I could not do that alone even if you were well, in the depth of winter."

The girl shook her head stubbornly.

"A week alone in these mountains and I should be mad," she said decisively. "It isn't to be thought of."

"It must be thought of," urged the man. "You don't understand. It is either that or spend the winter here with me."

The woman looked at him steadily.

"And what have I to fear from you?" she asked.

"Nothing, nothing, as God is my witness," protested the other; "but the world!"

"The world," said the woman reflectively. "I don't mean to say that it means nothing to me, but it has never enough for what it would take now." She came to her decision swiftly. "There is no help for it," she continued, "we are marooned"—she smiled faintly as she used the old word of tropic island and southern sea—"together. You have shown me that you are a man and a gentleman. In God and you I put my trust. When my foot gets well, if you can teach me to walk on snow shoes and it is possible to get through the passes, we will try to get back; if not, we must wait."

"The decision is yours," said the man, "and yet I feel that I ought to point out to you how—"

"I see all that you see," she interrupted. "I know what is in your mind. It is entirely clear to me. We can do nothing else."

"So be it. You need have no apprehension as to your material comfort; I have lived in these mountains for a long time. I am prepared for any emergency. I pass my time in the summer getting ready for the winter. There is a cave, or recess rather, behind the house which, as you see, is built against the rock wall, and it is filled with wood enough to keep us warm for two or three winters; I have an ample supply of provision and clothing for my own needs. You will need something warmer than that you wear," he continued.

"Have you needle, thread and cloth?" she asked.

"Everything," was the prompt answer.

"Then I shall not suffer."

"Are you that wonder of wonders," asked the man, smiling lightly, "an educated woman who knows how to sew?"

"It is a tradition in Philadelphia," answered the girl, "that her daughters should be expert needlewomen."

"Oh, you are from Philadelphia."

"Yes, and you?"

She threw the question at him so deftly and so quickly that she caught him unaware and off his guard a second time within the hour.

"Baltimore," he answered before he thought, and then bit his lip. He had determined to vouchsafe her no information regarding himself, and here she had surprised him into an admission in the first blush of their acquaintance, and she knew that she had triumphed for she smiled in recognition of it.

She tried another tack.

"Mr. Newbold," she began at a venture, and as it was five years since he had heard that name, his surprise at her knowledge, which after all was very simple, betrayed him a third time. "We are like stories I have read, people who have been cast away on desert islands and—"

"Yes," said the man, "but no castaways that I have ever read of have been so bountifully provided with everything necessary to the comfort of [illegible] life. I told you, I looked [illegible] for your material welfare, and even your mind need not stagnate."

"I have looked at your books already," said the woman, answering his glance.

This was where she had found his name, he realized.

"You will have this room for your own use and I will take the other for mine," he continued.

"I am loath to dispossess you."

"I shall be quite comfortable there, and this shall be your room exclusively except when you bid me enter, as when I bring you your meals. I shall hold it inviolate."

"But," said the woman, "there must be an equal division of labor. I must do my share."

"There isn't much to do in the winter except to take care of the burros, keep up the fire and prepare what we have to eat."

"I am afraid I should be unequal to outdoor work, but in the rest I must do my part."

He recognized at once that idleness would be irksome.

"So you shall," he assented heartily, "when your foot is well enough to make you an efficient member of our little society."

"Thank you, and now—"

"Is there anything else before I get supper?"

"You think there is no hope of their searching for me here?"

The man shook his head.

"If James Armstrong had been in the party," she said reflectively, "I am sure he would never have given up."

"And who is James Armstrong, may I ask?" burst forth the other bluntly.

"Why he—I—he is a friend of my uncle and an—acquaintance of my own."

"Oh," said the man shortly and gloomily, as he turned away.

Enid Maitland had been very brave in his presence, but when he went out she put her head down on her arms on the table and cried softly to herself. Was ever a woman in such a predicament, thrown into the arms of a man who had established every conceivable claim upon her gratitude, forced to live with him shut up in a two-room log cabin upon a lonely mountain range, surrounded by lofty and inaccessible peaks, pierced by terrific gorges soon to be impassable from the snows? She had read many stories of castaways, from Charles Reade's famous "Foul Play" down to more modern instances, but in those cases there had always been an island comparatively large over which to reign with privacy, seclusion, opportunity for withdrawal; bright heavens, balmy breezes, idyllic conditions. Here were two uplifted from the earth upon a sky-piercing mountain. They would have had more range of action and more liberty of motion if they had been upon a derelict in the ocean.

And she realized at the same time that in all those stories the two castaways always loved each other. Would it be so with them? Was it so? And again the hot flame within outvied the fire of the hearth as the blood rushed to the smooth surface of her cheek again.

What would her father say if he could know her position, what would the world say, and above all what would Armstrong say. It cannot be denied that her thoughts were terribly and overwhelmingly dismayed, and yet that despair was not without a certain relief. No man had ever so interested her as this one. What was the mystery of his life, why was he there, what had he meant when he had blessed the idle impulse that had sent her into his arms?

Her heart throbbed again. She lifted her face from her hands and dried her tears, a warm glow stole over her and once again not altogether from the fire. Who and what was this man? Who was that woman whose picture he had taken from her? Well, she would have time to find out. And meantime the world outside could think and do what it pleased. She sat staring into the fire light, seeing pictures there, dreaming dreams. She was as lovely as an angel to the man when he came back into the room.

"And Who Is James Armstrong?"

CHAPTER XIV.

The Woman's Heart.

That upper earth on which they lived was covered with a thick blanket of snow. The lakes and pools were frozen from shore to shore. The mountain brooks, if they flowed at all, ran under thick arches of ice. The deepest canons were well nigh impassible from huge drifts that sometimes almost rose level with the tops of the walls. In every sheltered spot great banks of white were massed. The spreading branches of the tall pine trees in the valleys drooped under heavy burdens of snow. Only here and there sharp gaunt peaks were swept clean by the fierce winter winds and thrust themselves upward in icy air, naked and bare. The cold was polar in its bitter intensity.

The little shelf or plateau jutting out from the mountain side upon which the lonely cabin stood was sheltered from the prevailing winds, but the house itself was almost covered with the drifts. The constant fire roaring up the huge stone chimney had melted some of the snow at the top and it had run down the slanting roof and formed huge icicles on what had been the eaves of the house. The man had cut away the drifts from doors and windows for light and liberty. At first every stormy night would fill his laborious clearings with drifting snow, but as it became packed down and frozen solid he was able to keep his various ways open without a great deal of difficulty. A little work every morning and evening sufficed.

Every day he had to go down the mountain stairway to the bottom of the pocket to feed and water the burros. What was a quick and simple task in milder, warmer seasons sometimes took him a half a day under the present rigorous conditions. And the woman never saw him start out in the storm without a sinking heart and grave apprehension. On his return to the cabin half frozen, almost spent and exhausted, she ever welcomed him with eager gratitude and satisfaction which would shine in her eyes, throb in her heart and tremble upon her lips, control it as she might. And he thought it was well worth all the trouble and hardships of his task to be so greeted when he came back to her.

Winter had set in unusually early and with unprecedented severity. Any kind of winter in the mountains would have amazed the girl, but even the man with his larger experience declared he had never before known such sharp and sudden cold, or such deep and lasting snows. His daily records had never shown such low temperatures nor had his observation ever noted such wild and furious storms as raged then and there. It seemed as if Nature were in a conspiracy to seal up the mountains and all they contained, to make ingress and egress alike impossible.

A month had elapsed and Enid's foot was now quite well. The man had managed to sew up her boot where the knife had cut it and although the job was a clumsy one the result was a usable shoe. It is astonishing the comfort she took when she first put it on and discarded for good the shapeless woolen stocking which had covered the clumsy bandage happily no longer necessary. Although the torn and bruised member had healed and she could use it with care, her foot was still very tender and capable of sustaining no violent or long continued strain. Of necessity she had been largely confined to the house, but whenever it had been possible he had wrapped her in his great bear skin coat and had helped her out to the edge of the cliff for a breath of fresh air.

Sometimes he would leave her there alone, would perhaps have left her alone there always had she not imperiously required his company.

Insensibly she had acquired the habit—not a difficult one for a woman to fall into—of taking the lead in the small affairs of their circumscribed existence, and he had acquiesced in her dominance without hesitation or remonstrance. It was she who ordered their daily walk and conversation. Her wishes were consulted about everything; to be sure no great range of choice was allowed them, no liberty of action or freedom in the constraints with which nature bound them, but whenever there was any selection she made it.

The man yielded everything for her and yet he did it without in any way derogating from his self-respect or without surrendering his natural independence. The woman instinctively realized that in any great crisis in any large matter, the determination of which would naturally effect their present or their future, their happiness, welfare life, he would assert himself, and his assertion would be unquestioned and unquestionable by her.

There was a delightful satisfaction to the woman in the whole situation. She had a woman's desire to lead him in the smaller things in life, and yet craved the woman's consciousness that in the great emergencies she would be led, in the great battles she would be fought for, in the great dangers she would be protected, in the great perils she would be saved. There was rest, comfort, joy and satisfaction in these thoughts.

The strength of the man she sheltered was estimate of her own power and charm. There was a great, powerful, voiceless, unconscious flattery in the deference of which she could not be unaware.

UNIFORM REPORTS SHOW SATISFACTION

Clear Signs of Active Preparation For Fall Trade.

New York.—R. G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Rarely are the reports from leading trade centers in different sections so uniformly satisfactory. In most cases an actual widening demand is noted and in others there are clear signs of preparation for an active fall trade. The weather is ideally favorable both for wholesale and retail distribution and for the growing crops.

The gradual movement towards a higher price basis in iron and steel denotes unusual activity. In eastern territory the situation reflects increased strength with piemakers continuing steady buyers.

The demand for basic materials is taxing capacity, and orders for structural steel show a substantial total. With few exceptions finished lines are booked ahead through a third quarter. Heavy steel melting scrap remains at $13.50 (Pittsburg), but holders of stocks are not inclined to accept much future business at this figure. It is now more difficult to obtain Bessemer and open-hearth billets for prompt shipment and the quotations of $20.50 and $21 (Pittsburg), respectively, are the minimum.

Labor conditions are causing some concern, the scarcity of workers interfering with operations at many points. Demand for spot goods has improved with jobbers of drygoods. The retail trade is growing more freely for quick shipments of small lots.

There is a distinct broadening in the demand for cotton goods and advances have established in wide print cloths and convertibles new records. Printers and convertors have been buying for delivery into October. Brown sheetings and drills are firmer and export demand from miscellaneous ports is steady. Reorders for fall cottons are coming in moderately with the best business in printed shirtings and percales.

The situation in woolens and worsteds continues satisfactory and advances are named by the largest producers. Cotton yarns are firmer and slightly higher and some fair sized orders are being tendered on worsted yarns.

The seasons when the shoe factories close for a few weeks is at hand, but an active fall business is looked for and the New England footwear market shows improvements. Leather is very firm.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says: Improved crop reports and continued activity in industrial circles present the more pleasant aspect of an otherwise quiet trade situation. Jobbers and wholesale dealers in textiles and dress goods are taking fabrics for fall and spring, and, in some instances, men's wear, for example, re-orders are noted for the higher prices of raw wool seem to presage higher quotations on finished goods. An advance of 5 per cent already has been made on broadcloth and worsted yarn probably will go higher.

The general tendency is to operate cautiously to give some attention to politics and to await clearer views as to probable crop results. However, there is no pessimism and it is noteworthy that political matters, while receiving attention, diverting interest from buying, as it were, do not cause any real concern. The best situated line is iron and steel, where specifications against contracts are especially heavy with blast furnaces and mills operating to nearly full capacity. This industry is best seen by a shortage of labor, which seems to have displayed a drifting tendency.

Shoes at wholesale are dull because of high prices. Leather is quite active and strong with sole leather leading, but hides are easier. Collections are not above fair, and in fact, many points report them to be very slow, this being especially true of the south where trade continues dull.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending June 20 were 266, against 266 last week, 22 in the like week of 1911, 187 in 1910, 223 in 1909, and 250 in 1908. Business failures in Canada for the week number 21, which compares with 21 for last week and 17 for the like week of 1911.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending June 20 aggregate 4,734,034 bushels, against 3,652,148 last week, and 1,538,478 this week last year. For the 51 weeks ending June 20 exports are 169,208,518 bushels, against 120,795,356 in the corresponding period last year.

KEEPING BABIES IN HEALTH

Success of Tent Scheme Last Summer So Pronounced That It Will Be Repeated.

Mothers of little babies that suffered much from the intense heat in the early part of July last summer will be interested in the success of the "baby tent" scheme adopted in some of the big cities.

The tents are placed on flat roofs of tall buildings and in open lots, with eight little cradles or cots in each tent. When all was ready mothers of babies under two years were invited to leave them at the nearest available tent over night, so that the youngsters, in addition to enjoying the privilege of sleeping out of doors, could also receive the attention of trained nurses and doctors free.

Some of the tents have a perforated iron pipe extending along the ridge pole and connected with the city water supply. On very hot nights the water was turned on and allowed to stream down over the canvas. By evaporation it greatly reduced the temperature inside the tents. Some of the tents were also kept cool by the use of large blocks of ice in tubs before the entrance. Electric fans blew the cold air from the ice into the tents sufficiently to keep the babies comfortably cool.

This is the way some of the poor babies are being cared for, but the ideas could be utilized by any one who had the welfare of the baby at heart.

That Was Different.

A stern father who had repeatedly told a young man who was paying his addresses to his daughter not to visit the house again without his permission, which he never intended to give, was surprised when he answered a ring at the doorbell late one evening to see the young man waiting on the step.

"Sir," said he in anger, "didn't I tell you not to call again, eh, sir?"

"Yes," said the young man. "I know, but I didn't call to see your daughter. I came on behalf of our firm about that little bill."

"Oh—er—er—" stammered the stern father, "call again, will you?"

Needed No More Help.

An American gentleman got acquainted with a Frenchman who was very anxious to acquire the English language. The American in order to help him said that if he would send his exercises to him he would willingly correct them.

Nothing was heard from the Frenchman for some time, but finally a letter came couched in the following choice English.

"In small time I can learn so many English from his text-book and her dictionary as I think I will to come at the America and to go on the scaffold to lecture."

Only One Fault to Find.

Lambert Kaspers, Chicago attorney, told the following story at a recent Y. M. C. A. banquet:

A Kansas farmer, a Dane, applied for naturalization papers. The judge asked him: "Are you satisfied with the general conditions of the country?"

"Yas," drawled the Dane.

"Does the government suit you?" queried the judge.

"Yas, yas, only I would like to see more rain," replied the farmer.

The Shorter Route.

Lady Duff-Gordon, at a luncheon at Sherry's in New York, told an anecdote apropos of the divorce evil.

"Two girls," she said, "were chatting over a cocktail and a cigarette.

"'Marriages are made in heaven,' said the first girl, and she blew a cloud of smoke into the air and regarded it with dreamy eyes.

"The second girl with a light laugh replied:

"'Yes, that is true; but, thank goodness, to unmake them we have to go only as far as Reno.'"

The Village Cut-Up.

"Charley Billingsby always has something funny to say, no matter what happens."

"I know it. He's awful comical."

"I often wonder how he thinks of the humorous thoughts he has. He's just perfectly killing. I never heard him call an umbrella anything but a bumbershoot."

A Changed Man.

Mrs. Knagg—You were a different man when I married you.

Make your failure tragical by the earnestness of your endeavor, and then it will not differ much from success.—Thoreau.

Society forgives a man if he breaks the Ten Commandments, but never if he goes broke himself.

Getting things without paying for them is some men's idea of economy.

If a man has common sense he seldom makes use of it in a love affair.

LANDLORD KNEW THE GAME

Spared His Tenant the Enumeration of the Time-Honored and Yearly "Bluff."

"I have called to collect the rent," said the landlord.

"Yes," replied the lady of the house, "come in. Now, before I give you the money this month, I—"

"Just a minute, madam," said the landlord. "I can save time for you. I know the parlor isn't fit for a pig to live in, the dining room wall paper is a shock to people of refinement, the kitchen walls are a disgrace, and the back porch is a menace to life and limb. I'm also aware that you won't stay here another month unless the barber-shop wallpaper in the back bedroom is changed to something in a delicate pink, and I'm next to the fact that you're ashamed to have people look at such gas fixtures as I have provided. I'm going to paint the front and back porches and let it go at that."

"Thank you very much," said the lady meekly. "You have saved me a lot of trouble. That is all we really expected to have done, but I was afraid that I should have to make the same old bluff to get that much out of you."—Detroit Free Press.

Above the Laws.

Some men think money can do anything. A certain rich man sent for the doctor, who looked him over and then pronounced judgment.

"You have been living too high."

"Maybe I have. There are many good things in the markets."

"No levity. You have violated nature's laws."

"And you must pay the penalty."

"Pay the penalty? Oh, come now, Doc. Can't you get me off on a technicality or something?"

"Do you keep motoring accessories?" asked the man entering the department store.

"Oh, yes," replied the floorwalker, with a bow, "we keep arnica and witch hazel. Drug department, second aisle to the left, please!"

A Prediction.

"Do you think Biffels will ever reach a green old age?"

"He surely will, if he lives long enough and doesn't know more then than he does now."

The First Consideration.

At St. Andrews some years ago an old farmer and his plowman were carting sand from the seashore. They were behind the target on the rifle range, but hidden by a bank of sand from a party of volunteers, who were then on foot, at practice. A stray bullet struck the plowman on the leg, and he immediately dropped, exclaiming: "I'm shot!"

Without more ado the farmer scrambled up the bank and, waving his hand to the volunteers, shouted:

"Hey, lads, stop that, will ye? You've shot a man, and it micht hae been the horse!"—London Tit-Bits.

Four Dollars for a Cake of Soap.

Soap has never been considered an extravagance, but now that notion may change, since the new French imported soaps are costing from two to three and four dollars a cake. They are, however, deliciously scented, and one may take pardonable pleasure in using such toilet article. Each cake comes in a little box, and is satin covered; they are quite a suitable item for the traveling bag of the bride, for which the most exquisite trifles are always sought out.

Terrible Teddy! Didn't they wallop him though!

Joe Thompson says the republican party is dead; he ought to know, he attended its funeral and saw it buried.

Don't blame Teddy for quitting the party which trompled him to death, but it does look a little ungrateful in Jody Thompson, who has been honored by the party, to quit and go to wearing a bandanna.

The way they did handle "Bull Moose" Teddy at Chicago was a caution; he may never have known what a sure enough steam roller was before, but we'll bet sunshine to tears he knows every little piece of its mechanism now.

The bandanna was the favorite article of clothing of Allen Thurman and of Senator E. W. Pettus —two of the best democrats that ever lived, and now comes Teddy and Jody using them for political purposes. Its sacrilege, pure and simple!

"The BULL MOOSE" party was born last Sunday; Rev. W. H. Mixon of Selma baptised it; Judge Lindsey of Denver was attending physician and TEDDY, he of the three inch teeth, was its daddy; J. O. Thompson of Birmingham is its Alabama God-father.

Well, all we've got to say is that that man Roosevelt can stand a lot of punching. If Jim Flinn can just stand before Jack Johnson as well as did Teddy before Taft and his walloping machine, he'll stand an awful good chance of making some money and gaining a title.

We have no desire to recall the unpleasant days of the amendment fight but as a matter of simple justice we wish to ask a question of our esteemed friends, Gov. O'[illegible] P. G. Bowman, the chief executive of that memorable [illegible], in those days it was charged that Comer had taken the old soldiers' money and spent it. [illegible] received a few paltry dollars from the state treasury, but what did they receive under [illegible] administration? Echo answers—"WHAT?"

Will O'Neal or Bowman please [illegible]? Of course under oath is not required.

Comer's hat is in the ring; it will stay in the ring until he picks it up to walk into the Governor's office —if the farmers of this state have a say so about it. His presence is demanded to protect them from further encroachments by the railroads. When he left the office of Governor, the railroads had learned a severe lesson and the farmers were receiving fair treatment at the hands of the roads; as soon as he left the office the roads begun anew to stretch forth their cryptic hands and to draw into their maws everything possible. The farmer is the one who furnishes the larger part of the revenues to the railroads and they look upon Comer as their friend. The fight may be a three cornered one but Comer will start out with a string well tied to his corner.

The advent of Abercrombie into Alabama politics is somewhat skyrockety; fired, bodily from the presidency of the State University he made the race for congressman at large and received the nomination—equivolent to an election, but, not satisfied with this honor, or gloating over his victory, he casts his hat into the senatorial ring and seeks further and higher honors. Abercrombie should remember the downfall of Cæsar, of Napoleon and others, whose ambition led on to final destruction; then too, it would be well for him to learn a lesson from the genial Cy Brown. Alabamians are liberal in their views but they are loathe to pile honors upon one man to the exclusion of all others. He should be satisfied with what he has. It would at least be becoming for him to serve, say a day or two, in the office to which he has been chosen before he seeks preferment.

That Negro Delegate.

The wires flashed the news last Saturday that the State of Colorado had elected a nigger as a delegate to the national democratic convention. The news was rolled as a sweet morsel upon the tongues of local republicans; they saw in it a vindication of their own acts in sitting in conventions with numberless burr heads; they seemed to realize that it "evened up" matters and that it would put a muzzle upon the Press in denouncing local politicians for associating and conferring with negro delegates to state and district conventions.

In their joysome glee they forgot to distinguish between a national convention in which every state, territory and tributary are associated together and a state convention in which men from one state only are gathered for the purpose of outlining a policy for that particular state, or a district convention composed of a few neighboring counties associated together for the purpose of selecting a candidate to represent them in those vital things which effect their home welfare and go not out of their own particular home sphere.

In the first place let it be said, and said with emphasis, that every democrat in Chilton county, whether old or young, progressive or conservative, has openly and persistently denounced the action of the Colorado democracy in sending out a negro delegate.

Let it be said with equal emphasis that the leading republicans of Chilton do not denounce the sending of negro delegates to state or district conventions, but on the other hand associate with them, handshake with them, act with them on committees, consult with them as to candidates and put them forward as leaders in prayer and as members of select committees.

There is a vast difference in doing a thing by "proxy," and regretting deeply the action of the proxy, and in doing a thing knowingly, willingly, cheerfully and unstintingly.

No negro goes to democratic conventions in Alabama, state district, county, precinct or otherwise; many negroes go to republican conventions in Alabama and sit side by side with the representatives sent from this and other counties. There is a vast difference in Colorado sending a negro to a national convention to sit with the delegates from that particular state and in Alabama or the Fourth district of Alabama sending negroes to sit with Alabama white men.

The negro delegate from Colorado will not associate with white men from the south—of this you may rest assured. Negro delegates to republican conventions DO sit with Alabama white men and hold conferences with them and act on committees with them.

The Press must admit that it is distinctly disappointed in the democracy of Colorado; it would be far better to lose that state in the presidential election—if leaving the negro at home would bring about that result—than to win it with a negro sitting in the convention.

But, the Press, along with every other democrat, regrets the action of the democracy of Colorado; that is as far as we can go; we regret it deeply and make open statement of our regret; if possible we would exclude him from the convention and that hurriedly. Can the republicans of Chilton, or of Alabama, say as much? If we could right the wrong perpetrated by the Colorado voters we would gladly do so. Can the republicans of Chilton say as much for their state and district conventions? If they feel as do the democrats about such matters, they could quickly and effectively stop the attendance of negroes at their conventions.

They have raised a great hue and cry about one lone negro delegate from a far distant state that is nominally republican, and yet seems not to care a thrip of the thumb about twenty or thirty negroes in their own fair state's conventions or in the conventions of their home district

We admit that it was a clever piece of politics from a Colorado point of view, to send the negro. That state is republican by a close majority; to win a few negroes might turn the tide to democracy, and in order to accomplish this result they have sent a negro delegate to the canvention, utterly ignoring in their mad chase for votes the fact that the Democratic party is a white man's party; that its slogan has been since its birth, "white supremacy," and the rule of white men in all things; that the negro by nature, by training and by law belongs to the Republican; that it was the Republican party that placed the ballot in his hands and that it was the Democratic party in the south which took the ballot from him.

Then, too, there is a vast difference between one lone negro from Colorado and sixty eight negroes from the south—as was the case at Chicago. Those sixty eight negroes held the balance of power over the Republican party, but the lone negro from Colorado has no power, personal, political or otherwise; he is there merely as a "vote catcher", while the sixty eight at Chicago were there as "president makers." It was the votes of those negroes at Chicago which nominated the candidate for whom the Republicans of Chilton will have to vote in the national election. Had they not voted for Taft he could not have been nominated, for he had a majority ot but twenty-one in the convention—sixty-eight negroes voting for him.

Such will not be the case in the Baltimore convention.

The Colorado voters evidently forgot the traditions of the south when they sent their negro delegate to Baltimore; they were unmindful of the fact that the south is always democratic and that it is Democratic without the aid, influence or assistance of the negro.

Yes, we regret that the Colorado folks forgot themselves when they selected a negro delegate, bul we rejoice with exceeding great joy that no negro ever goes to Democratic conventions from the South—especially from Alabama, and more especially from the Fourth district, in which we are vitally interested.

No, we leave the negro to the Republicans of the south. We helped to disfranchise him; helped with a willing hand and a glad heart; we have not yet regretted that action and will never regret it.

We've never sat in a convention with one and never expect to do so; we have never had him to select our candidates nor to pass upon our rights to sit in conventions; we've never permitted him to serve on our committees or to manage our political affairs. Those things belong properly to the Republican party, which gave him freedom, political rights, and who attempted through its leaders to make him the social equal of white men.

This editorial would not have been written had we not received information that certain ones intended to jibe us about the lone negro in the Colorado delegation; it was our purpose to let the negro question die out for we are convinced that most all the Republicans of this county are heartily sick of the negro in politics; our only purpose in ever bringing him into our columns was to show the virtue loving white men of the county the company their representatives keep when attending conventions. This, we believe, we have succeeded in doing and we are satisfied, hence, so far as we are concerned the matter would have rested where it was had not information come that some are attempting to gloat over the one measly negro from Colorado.

To those we commend a careful reading of Matthew 7:5.

JEHOVAH'S CONQUEST BY LOVE'S POWER.

Time Approaching When Force Will Be Applied.

Election of the Special Class With a View to the Blessing of the Non-Elect, Who Have Ears but Hear Not, Eyes but See Not.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Cleveland, O., June 23. — Pastor Russell had his usual large audience today. He gave two addresses. We report the one on the text, "To present you holy and unblameable and unreprovable in His sight."—Colossians 1, 22.

Whatever our creeds have said to the effect that anyone declining the drawing and invitation of this Gospel Age would suffer eternal torture, we are glad that the Bible says nothing of this kind. God's Word holds out a specially glorious reward for those who now renounce the world and become true, faithful, footstep followers of Jesus.

But nowhere do the Scriptures declare the unreasonable proposition that any declining this offer of jointheirship with Jesus in His Kingdom and its terms in the narrow way must on account of this rejection suffer eternal torture. How unjust would such a proposition be—how ungodlike! How did we ever so seriously blunder?

The Transforming Work.

Note the class the Apostle mentions as undergoing the transforming influences, preparing them for a share in the Kingdom glories. He declares in the context that those to whom he wrote were once alienated from God, enemies in mind by wicked works, yet now reconciled. Ah, as every Christian knows, there is a wonderful, transforming influence in the Message of the love and grace of God. And it is this that St. Paul here declares.

Jesus first of all through His death as a satisfaction of Justice made possible the acceptance of the alienated, condemned ones. Next the Message of Divine Grace, the call to be sons of God, reached the hearts of many and captured them. The Message not only works in their hearts to will, but works powerfully also in their bodies to do, to the extent of ability, the will of God. And it is these that the Apostle declares the Redeemer will present before the Father holy, unblameable.

The transforming work now progresses in their minds, in their hearts, and all the faithful will share in the First or Chief Resurrection—"changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," to perfection on the spirit plane. "We shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." But the Apostle reminds us in the succeeding verse that all this glorious outcome is dependent—it all hangs upon the word if—if we continue in the faith; if we are grounded and settled, and if we be not moved away from the hope which we have received.

The Apostle reminds us that this is not a special, private Message, but the very identical one Message, the one Gospel, the one "faith once delivered to the saints"—and proclaimed for every creature which is under heaven. By this he did not mean to say that the Gospel had been preached in heathen lands. Indeed, although more than eighteen centuries have passed, the Gospel is not yet preached to every creature under heaven. What St. Paul did mean is that the Gospel, which originally was confined to the Jew, was from the days of Cornelius, the first Gentile convert, open to all people of every nationality under heaven—to all who had the hearing ear and appreciative heart. But, alas, how comparatively few are in such attitude of mind as to be appreciative of God's grace! Only the few, "a little flock," have been found as God foreknew and as Jesus foretold.

The Future Program Different.

But God is interested in our entire race. He did not provide the redemption merely for the saintly ones whom He specially loves and is now drawing. On the contrary, "Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man." (Hebrews ii, 9.) Hence it does not surprise us that God's Plan, which begins with the calling of the saintly few, by no means ends with them. Indeed their calling and election is with a view to the blessing eventually of the non-elect, the unwilling, who now have ears but hear not, and eyes but see not.

These, the Bible tells us, are soon to be dealt with in a different manner. Force is to be used. The power of the Messianic Kingdom will bind Satan for a thousand years and will restrain evil. Divine Power will also let loose all the glorious agencies of Truth, righteousness, light, until the whole earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of God as the waters cover the great deep; and until "every knee shall bow to Him and every tongue confess to the glorying of God the Father." "In that day shall there be a fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness." "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

Southern.

One man was killed and two were captured by a sheriff's posse when the three, masked, attempted to rob the Citizens Bank of Mammoth Spring, Ark. Lee Burrow, a relative of Otto Burrow, one of the men arrested, was brought to town with a serious wound. He said that Doctor Jones, father of Ben Jones, the dead robber, and Howard Sears, a neighbor, shot him because they thought he had informed the officers of the proposed robbery. Doctor Jones and Sears were arrested. Burrow will probably die.

International complications were narrowly averted at the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchange, in session at Louisville, Ky., when members of the delegation from Winnipeg, Manitoba, noted the absence of British flags among the decorations of the convention hall, and an effort was made to change the name from national to American association. The Cuban contingent allied themselves with the Canadians and the result was to change the name of the organization to the International Association of Real Estate Boards.

One of the cleverest schemes ever devised to keep from working was pulled off by Ed Thompson, serving time in the county jail at Chester, Ky. When Jailer Mullins went to the jail to start the prisoners to work he found Thompson in the same garments that Adam wore, with all his clothes in a tub of water. As no other clothes were to be had, the man got a half holiday.

Three lives were lost, two persons badly injured, seven automobiles destroyed and property valued at $30,000 destroyed in a fire in a garage of the English building at Waycross, Ga. Several firemen had close calls from the falling walls, but none was injured. John Gamble and a young son were sitting on the front porch and had a close call. The fire started from some gasoline which had been pilled on the garage floor.

After battling successfully against the raging waters of the Mississippi river throughout the months of April and May, holding the levee intact along the entire New Orleans front and with the river stage three feet below the official danger mark there, and eight feet lower than the maximum stage recorded during this flood, Algiers, Wetswego, Crano and McDonoughville, on the west side of the river from New Orleans, are threatened with inundation from the back water from the Hymelia crevasse, 30 miles above New Orleans. Behind McDonoughville and Algiers, a number of homes are under water. The back waters from the break in the river levee at Hymelia is rising rapidly and the residents of these places are experiencing a hard fight to hold the rear protection levees. Large forces of men are at work filling sand bags and raising the protection embankments.

TAFT IS NOMINATED BY PART OF THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

WITH 350 OF THE ROOSEVELT DELEGATES DECLINING TO VOTE, THE PRESIDENT RECEIVED 561 VOTES ON THE FIRST BALLOT.

ROOSEVELT BOLTS TO LEAD NEW "PROGRESSIVE" PARTY

Vice President Sherman Named for Running Mate Without Any Opposition—The President Received 20 More Votes Than Needed to Nominate.

Convention Hall, Chicago.—With nearly 350 of the Roosevelt delegates declining to vote and hastening away at adjournment time, to tender to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt the nomination of a new party, the fifteenth Republican national convention at the end of a long and tumultuous session renominated William Howard Taft of Ohio for president and James Schoolcraft Sherman of New York for vice president.

NOMINATED BY REGULARS.

WILLIAM H. TAFT.

Taft Gets 561 Votes.

President Taft received 561 of the 1,078 votes in the convention, or 21 more than a majority.

The decision of the Roosevelt people, under the direction of their leader, to refrain from voting, left no other candidate near the president. The announcement of the Taft victory was greeted with cheering from his adherents and groans and hisses from the opposition.

When it became absolutely certain that Mr. Taft would be nominated without great difficulty, the leaders in control of the convention decided to give him as a running mate his companion on the ticket in 1908.

All others dropped from the race, and Mr. Sherman was the only candidate regularly placed before the convention. A motion from New Hampshire to make the nomination by acclamation was declared out of order. There were many scattering votes on the roll call.

The convention amid much confusion then adjourned sine die.

Chairman Root announced a call of the roll of the states for nominations for the presidency.

Alabama was passed. Arizon was silent. Down the list silence followed the calling of each state until Ohio was reached. A cheer greeted the state, and Warren G. Harding arose to place President Taft in nomination. Then it was discovered that Iowa had forgotten to nominate Cummins, and Root ordered that the state be called again. Silence greeted the second call, for the Iowans had decided not to nominate Cummins, but to vote for him.

Then Ohio was called again and Harding took the platform, greeted by scattering cheers, to nominate Taft.

When New York was called there had been a murmur of disappointment, for William A. Prendergast sat still in his seat, although he had been expected to nominate Roosevelt.

Taft Is Nominated.

Frequently during his speech, Harding was interrupted by applause and cheers. When, finally, he reached the name "William Howard Taft," floor and galleries burst into life. Hats and handkerchiefs were swung in the air and a steady roll of cheering swept through the hall. In the galleries women as well as men joined in the demonstration, which lasted for 16 minutes.

After seating all contested Taft delegates except those from Texas, the convention came to order again at 2:12 p. m., and took up the Texas cases.

The credentials committee report on Texas followed the report of the national committee, favorable to Taft, and was adopted, district by district, without roll call. The only delegates given Roosevelt were in the Third and Fifteenth Texas districts, both of which the national committee had originaly awarded him.

It was generally understood that with the completion of the organization, the Roosevelt people would declare their position of non-participation in further proceedings of the convention.

The report of the committee on permanent organization, recommending that the temporary list of officers headed by Senator Root, be made permanent, was adopted.

Senator Root came forward amid deafening noise of cheers, whistling, bowing and other signs of approval and disapproval.

The demonstration lasted several minutes, Mr. Root standing, smiling, waiting for the noise to subside.

When at last it became quiet, Mr. Root made a brief speech of thanks. He introduced Henry J. Allen of Kansas to make a statement.

"No Physical Bolt."

Henry J. Allen's speech was a declaration that the Roosevelt people repudiated this convention and its work, and without a physical bolt appealed to the people.

At no time was there an indication of a walkout of Roosevelt delegates. They expressed their revolt by silence.

In the closing moments of the conjournment a resolution was adopted giving the national committee power to declare vacant the seat of a man on the regular committee refusing to support the regular nominee of 1912.

In the closing moments of the convention, a resolution was passed under the gavel, giving the national committee the power to fill all vacancies and empowering the committee to declare vacant the seat of any members who "refuse to support the nominees of this convention."

Former Representative Hemenway of Indiana introduced the resolution.

Such of the delegates as had not left the hall crowded closely about the platform while the resolutions, announcements and customary routine of the closing hour was gone through with.

Band Plays "Praise God."

At 10:30 Delegate Estabrook of New Hampshire moved that the convention adjourn with delay, and the motion was adopted. The delegates filed out in absolute silence. As the last of the delegates left the hall, the band played, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

Former President Theodore Roosevelt was nominated for president on an Independent ticket, in the dying hours of the Republican national convention in which he had met defeat.

Followers of Colonel Roosevelt gathered in Orchestral hall, less than a mile from the Coliseum, and pledged their support to the former president.

In accepting the nomination Colonel Roosevelt appealed to the people of all sections, regardless of party affiliations, to stand with the founders of the new party, one of whose cardinal principles, he said, was to be "Thou shalt not steal."

The informal nomination of Colonel Roosevelt was said to be chiefly to effect a temporary organization.

The work of organization will be pushed rapidly state by state. At a later time, probably early in August it is intended that a national convention shall be held. Colonel Roosevelt, in accepting the nomination, said he did so on the understanding that he would be willing to step aside if it should be the desire of the new party when organized to select another standard bearer.

Roosevelt Nominated.

The speech nominating Colonel Roosevelt was made by Comptroller William Prendergrast of New York who was to have presented the colonel's name to the convention.

Dean William Draper Lewis of the University of Pennsylvania Law school, who was to make one of the seconding speeches, delivered the address which he had prepared for the Republican convention.

Representatives of 22 states composed the notification committee, which informed Colonel Roosevelt of his nomination and, in a sense, stood as sponsors for the movement.

The committee consisted of Comptroller W. R. Prendergrast of New York; Meyer Lissner of California; former Congressman Richmond Pearson of North Carolina; Frank Knox of Michigan; Matthew Hale of Massachusetts; A. R. Garford of Ohio; David Browning of Kentucky; Everard Bierer, Jr., of Utah; Walter Thompson of Vermont; Judge Oscar R. Hundlet of Alabama; Judge Ben J. N. Lindsey of Colorado; Andrew Rahn of Minnesota; Judge Stevens of Iowa. Judge Lowder of North Dakota; William Allen White of Kansas; John C. Greenway of Arizona; ex-Gov. John Franklin Fort of New Jersey; Col. E. C. Carrington, Maryland; Pearl Wight of Louisiana; Lorenzo Dowe of Washington; Walter Clyde Jones of Illinois and Frank Frantz of Oklahoma.

Hadley Sticks to Taft.

Jefferson City, Mo.—Governor Hadley, on his return, declared his determination not to join Roosevelt's third party movement. "I believe I can render more service to the people as a member o fthe Republican party than by joining in the formation of a third party," he said. "While I have in no way changed my mind as to the correctness of that for which I have contended, I say that no political party ever will exist in which men will not use authority autocratic."

Hotels Got $5,000,000.

Chicago.—More than $5,000,000 was expended by delegates, politicians and convention visitors in the last ten days, according to estimates made by Chicago hotel managers. Of this sum it is estimated $3,500,000 was expended for food, drink and sleeping rooms, the remainder being distributed among the theaters, amusement parks and restaurants. It is estimated that Chicago entertained 250,000 visitors during the convention.

Colonel Stone and Pussy.

The Coliseum was full of oddities outside of politics. A big gray cat put in an appearance shortly after the doors of the Coliseum were opened and mounted to the platform, from where it surveyed proceedings until Sergeant-at-Arms "Bill" Stone stepped on its tail, accidentally. This seemed to annoy pussy and her—or his—wail of annoyance almost filled the hall. It took Colonel Stone several minutes to quiet the animal.

is one in which the merchant himself had implicit faith—and he would not advertise it. You are safe in patronizing the merchants whose ads appear in this paper because their goods are up-to-date and never shoddy.

Didn't Know What it Was.

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, was condemning at a dinner in Jacksonville an orange grower who had failed.

"The man failed," he said, "through ignorance. He lays the blame on other things, but his ignorance alone is at fault. He is as ignorant of orange farming as the tramp was of industry.

"You've heard of that tramp, perhaps? He wore on his face a sneer of derision and scorn.

"'Work?' he said. 'Work? What is it—an herb?'"

Natural Query.

Gen. F. D. Grant, when discussing military neatness, used often to tell a story about his father.

"My father was talking to General Sherman in his tent one day," he would begin, "when a third general entered, a brigadier notorious for his slovenliness. After the brigadier left my father blew forth a cloud of smoke and said: 'Sherman, I wonder whom that man gets to wear his shirts the first week?'"

It's difficult for the average man to understand why some women are jealous of their husbands.

BURNING ITCH WAS CURED

"I deem it my duty to tell about a cure that the Cuticura Soap and Ointment have made on myself. My trouble began in splotches breaking out right in the edge of my hair on the forehead, and spread over the front part of the top of my head from ear to ear, and over my ears which caused a most fearful burning itch, or eczema.

"For three years I had this terrible breaking out on my forehead and scalp. I tried our family doctor and he failed to cure it. Then I tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and used them for two months with the result of a complete cure. Cuticura Soap and Ointment should have the credit due, and I have advised a lot of people to use them." (Signed) C. D. Tharrington, Creek, N. C., Jan. 26, 1911.

Itching Scalp—Hair Fell Out.

"I will say that I have been suffering with an itching on my scalp for the past few years. My hair fell out in spots all over my head. My scalp started to trouble me with sores, then the sores healed up, and crusts formed on the top. Then the hair fell out and left me three bald spots the shape of a half dollar. I went to more than one doctor, but could not get any relief, so I started to use the Cuticura Remedies. I tried one bar of Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment, and felt relieved right away. Now the bald spots have disappeared, and my hair has grown, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I highly recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all that are suffering with scalp trouble." (Signed) Samuel Stern, 236 Floyd St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 7, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Entirely Practical.

"Son, I hope you are engaged to a practical girl."

"Oh, she's very practical, dad. She drives her own car, and she can take a motor apart as well as any expert in the business."

IOWA WOMAN WELL AGAIN

Freed From Shooting Pains, Spinal Weakness, Dizziness, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my health."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WAMPLER, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider Well This Advice.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

GOMPERS GUILTY COURT CONTEMPT

SENTENCES ON LABOR LEADERS AGAIN IMPOSED—WILL APPEAL.

THE COURT'S SENTENCE

Charge Violation of Injunction in the Famous Buck Stove and Range Case.

Washington. — Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison and John Mitchell, labor leaders, were held guilty of contempt of court by the supreme court of the District of Columbia, in connection with the court's injunction in the Buck Stove and Range boycott case.

Justice Wright sentenced Gompers to one year, the same as upon his previous conviction, and sentenced Morrison to nine months. Morrison's sentence, under the first conviction, was nine months.

John Mitchell was not present and sentence upon him was deferred. His first sentence was six months.

Bondsmen were on hand and attorneys for the labor men gave notice of an intention to file an appeal to have the supreme court review the judgment. In its previous review of the case the supreme court reversed the conviction on the ground the contempt proceedings had been improperly instituted. New proceedings were at once begun.

The sentences under the first conviction were Gompers one year; Morrison nine months; Mitchell six months. The charge was that the three men as officers of the American Federation of Labor, through the organization's official publication, had disregarded Justice Gould's injunction against the publication of the Buck Stove and Range company's name in its boycott list.

After Gompers had been sentenced he attacked the decision, declaring that while Justice Wright lives in seclusion, his decision shows a mental concept of more than two centuries when the workingman was a serf. Information just came to me that the decision was completed more than a month ago, but withheld until the close of the Chicago national convention. If true the inference is obvious, he said.

In passing sentence on President Gompers, the court said:

"For the ringleader and chief offender the duty of the court, is to be ascertained by its obligations to administer the justice of the land 'without respect to persons,' requires it in determining a penalty appropriate for this, the most dangerous and destructive of contempts, at least to parallel the extreme penalty which is fixed by good precedents."

After a lengthy recital of the functions of the law and judicial power the opinion concludes:

"The evidence shows for these respondents an assiduous and persistent effort to undermine the supremacy of the law by undertaking insiduously to destroy the confidence of the people in the integrity of the tribunals which maintain it, by inoculating the minds of their followers and the people with a virus of mischievous falsehoods and misrepresentations concerning the court and judges, seeking and hopeful that the support of the people might be withdrawn from these tribunals and by this means their power undone, their judgment rendered valueless and forceless.

"The defendants are here at the court bar to answer; they have been afforded full opportunity to hear the evidence against them and to say what, if any, reasons can exist against their punishment. Every part of their punishment; every part of their response, for they offer no defense, is measured by the words of their leader, Gompers: 'The things I am charged with, I do. Go to h— with your injunctions.'"

1000 People Homeless.

Quebec.—One thousand persons were made homeless when between 100 and 125 buildings at Chicoutimi were destroyed by fire. It is reported one man was killed and three seriously hurt, but this could not be confirmed. The government will send 150 tents to house the victims.

Evelyn Fears Her Husband.

White Plain, N. Y.—Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw still fears that if her husband gets out of Matteawan he will try to kill her, she testified at the hearing of Harry K. Thaw's application for release from the asylum on the contention that he now is sane. "I am afraid that if Thaw is released he will kill me as he has threatened to do," she volunteered during examination by counsel for Thaw.

Sir George White Dies in London.

London.—Field Marshal Sir George Stuart White, governor of Chelsea hospital, London's home for aged soldiers, and one of the most distinguished soldiers in the British army, died in his seventy-seventh year. Sir George White who was an Irishman, went through the hardships of the Indian mutiny in 1857 as a young officer of yeomanry. It was during the Afghan war in 1879-80, however, that he made his fame and won the V. C. distinction of the Victoria Cross for valor.

His Choice.

"This enterprise is a promising one."

"Is it? But what I'm looking for is a paying proposition."

Long Service.

"You say you were in one place for ten years. Why did you leave?"

"I was pardoned by the gov'nor, mum."—Judge.

His Mistake.

Gertie—Angry with him? Why, he wrote a lovely poem to her.

Rose—Yes, but she never read it. She tore the whole thing up in a fit of anger. He called it "Lines on Mabel's Face."

Subbubs—Well, there's one thing most of us have grown already.

Citiman—Indeed? What's that?

Subbubs—Tired—Catholic Standard and Times.

Cutting Repartee.

"How," said a lawyer to a witness, "how can you possibly bear such testimony against this man who you say is your friend?"

"Sir," said the man, "he is my friend, and I love him, but I love Truth more."

"You should be ashamed," replied the lawyer, "to turn your back on a friend for one who is a perfect stranger to you."

DURING THE DISCUSSION.

Mr. Spat—Now, if you'll just listen to me—

Mrs. Spat—Oh, you can't convince me.

Mr. Spat—Probably not, but if we're going to spend the rest of the night in argument I want my share of the time.

DOCTOR'S SHIFT.
Now Gets Along Without It.

A physician says: "Until last fall I used to eat meat for my breakfast and suffered with indigestion until the meat had passed from the stomach.

"Last fall I began the use of Grape-Nuts for breakfast and very soon found I could do without meat, for my body got all the nourishment necessary from the Grape-Nuts and since then I have not had any indigestion and am feeling better and have increased in weight.

"Since finding the benefit I derived from Grape-Nuts I have prescribed the food for all my patients suffering from indigestion or over-feeding and also for those recovering from disease where I want a food easy to take and certain to digest and which will not overtax the stomach.

"I always find the results I look for when I prescribe Grape-Nuts. For ethical reasons please omit my name." Name given by mail by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The reason for the wonderful amount of nutriment, and the easy digestion of Grape-Nuts is not hard to find.

In the first place, the starchy part of the wheat and barley goes through various processes of cooking, to perfectly change the starch into dextrose or grape-sugar, in which state it is ready to be easily absorbed by the blood.

The parts in the wheat and barley which Nature can make use of for rebuilding brain and nerve centers are retained in this remarkable food, and thus the human body is supplied with the powerful strength producers, so easily noticed after one has eaten Grape-Nuts each day for a week or ten days.

"There's a reason" and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville" in pkgs.

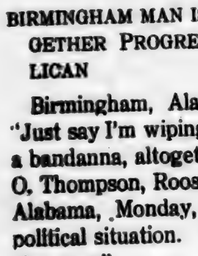
J. O. THOMPSON WIPES HIS BROW WITH BANDANNA.

BIRMINGHAM MAN IS NOW ALTOGETHER PROGRESSIVE REPUBLICAN

Birmingham, Ala., June 24.—"Just say I'm wiping my brow with a bandanna, altogether," said Jos. O. Thompson, Roosevelt leader in Alabama, Monday, regarding the political situation. "I'm a progressive now"



"I've voted the republican ticket all my life, but last week I witnessed the death of the republican party and the birth of a new.

"Frankly, I'm no longer a republican. As I said, I'm a progressive now."

Mr. Thompson expressed the belief that Roosevelt would carry every Northern state, save three or four. He says sentiment in favor of progressivism is especially pronounced in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Massachusettes.—Advertiser.

"Clean Up the Bowels and Keep Them Clean"

There are many remedies to be had for constipation, but the difficulty is to procure one that acts without violence. A remedy that does not perform by force what should be accomplished by persuasion is Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets. After using them, Mr. N. A. Waddell, 315 Washington St., Waco, Tex., says:

"Almost all my life I have been troubled with constipation, and have tried many remedies, all of which seemed to cause pain without giving much relief. I finally tried Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets and found them excellent. Their action is pleasant and mild, and their chocolate taste makes them easy to take. I am more than glad to recommend them."

"Clean up the bowels and keep them clean," is the advice of all physicians, because they realize the danger resulting from habitual constipation. Do not delay too long, but begin proper curative measures.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are a new remedy for this old complaint, and a great improvement over the cathartics you have been using in the past. They taste like candy and work like a charm. A trial will convince you.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory after trial, return the box to your druggist and he will return your money.
